Super Sleuths They Uncover Funds To Help Hemophiliacs

By NANCY PICK

A man sat cupping a handful of blood, purplish drops staining the clean, white tablecloths in the Knights of Columbus hall. He collapsed. Seconds later he was dead.

Fortunately, it was just good Friday night theater. In a creative fund-raising move, the New England Hemophilia Assn. sponsored a murder mystery for the audience to solve.

Plenty of stage blood flowed that evening. "That's the gorriest thing I've ever seen," exclaimed Patricia Wells of Madison ave., staring at the red-stained shirt of a stabbed character.

Yet, for the Hemophilia Assn. blood is no mere game.

Jane Baghai, of Wellesley, played the lascivious niece of an heiress in the murder mystery. At home, she has two sons, ages 3 and 6, with severe hemophilia. Born with blood clotting capacity far below normal levels, they will never outgrow the disease.

Contact sports are taboo for her sons, but they can still climb trees. "The days of the padded rooms are over," she said. Today, children born with hemophilia "try to live free lives." And, she said, she must constantly put people at ease about their lifestyles.

Treatment has grown far more sophisticated during the past 25 years, as scientists isolated blood clotting agents and made them available to hemophiliacs. But controlling the disease can still cost thousands of dollars a year.

Surprisingly, said Baghai, the condition is not always hereditary. It mostly affects men and there are at least 20,000 Americans suffering from the disease. In Baghai's family, there was no known history of hemophilia.

Contrary to popular myth, minor cuts and scrapes are not severe problems for hemophiliacs, says the association. And, although they may bleed longer than others, their blood does not flow out any faster.

More frightening for hemophiliacs is internal bleeding, which may start without apparent cause. And, over

Finance Board Fills Police Budget Gap

By NANCY PICK

The Finance Committee voted unanimously to plug to $15,500 hole in the fiscal 1985 police budget Monday night, using money from the town's reserve fund.

The deficit was due mostly to tuition payments for a police "self-improvement" program, which encourages to further their education. Although $5,000 was budgeted for such programs, $18,603 was spent.

According to Finance Committee Chairman Eric Bradley, tuition aid was guaranteed in the police labor contract and all officers were eligible. Without any controls on enrollment, he said, the program overran its 1985 budget.

"Original information at budget preparation time indicated two men would be involved [in the program] for the fiscal year," wrote Police Chief John P. McHugh in a letter to the town manager, "however eight additional officers enrolled and participated, thus creating the deficit."

Bradley said the Finance Committee "generally concluded this [program] was an area that would need some work and research." He said the two-year police labor contract is due for renegotiation this winter.

Police officers who earn college credit or degrees also earn salary increases. For example, pay goes up $1,400 a year for an officer who earns a bachelor's degree. An officer with an associate degree who earns half the credits necessary for a bachelor's degree receives a $300 a year bonus.

The police budget also overran its budget by $1,204 for telephone bills and by $1,641 for in-state travel. However, some of the deficit was offset by budget surpluses for car and equipment maintenance, auto supplies, light and power charges, and other budget items.

According to Finance Committee members, it's not unusual for the police department to request reserve funds at the end of the year. However, the amount requested this year was larger than normal.

In other Monday night action, Selectmen noted that preliminary applications for the town's liquor store license are due July 15. Applications are available at Town Hall on Mt. Vernon st.

Selectmen postponed a licensing decision for a Moonwalk at the Chamber of Commerce Flea Market, scheduled for late September.

Selectman Mark Lombardi said he wants more information about the Moonwalk, an air-filled trampoline designed for children.

"In my estimation, a flea market is a flea market," said Lombardi. "If we put Moonwalks there, who knows what's going to happen. I can see that every weekend is going to be carnival day in Winchester."

The board plans to invite the Chamber of Commerce to give a fuller explanation of the request before voting on the license.

Robert Miley of Elmwood ave. told Selectmen that downtown crosswalks are unsafe. He said signs should be posted on church st., telling motorists to slow down before the rotary.

At the Church st. intersection with the rotary, he said, the traffic light doesn't allow enough time to cross the street. Said Miley, who walks with a cane, "You can push the button, go half-way across, and by that time [the light] turns green again..."

"I don't care if you were the best track runner there was, you just couldn't get across the street safely."

Selectmen said they would have the traffic light inspected and repaired if necessary.

Selectmen re-appointed Ellen Spencer to the town's Historical Commission for a three-year term. Virginia Day was also appointed to a three-year term, and Joan Benson was appointed to a one-year term.

Also, a board voted in Patricia Skehan to a post on the town's Council on Youth. A second candidate, John Henriques, received two votes in the first round of voting. However, to avoid a stalemate, two Selectmen switched their support to Skehan.

Selectman Judith Muggia abstained from voting, on the grounds that Skehan is employed by Muggia's husband.

Also interviewed Monday night were Evelyn Trageser, for the Town Forest Committee, and Domenic Testa and James B. L. Lane for the Capital Planning Committee. No appointments were made.

Selectmen granted permission for Albani Development Corp. to block off through traffic on Elmwood ave. for two days starting July 10, and again for two days starting July 20.

The board also gave contractors permission to park a 25-ton crane on Thompson st. for two hours Tuesday morning in order to install air conditioners at Dover Grille Restaurant.

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer said the town's Fair Housing Committee will examine Winchester's anti-discrimination guidelines for housing. The committee will then report to the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, he said.

Teens Can Cash In At The Job Bank

By MARY ANN MCCARTHY

Allison Fennell is saving for a trip to California. Jude Capachietti wants a motorboat engine. And Heather Hoffman will buy herself a car.

All three teenagers will accomplish their goals with help from the Winchester Youth Center Job Bank.

"These teenagers and many others from Winchester are offering their services through the Job Bank this summer."

"The kids do housework, yard work, babysitting, parties," explained Youth Center Director Darcy Fitzgerald.

"They work for senior citizens who can't otherwise afford help and like to have kids around. And they also work for businesses," she said.

The Job Bank provides those between ages 13 and 18 jobs which vary from one-time to part-time to (rarely) full-time.

Babysitting, house cleaning and lawn work account for more than half the jobs available, Fitzgerald said. Salaries are negotiated by employer and employee.

Jude Capachietti of Grove st. built a small landscaping business with help from the Job Bank.

"I just went down there one day and got two or three houses," he explained. "And once every three weeks I went back to see if they had any more."

"Now, I have my own little business," said Capachietti, who credits 10 of his 15 clients to the Job Bank.

Since his first jobs in early spring raking leaves, mowing lawns and trimming hedges, Capachietti has spent $230 of his profits on a lawnmower and joined with a business partner, Chris Herlihy.

The Winchester High School junior said he works five to seven hours weekly and earns about $100.

Allison Fennell signed up with the Job Bank last June, hoping to land her first job ever.

"When I first started I was 15, so it was hard to find a permanent job," said Fennell of Sargent rd., who babysat and cleaned houses for two months.

In August, the Job Bank received a job order from Baskin-Robbins ice cream parlor, and Fennell got the permanent job she'd been looking for.

"My schedule varies a lot," said Fennell, a junior at Winchester High School. "I work 15 to 25 or 30 hours a week in the summer but a lot less during the school year."

"I like it. It's not too difficult, and I like the people I'm working with," she said.

Heather Hoffman of Grove st. registered with the Job Bank before school ended. Two weeks ago she worked her first day ever.

"I babysat for Mrs. Tempesta. She has a little baby," Hoffman said. "I work six hours a week for her now."

Hoffman, who was set to take her learner's permit test today, is saving for a car. "My mother is going to put $400 toward it, and I'll buy a used one," she said.

"I plan to possibly get another job babysitting, but I like to have certain times off — like Friday and Saturday

Heather Hoffman babysits for the Tempesta family's baby in Winchester. She found work through the Recreation Department's Job Bank.

Man Struck By Bolt Is Slowly Recovering

The brother of an Allston man struck by lightning last week is "hoping and praying" that his brother will recover soon.

17-year-old Timothy Daly, who along with his brother, Peter, 19, and neighbor James Gibbons were struck while mowing a Winchester lawn, says doctors expect it will be some time before Peter fully regains consciousness.

Peter was listed in "fair and stable" condition Monday at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, according to a hospital spokesman.

Timothy said in a telephone interview Monday that his brother was "not recognizing people too well," but that he is "improving slowly."

The Daly brothers and James Gibbons, 20, all of Allston, were struck during a violent thunderstorm as they were mowing a lawn at 30 Amberwood dr.

Both the younger Daly and Gibbons were released from hospitals last Wednesday, after doctors treated them for shock and burns.

Timothy had been transferred from Choate Hospital in Woburn to Boston Children's Hospital, before being released on Wednesday.

Gibbons, who suffered burns on his feet and hand, was released from Winchester Hospital on Wednesday. The lightning struck him on the hand and left his body through his ankle. Like the younger Daly, he is not expected to suffer any permanent injuries.

On Monday, Timothy said he had visited his brother, but that Peter "didn't really know me. He's been in and out of consciousness."

The younger Daly said he is "hoping and praying Pete will be OK," adding that his whole family is deeply worried about his older brother.

The trio was helping the Daly's father, Timothy Sr., on a landscaping job when the accident took place. The elder Daly was unavailable for comment at press time.

Two Men Nabbed In Cocaine Bust

Two Winchester men were scheduled to appear in Woburn District Court July 3, after Woburn police arrested them in connection with cocaine charges.

Vincent J. Coates III of 5 Nassau dr. and Gerald A. Malloy of 25 Baldwin st. each were charged with cocaine possession. Malloy was also charged with intent to distribute, according to police.

According to reports, police inspectors William Jewer and William Coakley spotted a car about midnight Saturday during a narcotics surveillance.

The car, observed near Skyview lane, Woburn, had three people in it. Both Coates and Malloy were released on personal recognizance, pending their court appearance.

Local Aid Meeting Set

Senator Richard A. Kraus, co-chairman of the Local Aid Commission, announced that the second meeting of the commission will be today at the State House in the Taxation Hearing Room No. 234.

This meeting will be an educational briefing on the current local aid formulas. Representatives from Administration and Finance, the Department of Education, and the Department of Revenue will be present to answer commission members' questions.

At the first commission meeting a tentative plan of action was decided which included first and foremost the hiring of a research/staff director.

"If we're going to have an effective impact on the next distribution of local aid we must get a strong research and analysis program underway taking full advantage of July and August," Kraus noted. "We need to hire a research director virtually immediately."

The mandate of the commission runs through December 1986. Kraus said he hopes to have concrete changes to propose in the formulas for the next distribution (for fiscal '87) and to have a full-blown legislative proposal by the '88 distribution.

The commission also hopes to schedule hearings in July in which the public can draw attention to perceived problems.

Jazz At Cloister Garden Is Haunting

By BRIAN MILAUSKAS
Special To The Star

This summer music lovers in Winchester will delight in the Parish of the Epiphany's Cloister Garden concert series. In its 16th season, these informal concerts attract well over 100 patrons to their performances, with all profits benefitting the parish's music program.

Last week The Jeff Harrington Jazz Quartet performed jazz hits from the 30s, 40s, and 50s. Foul weather unfortunately forced the concert indoors. The sleepy, haunting, romantic music filling Hadley Hall was warmly received.

The group's program of timeless favorites, such as "Misty," was nicely punctuated with departures from the jazz standards, such as "Boplicity" and "Misterioso."

The quartet has been together for almost two years. Their performance was impressive, with an exceptional performance on bass by Stuart Zimny.

Jeff Harrington, featured on saxophone, teaches in the Winchester Music Program. Bob Cristman performed on drums while Dan Weiner complemented the group on his guitar.

Audience-requested encores attested to the quality of the evening's entertainment.

Two more concerts are planned for this year's series. On Thursday, July 11, Chris Brooks and Arni Cheatham will appear on guitar and sax with a program offering classical, contemporary, jazz and ethnic selections.

Two weeks later on Thursday, July 25, the Lenox Brass Quintet will delight audiences with the final Cloister Garden concert of 1985.

All concerts begin at 8:30 p.m. at the Parish of the Epiphany, 70 Church St., Winchester, in the courtyard garden. In the event of rain the concert is moved indoors to adjoining Hadley Hall.

Tickets are available at the door: $4 for adults and $3 for students under 21. Free refreshments are served at intermission.

The Winchester Public Library's "Directory of Area Services" can help everyone find information that is fast and accurate. Check them out at the library and at The Winchester Star office ...

SENIOR SCENE

Strawberry Festival

Winchester's new Town Manager, W. Chadwick Maurer, received a hearty reception at the June Strawberry Festival held at the Jenks Senior Center. As Mansfield's former Planning Director and later as Town Manager, he brings to Winchester a deep awareness of the needs of seniors, particularly in the area of affordable housing.

In addition to enjoying Helen Hodgdon's old-fashioned strawberry shortcake, seniors viewed the numerous creative needle work items made by Jane Norberg's Crafts and Stitchery Class.

A grant from the Winchester Arts Council funded this senior activity. The items will be available at the October 4-5 Fall Fiesta Fair.

July Activities

Day trips and other jaunts are on the upswing during this season, but for those manning the homefront, the Jenks Senior Center offers a variety of activities.

(June Cannon's exercise classes are held on Monday (9 to 9:40 a.m.) and Wednesday and Friday (9:30 to 10:15 a.m.), while Thursday offers the Book Club (10 to noon) and bridge/whist games (12:30 to 3 p.m.). The Keep Well Clinic will be held only on Thursday, July 18 (9:30 to 11:30 a.m.).

For the outdoor enthusiasts, Mal and Claire Masters conduct their popular canoe excursions on nearby rivers and lakes. Telephone the center for details on any of these programs.

Mark your calendar for Friday, July 19, for the showing of that all-time musical favorite movie "Roberta" with Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. Jerome Kern's ever-popular "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" is but one of the great songs in this 50-year old Hollywood classic. Movies start at 1 p.m. with refreshments at intermission.

Letters Policy

Letters to The Editor are welcome on matters of interest to local readers. Deadline for submission is 4 p.m. on Monday. Letters should be typed, and limited to 250 words. Names will be withheld upon request. Anonymous letters will not be published.

At a recent Jenks Senior Center exhibit, Rena Kazazian and Ann Clampani admire the handwork from a Crafts and Stitchery class.

Winchester Seniors Assn. President Leonore Rich greets Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer prior to his meeting with the seniors at the June Strawberry Festival.

Court Wizard Rests His Case

Prosecutor Crawford Retires

By NANCY PICK

Legend has it that Andrew Crawford's chair at Woburn District Court is sacred.

Crawford has sat there for 15 years as Winchester's police prosecutor. Strangers who plunk themselves down are told, "Hey! That's Crawford's chair!"

But time changes all things. After a long and respected career, Lt. Crawford is retiring from the force in July. He must leave by his 65th birthday.

"The time went by very fast," he says.

Crawford likes his work. In fact, he rarely misses a day. After almost 35 years on the force, (marked by six golden stripes on his sleeve), he has 421 sick days due him. But he refuses to take time off.

That's surprising, considering the stresses of his job. "You're always competing," he says. "You always have an adversary that's a law school graduate. You're always thinking. 'It's a challenge,'" he says. "That's what I like."

Crawford is a strong-looking man, broad-shouldered, with a crop of wavy graying hair and kind blue eyes. He looks good in his uniform. And he has a fatherly way about him.

For a guy who aims to collect fines and send people to jail, Crawford is surprisingly nice. Last week he sat in his niche at the Lynch School police station, telling a taller how to deal with a reservoir trespassing fine. There is no rancor in his voice, and he smiles often.

In the corner stands evidence of similar crimes: 11 confiscated fishing poles.

"I try to accommodate people. I know people have to work and take time off for court." Often, he says, cases can be settled by plea bargaining, keeping them out of court.

Crawford says he takes a compassionate stance for a first-time offender, when a minor crime could smudge someone's record forever. But one break is the limit.

"I give them one bite of the apple, no more."

But he doesn't pussyfoot around. He believes in the importance of law and order. And in court like everywhere else, he says, "You like to win."

"I enjoy trying a case, researching it, arguing before the judge," he says. "And I've had pretty good luck. In fact I think I've got the respect of a lot of lawyers up there for trying cases."

At one point he considered going to law school, but, he says, it was "too late in life to start it all over again."

Still, he knows his stuff. In Winchester, he keeps the rest of the police force abreast of new laws. His fills his files with new police procedures: BB guns, homicide, parking, school locker searches, blood tests for drunk drivers.

Heavy tomes of Massachusetts Supreme Court decisions line his office bookshelf. Crawford also analyzes new criminal laws before they go into effect, hot off the legislative presses. His training letters are sent to police forces across the state.

Despite his many responsibilities and on-the-job pressure, Crawford's blood pressure remains normal and he looks younger than his years.

When police first started taking stress tests five years ago Crawford was 60 — he went through the whole battery at Winchester Hospital, from the EKG to the treadmill.

"I came out 39 years old," he says, beaming.

He still goes to a Burlington health club three times a week to lift weights, bike, do situps.

His health and stamina might just come from working the land. Born on his parents' Burlington farm, Crawford grew spinach, lettuce, beets, peppers, tomatoes, turnips, squash — a little of everything.

He worked the land until he was 30, when Route 128 chopped right through the fertile rows. Soon afterwards, condominiums sprang up where the vegetables once grew.

So Crawford decided to take a stab at becoming a policeman, because several of his neighbors were officers. With World War II veterans taking many of the jobs, (farmers didn't have to fight in the war) he had a tough time getting on the Winchester force, where he and his family had moved.

School had never inspired Crawford. But after a year and a half on the force, he got a chance to go the state police academy in Framingham.

In those days, police schooling wasn't mandatory. Other officers told him, "You're crazy to go. Look at all the time you're losing on detail." (Police $2 an hour at the time, he says.)

But Crawford got hooked on studying law.

Now he teaches at the police academy part-time, specializing in case preparation and procedure.

Crawford isn't devoted solely to his job. For 42 years he has been married to Norma (O'Hearn), a Winchester native. And he shares his Water street home with his divorced daughter, Diane Wentworth, and her three kids.

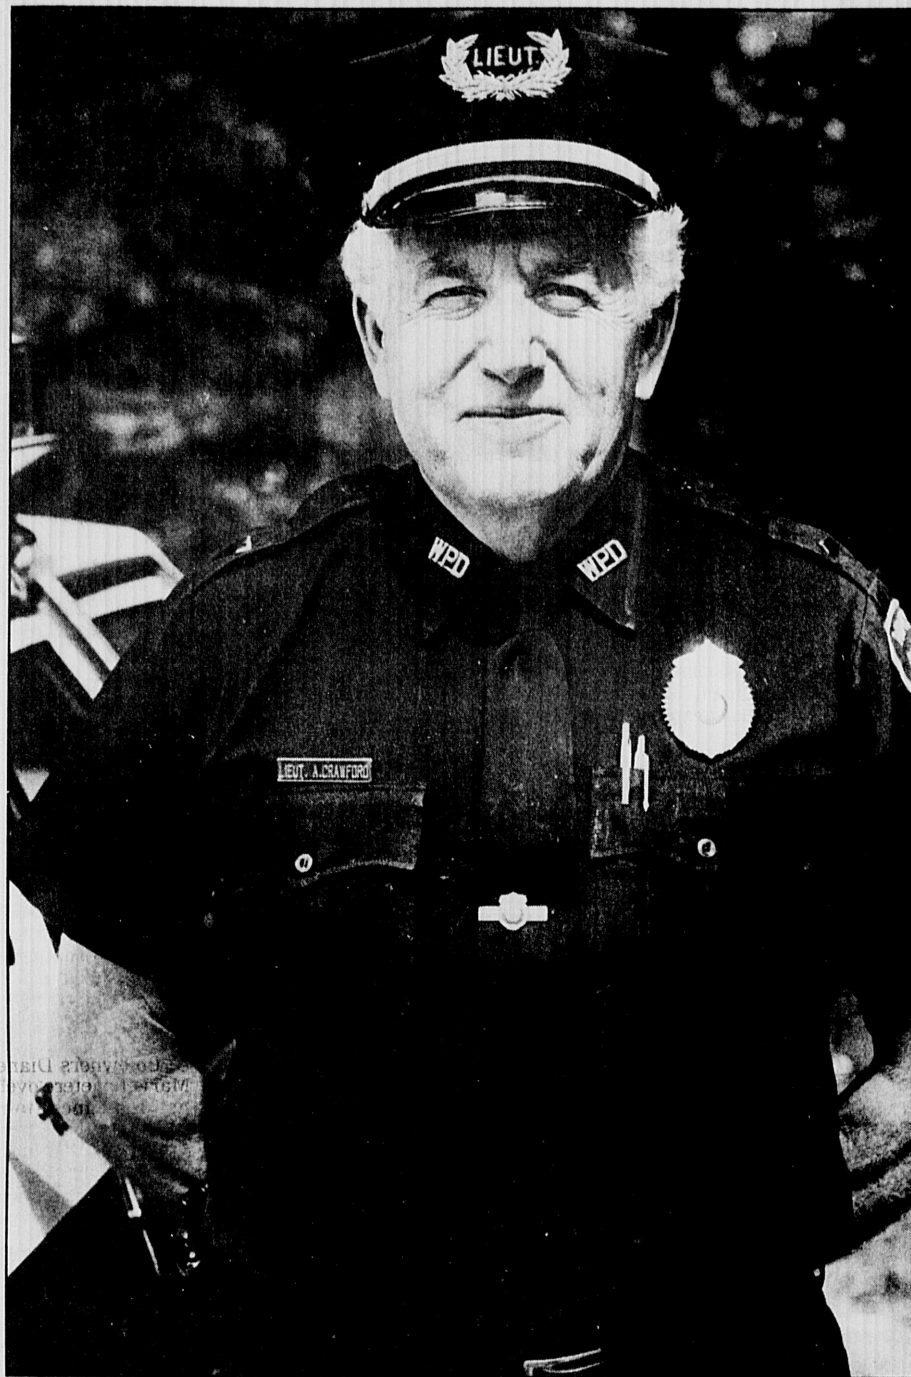

The setup "keeps me young," he says. The children are always bugging him with requests: "Gramp, let's go fishing, let's hike up Horn Pond Brook Mountain."

Crawford has no special plans for retirement. He says he leaves with mixed emotions. "I like the job I'm doing, but I think I've done it long enough." He says he'll probably for a job as a police consultant, or beef up his teaching schedule.

Yet he's a little afraid people will forget about him, even after his many years on the force.

After a month, he says, people will look at his chair and ask, "What was that other guy's name that used to sit there?"

Crawford likes his work.
In fact, he rarely misses a day. After almost 35 years on the force, he has 421 sick days due him.

Lt. Andrew Crawford, a veteran on the Winchester Police Dept., will retire later this month from his job as chief prosecutor.

Retiring prosecutor Lt. Andrew Crawford stands by the desk he has called his own for many years at Woburn District Court.

COMMENT

Winchester Kernels

Well, the Fourth of July is tomorrow, and already the pops and fizzles have been echoing through the neighborhoods.

It's hard to blame folks for wanting to put a little spark into their holiday. But it's scary to think of those who may not be thinking too much of the safety factor.

There have been several tragic accidents in recent memory — some involving folks who have worked with black powder explosives for years.

If celebrators are lucky enough not to be hurt, there's always legal penalties. Not even sparklers are legal in Massachusetts.

And besides the $1,000 fine, there's a one-year jail term that comes with the use, sale and possession of all fireworks . . .

'Want to mention something that was brought to our attention by the Plunkett family. Seems among our list of awards and scholarship recipients, we missed a particularly poignant one.

The James E. Plunkett Art Scholarship was started last year in memory of Jim, who died in a fatal car crash May 21, 1984. It was begun by his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schultz of Winchester.

The chosen winner this year is Petr Kyn. We hope his talent will be a source of pride for all and comfort to the Plunkett family . . .

On another note, we have again received a letter to the editor that was not signed. Please, folks, we can't print unsigned letters. All we have to know is who wrote it, and we can withhold the name.

This one dealt with the attire of one of the prom goers this year. Everyone's entitled to his or her opinion, but at least let us know where the opinion comes from!

If ya' got the guts to write it — have the guts to sign your name . . .

'See where the former Lynch's Market is getting quite a facelift lately. From the signs of things, looks like some kind of fancy deli is going in there. Wonder what the rest of the food folks around town are thinking . . .

Speaking of renovations, isn't it strange to see an empty space where The Italian Fisherman used to be on Washington st.?

It hardly took any time at all for the wreckers to raze the two buildings that were there. Meantime, it sure is nice to see the other side of St. Mary's Church. You can actually see the stained glass windows and gorgeous architecture. . .

★ ★ ★ ★

'Know of one couple who's making a hobby out of walking all the neighborhoods in town, one by one, and marking them off on their map. Sounds like a pleasant pastime; there are some mighty pretty gardens out there. Some folks on Madison ave. have a fence full of roses, and the Spears family on Main st. should be hanging out the sign inviting folks to come see their spectacular lilies any day now. Winchester won a prize as one of the country's most beautiful communities in the 1930s — wonder how we'd stack up today . . . ?

Life In A Fishbowl Doesn't Always Go Swimmingly

In some lines of work, you're on stage all the time. Take TV reporters, for example: they're always on stage.

It's their lot in life, every night on the Six O'Clock News, to endure the unblinking scrutiny of Instantcam, and the millions of us in the peanut gallery, looking over Instantcam's shoulder.

We sit in the snug privacy of our living rooms and watch a dirty east wind lift the thinning hair of some poor newsmen reporting live and on-the-scene.

We eyeball the lucious ladies of the Morning Updates and remark to ourselves how they're developing double chins.

We see them, but they don't see us. We can say whatever we like. It's fun.

What isn't fun, I suppose, is to be one of these people.

The TV big-shots are protected

some, of course, since they're actually miles away from us and our steamy little parlors — cool, remote as Antarctica, and safe from our niggling remarks.

The ones to really feel for are the ones who get directly eyeballed, one-on-one, by a public hooked on personal scrutiny.

Take airline hostesses. Everyone feels free to give them the once-over.

We crane our necks like famished birdbabies at the start of each flight to watch them read the gothic descriptions of what we should all do if the cabin loses pressure, the captain starts sobbing over the intercom, and angels appear playing harps in the cloud formations.

I always take time out to catch their little ballet up there, as they place oxygen masks over their powdered noses and turning, point in graceful arabesques to various hidden chutes and ladders.

The instructions themselves. I couldn't care less about it; it's the ladies giving them that holds my attention.

The same thing is true for undertakers. I've never been to a funeral where the eyes of three-quarters of those assembled weren't on that guy.

Maybe it's the relative rarity of black suits that does it, or old and literary memories of young Oliver Twist's first boss, Mr. Sowerberry. We all watch the pro at a funeral, whatever the reason.

But the folks who suffer most from public scrutiny are neither the reporters, stewardesses, or funeral directors in our lives.

The ones who really get eyeballed are the teachers.

I know this for a fact: I spent seven mind-expanding years as a high-school teacher; I remember what it was like.

You walk in the first day of class and 30 adolescents grin up at you with the cool eyes of naked evaluation. Some lob amused glances across the room to each other or start an instant whispered analysis.

It's the cross of most teachers, of course, to be proficient in lip-reading, so you know right away what your verdict is.

Now, these kids you face every day are all seated; so naturally, they figure, they're the audience. You're not, they figure, so you're the show.

They lean out into the aisles to catch the total picture, stand in the back rows — come up and finger your jewelry if they've a mind to.

Your average classroom teacher withstands scrutiny of a kind that even Elvis was never subjected to by his fans; that Jesus Christ has not endured in all the centuries given over to speculation about his message and mission; that ET himself wouldn't experience if he came down and dwelt among us.

You walk in on any given day, and here's what you're treated to: "Hey! like your shoes, Miz Marotta."

"What happened to the brown ones with the holes in the bottoms?"

"All RIGHT! New shoes! What've ya got — NEW SHOES?"

"Old Miz Marotta, gettin' all fixed up!"

And this goes on for seven class periods, 185 wonderful days of the year.

You want to find someone to feel sorry for in his fishbowl existence, someone to sympathize with in her role as public entertainer? Look no further than your neighborhood teacher.

But, please — out of simple kindness — don't look too long.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Resident Backs Town Liquor Store

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Regarding the Liquor License: Why not have a town-owned liquor store? What better way to raise revenue? I know a faction will cry — "Leave it to the free enterprise system." — "Well, the fact is the liquor license usually goes to the person with political pull and always will. The state of New Hampshire and Maine solve that to a large degree. If it requires legislative action, that's what we have legislators for. Town Meeting action? Let's have it.

Let's not miss this opportunity to raise bucks. Believe me, if I thought this could be done on the open and free marketplace, I would feel different.

Reader Discusses Religion

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Setting aside the issue of prejudice against non-Judeo-Christians coming into the United States today, the Johnians (June 20) have incorrectly reconstructed the facts in the Alabama moment of silence case.

Mr. Jaffree, an agnostic, had three children in elementary school in Mobile, where spoken prayer sessions were conducted daily. Though Mr. Jaffree complained to the school that his children's First Amendment rights were being violated, he got no results until he sued. When the case reached the Supreme Court, the Court found Alabama's 1981 moment of silence law unconstitutional because of the added words "voluntary prayer."

At first glance it might appear, as the Johnians write, that "one man's desire overruled the desires of an entire state [to have a moment of silent prayer in its public schools]." But, in reality, our national constitution has at its base the principle of neutrality toward religion.

Alabama's public schools had been openly testing this principle since 1982 by allowing vocal prayer. It was the state legislature that violated the principle of neutrality toward religion. Mr. Jaffree merely pointed out the inconsistency.

So, if the Johnians want to discuss the basis of freedom to worship in this country, they would do well to look to the United States Constitution, not to the Christian faith. Throughout history, acts of terrorism, inhumanity, and persecution have been committed in the name of religion. Having a written charter of laws on which to base such rights seems to be the saner way to go.

McCall Mother Applauds School

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

"Opportunities for excellence" is the name of the game at McCall Junior High School. What a treasure Winchester has in the talented, dedicated and generous staff and administration there.

Although it's impossible to mention everyone, as an eighth-grade parent some outstanding events shine forth. This spring Wally Gagel, Mark Jacobs and Marion Quinn liberally shared their truly professional talents providing 75 deservedly proud young people the thrill of presenting a first rate "Annie" to our community. Eugene Bouley and Neil Gillis — the cave men — lead eighth graders to Washington, D.C., and on expeditions ranging from upper New York State caves to the Nahant seashore studying geology first hand.

Ken Tully has left profound impressions with an overview of the criminal justice system, and life on the other side of the law with visits to the Middlesex County courthouse. Language teachers provide dramatic, vivid teaching, mathematics, art, and English thrive, and all under the responsive, perceptive and able direction of Principal Evander French.

As a philosophic "believer" in American public school education as a major strength of our nation, I feel very fortunate that my children live in Winchester and are able to attend a school as outstanding as McCall Junior High.

Svelte By Suggestion

BY SETH BORENSTEIN

There are three types of food: good, OK, and diet. For the past few weeks, I have avoided type number one, and feasted — if you can call it that — on type number three.

After trying on some clothes, I found that, like the universe, my waist is expanding. If part of me has to expand, I'd rather it be my height, not my width. But it seems I have no choice but to try to reverse the trend — which may be as easy as corking up the universe.

However, that is not the way to diet. The proper diet has a good, positive attitude about losing weight.

I love dieting.

Some people like a nice gooey hot fudge sundae with chocolate ice cream. That's far too bland for me. I'll take carrots anytime.

I know of people who love greasy onion rings with their lunch. That's far too boring. I'll take carrots anytime.

I have friends who cannot resist potato salad, French fries, potato chips, or anything that used to be a potato. I also like to eat things that grew in the ground — carrots.

You can keep your rice pilaf, steak, lima beans, beer, cheesecake, pizza, chocolate, pastries, bread, pretzels, baked beans, baklava and puddings. I'll take carrots.

When I'm sick of carrots — and who could be sick of such a spicy, sweet vegetable? — I get daring and eat sunflower seeds. For lunch, there's always yogurt and cottage cheese; who needs macaroni and cheese, or sweet-and-sour eggplant?

I also love watching my friends who eat normally as they slowly ingest hot fudge sundaes.

As they smile and wipe hot fudge from their lips, I think: "Gee, I'm so lucky that I love to eat non-fattening, neat carrots. Hot fudge looks so disgusting." The next time you order chocolate pudding, call me over so I can gloat, while watching you suffer.

While I'm listing the things I love, I also love exercise. I cannot think of a more enjoyable way to spend an hour than sweating like a pig and running around the same place over and over.

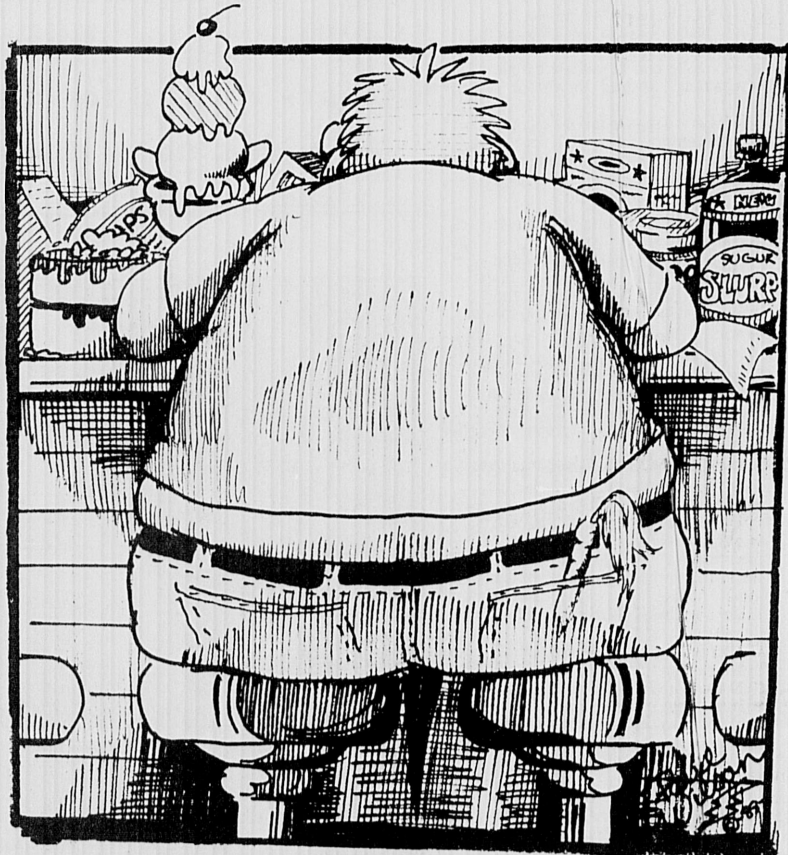

With entertainment like that, who needs movies or theater?

Another reason I exercise is because I especially love pain — doesn't everyone? To me, Runner's High is when I double over with a cramp in my stomach and dead thighs.

There are other things I love: drinking castor oil, going to the dentist, getting a tetanus shot, stepping on glass, skinning my knee, and cutting my face while shaving.

As they say, dieting is only a matter of positive attitude. If I think that dieting is fun, I'll enjoy it and lose weight easier.

I feel thinner already. So maybe I should stop trying to diet. Having a positive attitude is awfully difficult on the taste buds.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

This week's column records local legislators' votes on roll calls for the week of June 24-28. Roll calls for any weekend sessions will be included in next week's report.

MARIJUANA (S 2340) — The Senate, 21-8, rejected an amendment allowing the use of marijuana in a therapeutic research program to help chemotherapy, glaucoma, and asthma patients. The amendment would allow the bill to take effect only if it is approved by the Massachusetts Medical Society.

Many amendment supporters opposed the bill and claimed it would lead to legalization of marijuana. Opponents said this was just another delaying tactic to defeat a bill which has many safeguards and can help suffering patients.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it. Sen. Richard Kraus voted no.

SUSPEND RULES (S 2381) — The Senate 29-8, favored but failed to gain the four-fifths vote necessary to suspend the Senate rule requiring that the proposed $182 million Senate version of the fiscal 1985 supplemental budget be in print for five days before the Senate can consider it.

Supporters of rule suspension argued the budget must be considered immediately because Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) checks can only be mailed if the budget is approved. Opponents said members have not had time to study the budget.

A "Yea" vote is for rule suspension. A "Nay" vote is against it. Sen. Richard Kraus voted yes.

STATE AUTO INSURANCE (H 3324) — The House, 134-18, rejected a bill establishing a special commission to study the possibility of establishing an auto insurance company owned and operated by the state.

Supporters argued the proposal has merit and should at least be investigated. Opponents said the state should not get involved in selling auto insurance.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it. Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh voted no.

AUTO INSURANCE PROFITS (H 1754) — The House, 79-65, refused to reconsider its earlier defeat of a bill reducing from 9 to 7 percent, the point after which mutual auto insurance companies must return a dividend to their policyholders.

Supporters of the bill said lowering the point to 7 percent will make it likelier that insurance companies will be required to share excess profits.

Opponents said 9 percent was a reasonable figure, and noted insurance companies are already heavily regulated.

A "Yea" vote is for reconsidering the bill's defeat. A "Nay" vote is against the bill. Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh voted no.

NOVENA TO MARY, QUEEN OF ALL HEARTS

O Mary, Queen of All Hearts, Advocate of the most hopeless cases. Mother most pure, most compassionate. Mother of Divine Love, full of divine light, we confide to your care the favors which we ask of you today.

Consider our misery, our tears, our interior trials and sufferings! We know that you can help us through the merits of your Divine Son, Jesus. We promise, if our prayers are heard, to spread your glory by making you known under the title of MARY, QUEEN OF ALL HEARTS, Queen of the Universe.

Grant, we beseech you, hear our prayers, for every day you give us so many proofs of your love and your power of intercession to heal both body and soul.

We hope against all hope. Ask Jesus to cure us, pardon us, and grant us final perseverance.

O Mary, Queen of All Hearts, help us, we have confidence in you. (3 times).

In Campaign

Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council has topped the $1.9 million mark in its $2.5 million Capital Campaign. Funds raised in the campaign are being used to restore and renovate council camps and community centers in Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

The campaign was publicly launched in March, 1984 and is scheduled to run through January 1986. It is the first capital fundraiser of its kind in the 70 year history of Girl Scouting in Massachusetts, and has received the support of corporations, foundations, small businesses, Girl Scout families and friends.

Boston Gas President John Bacon and Scandinavian Design President Judy George are serving as General campaign co-chairs. "The support of our fund-raising drive — from corporations to Girl Scout families — has been tremendous," Bacon said.

Construction has been completed at Camp Virginia in Boston, Ma. — the first site to be renovated with campaign dollars. Work on this site includes the addition of new washstands, program pavilions and camp units. The waterfront has also been expanded to allow for larger boating and swimming areas.

Other sites to receive campaign funding include Cedar Hill Outdoor Center in Waltham, Camp Winnetaska in Asland, Camp Favorite in Brewster, Camp Menotomy in Meredith, NH and Camp Wabasso in Bradford, NH.

Our Readers Come A Dime A Dozen

When you're looking to reach people in Arlington, Winchester, and Belmont, consider Century Newspapers.

Each week over 84,000 readers have our papers mailed to their homes or buy a copy at the newsstand.

In these towns you'll find more people reading our papers than any other publication. Period.

And though you're reaching some of the most affluent readers in the area, you won't have to use too much of your own expendable income in the process.

For example, this 4 column by 10½ inch advertisement would cost $705.60 to reach our 84,000 readers. That's less than one cent per reader.

Summer Sachems In Action

While one player leaps to catch the ball, another barely gets his foot on the base during play Saturday at Manchester Field. The game was called off after the second inning because of rain.

Waiting, Running, Waiting

By STEVE NORTON

I had not especially relished this trip I was on, and now, frustrated by a cancelled flight in trying to reach Colorado Springs, I stared, fuming, out the picture windows at the jets landing at Denver International. Outside, nature itself was fuming, trying to ignite a storm in the sky.

It was to be a weekend of difficult decisions and indecipherable omens. As I stood watching the late-afternoon sky, I tried to decide whether to go on a run from the airport, with all the confusion that entailed, or take my chances as a wait-listed passenger on the next flight to Colorado Springs.

If I made the next flight, I would arrive almost as originally scheduled and run when I got there. If I didn't get on, though, I would have to wait, and possibly wait again, and maybe again, and in the waiting process my afternoon run would have dissolved.

I decided to take my chances at waiting anyway, and wandered to the coffee shop to kill a few minutes and cool my temper before heading to the gate.

No matter how often I fly, I never seem to remember air travel's ability to be inconsistent and enigmatic.

I headed to the gate and handed the airline attendant my ticket. He added my name to a waiting list that was longer than the runway. Discouraged, I never-the-less decided to give patience a chance. I waited.

Fifteen minutes before flight time, the announcement was made that, due to a late-arriving plane, the flight I was waiting to board would also be late. Now I was waiting for a plane I might not get on — that was late to boot. I was frustrated and fuming again. I decided, if nothing else, to run 10 miles that day.

There is something unnerving about trying to change clothes in an airport rest room. The stall is never quite big enough. There is no seat covering to sit on; there's no clean place to step bare footed as you're changing shoes and socks. And all that inconvenience costs a mere dime.

Worst of all, though, being a paranoid at heart, I kept imagining that someone with a police badge would burst in on me in the middle of things and scream, "All right, what's going on in here?"

As I sat awkwardly trying to get my shoes and socks on, I imagined the words I would say to the man who would certainly show up soon to make the arrest.

"How dare you burst in when my pants are down."

Avoiding that embarrassment, I (Please turn to WAITING - Page 16)

The Runner's Eye

By Steve Norton

Dear Readers,

I have received quite a bit of mail concerning my co-writer, seventh grader Amy Collins.

Amy is years ahead of herself in maturity, personality and writing style. And, not only that, she's a pleasure to be around. She'll be contributing periodically to the "Runner's Eye."

Dear Runner's Eye,

What is a suggested method of building the upper body without weights?

J. B. Dee, Lexington. Try pushups, sit ups and chinups. Do two sets of 15 pushups, three sets of 20 situps, two sets of 12 chinups.

Swimming is also an excellent way to develop upper body strength. The water cuts as resistance.

Good Luck

Summer Sachems Continue Despite March Imitation

By BILL LITELL
Special To The Star

Summer is supposed to be warm, right? A time for beaches, barbecues, and baseball.

Well, in last week's imitation of March, not too many people were going to the beach (except maybe ice fishermen) or holding barbecues (perhaps to keep warm). But down at Manchester Field, the Winchester Summer Sachems were still playing America's favorite pastime.

Unfortunately, the weather apparently affected the boys on June 25, as their fielding was frostbitten in a demoralizing 5-4 loss to Stoneham. The team showed signs of rebounding last Saturday against Tewksbury, but after two innings — with Winchester ahead 3-0 — the game was postponed because of rain. (The game will be restarted at a later date.)

Against Stoneham, though, the team had a bad night.

For a time, things looked good for the Sachems. In the third inning, they had scored 4 runs with no outs and were on the verge of breaking the game open.

But with runners on first and second, the Stoneham pitcher snagged a hard ground ball up the middle, and began what should have been a double play. Because of a base-running error, it became a triple play.

End of rally

Still, strong pitching from Sean McElhiney and Gareth Kenton held Stoneham to only 3 runs.

So going into the seventh inning, the boys were still holding on to a 4-3 lead. But with only 3 outs remaining for the victory, the Sachems fell apart.

A lead-off walk was followed by a misplayed rundown; a dropped popup preceded 2 passed balls. When the dust had cleared, Stoneham had scored twice to make it 5-4.

The Sachems could not come back in the second half of the inning and Stoneham won.

The squad's record now stands at 3-2, due to victories over Wilmington, Wakefield, and Woburn, and loss to Chelmsford. In those four games, the team scored an impressive 33 runs!

"We're a high scoring team," said Coach Larry Crowley. "It's weather or not we can keep the other team from scoring that's made the difference."

"Our pitching has been up and down," Crowley continued. "Tim Budrewicz has pitched well in spots."

with Reading, Lynnfield, and Wakefield."

"Every year, it always seems to be us four fighting for the two playoff spots from our division. We'll have a better idea of our chances after July 9th and 11th, when we play Reading and Lynnfield."

Two days after the Lynnfield game is the League All-Star game on July 13 at Simonds Park in Burl-

'They're experienced ball-players. They seem to make the other, younger guys play better.'

—Larry Crowley

Gareth Kenton has been struggling a little bit. Al Nasson has pitched well. Nasson turned in a four-hitter against Woburn.

The Summer Sachems play in the Northeast Summer League — a developmental baseball league for high school players. The Northeast program — seventeen years old, the oldest in the state — is designed to provide experience to any ballplayer returning to a high school team. Generally, graduated seniors do not play in the league.

Although the league is primarily designed to produce better varsity and junior varsity competition, the Summer League still has a little competition of its own. After the season ends on August 1, the top two teams from each division meet in a series of playoffs to determine the League Championship.

Asked about Winchester's chances of getting into the playoffs, Crowley replied, "I think our chances are pretty good. We're in the strong division, ington. Winchester will send three representatives to this contest.

It is probable that those players will be from the following group: Tim Budrewicz — pitcher and outfielder.

Gareth Kenton — third baseman and pitcher, Peter Delvecchio — center-fielder, T.J. Della Sala — shortstop, and Mike White — starting catcher, relief pitcher, and outfielder. These players, according to Crowley, are the team's nucleus.

"They're experienced ball-players," said Crowley. "They seem to make the other, younger guys play better."

But much of the credit for the team's success should go to one other team member — Coach Crowley. He has been coaching baseball since he was 13 years old, almost 20 years.

"I enjoy coaching this age group," Crowley says. "It's very self-satisfying. Through coaching, I've gotten to meet and know a lot of people in Winchester. It's great..."

As fans took cover under trees during Saturday's Summer Sachems game, the rain made it feel like mid-March.

Teamen Complete Undefeated Season

The Winchester Teamen (Boys under 14, Division 1) recently completed an outstanding season, winning the Middlesex League with a 9-1 record, and reaching the finals of both the Needham Memorial Day Weekend Invitational Tournament and the State Tournament of Champions.

During the regular season, the Teamen dominated their Middlesex League rivals scoring 41 goals to 7 for their opposition. In these 10 games, teamen goaltender Andy Shao was superb with five shutouts.

Highlights of the season were two key wins over a strong Medford team, 3-0 and 1-0, and an early in the season win on Concord, 1-1, which the Teamen won on the fifth penalty kick as Michael McGeehan drilled home the game winner.

During the Memorial Day weekend, the Teamen played five soccer games in the Needham Memorial Day Invitational Tournament, losing in the final game to Poughkeepsie, N.Y., 4-1.

In reaching the finals, the Teamen beat former Massachusetts State Champion, Natick, 3-0, and three-time

New York State Champ, Huntington Boys Club, 4-2.

Outstanding defensive work by Michael Schoenegge at stopper and David Ducharme at sweeper were the keys to the Teamen's success in this highly competitive tournament.

As the Middlesex League Champion, the Teamen traveled to the state tournament held at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst during the weekend of June 22, 23 and 24. In the quarter finals on Saturday, the Teamen dominated the South County representative, Martha's Vineyard, 6-0.

The Teamen scored early and often, as wingers Michael McGeehan and Matt Rotondi each scored two goals and halfback JJ Alberts and left wing Chris Umscheid scored a goal apiece. The staunch Teamen defense (David Ducharme, John Murray, Tom O'Grady, Mark Patti, and Michael Schoenegge) allowed just two hosts on goal during the entire match!

In what was truly one of the hardest fought and most exciting games of the tournament, the Teamen beat Knock-out Champion Bridgewater in the semifinals 3-2 on penalty kicks.

Bridgewater led 2-0 with 20 minutes to play in the game before center halfback Vandy French dribbled through the defense and fed center forward David Romboli for the score. Seven minutes later, Vandy drove home a long direct kick that the goalie couldn't handle to knot the score at 2-2.

From that point in the game through two ten minute overtime periods, each team held the other at bay and the penalty kick rule went into effect. As the crowd gathered from the adjacent fields, the first four Teamen kickers (David Romboli, Chris Umscheid, Vandy French, and Matt Rotondi) fired perfect shots into the net to win the shootout 4-2 and the game 3-2.

Andy Shao inspired his teammates with a brilliant save on the first shot of the shootout as he dove to his right and deflected the ball away from the goal.

On a windy and wet field on Monday, the Teamen played Framingham for the State Championship.

The Teamen controlled the early play with several near misses. However, the skilled, opportunistic Norfolk League representative scored first on a high, perfectly placed shot from the left side. They scored again just before halftime on a well executed corner kick to lead 2-0.

The Teamen worked hard in the second half but had to contend with a fired up Framingham team and an increasingly strong wind. At game's end, the final score stood 3-0 for Framingham, a very talented, hard-working team.

Teamen coaches Vandy French, Jeff O'Grady, and Steve Romboli cited the Teamen's determination and dedication in winding up their finest season. Second best in the state isn't bad!

What Then ?

Step Back To July 4th

Old Sturbridge Village is a living history museum that recreates a New England town of the 1830s.

The museum covers over 200 acres with more than 40 restored buildings where people in historical dress demonstrate the life, work, and community celebrations of early nineteenth-century New Englanders.

Old Sturbridge Village is open year-round. Summer hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 30 to Oct. 27. Admission is $8.50 for adults; $4.00 for children ages 6-15; and children under age 6 are admitted free. Old Sturbridge Village is on Route 20 West in Sturbridge, near Exit 9 of the Massachusetts Turnpike and Exit 3 of Interstate 84.

Old Sturbridge Village has big plans for Independence Day.

Asa Knight, a successful merchant and selectman of the town, is on the Committee of Arrangements for the Fourth of July celebrations.

Last week he was at the Printing Office, checking on the program for the Meeting House service.

"The Fourth of July is a day of fun, but also a day of veneration," says Asa.

"You know, a funny thing happened by in 1826. On July 4th, the 50th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson and Adams died within hours of each other.

"Though we didn't find this out that day, within a week the news was all over the nation. Here was a sign that Providence is looking down on us. It has taken two presidents. It has taken two people who were large figures in the revolution and has taken them into her bosom on July 4th, the 50th anniversary," he says.

"On this day, we toast the great heroes but we also commemorate the soldiers of the revolution who gave all, their money, their land and their life for freedom.

"So it is a day in which people are looking back a little bit, but it's also a day of fun and games, and parades and fireworks.

"I think it was John Adams who said, 'It's the Fourth of July, Independence Day, celebrate it with fun, bonfires, fireworks, trumpets and noise from now on out!'" says Asa.

Asa is finalizing the program for the day. Dressed in a fine vest, pantaloons with brass buttons and a beaver hat for a normal day as storekeeper, he plans fancier dress for the holiday.

That day he will wear white on white corduroy trousers, a fancier shirt and a black cravat.

"I'll be looking like one of the finest upright gentlemen of the community," he says.

What are Sturbridge's plans to celebrate Independence Day?

"Let's see... Things will be starting up at around 9 a.m., when the militia shows up to do a salute and raise up the flag.

"Some are ne'er do wells and rowdies, but most of them are fairly decent young gentlemen of the town. We're going to have a Meeting House service around 11 o'clock, then we'll have a procession and the militia will form an honor guard around the orator of the day and the minister.

"At the Meeting House Service, we'll be having some members of the singing school sing songs and an oration by a young gentleman who is also in the militia," says Asa.

"And then — and this is something in which I have a personal keen interest — there will be a large sit-down picnic in the tent in front of Mr. Bullard's tavern.

"And after the dinner, we'll have some toasting. There'll be toasts to Washington and Jefferson, and some of the other kinds of sentiments as might be put out by some of the different people in the town," he says.

"I'll have to check on the full details of the meal with Miss Belknap. Her sister is married to the man who runs the tavern. She'll probably bring up the fact that last year, some of the militiamen got a little rowdy.

"You know, some of the toasting towards the end — well, I wouldn't say it was in the very best of taste. We didn't publish them in the article we sent to the newspaper in Worcester," says Asa.

"We are planning a big parade that'll take place around 1:30, where all the leading citizens of the town will be marching. Following them we'll have the school children marching with the schoolmistress, and the visitors for the day will also join in.

"We'll be parading all through the town of Sturbridge and everyone can share in the fun and the solemnity."

Solemnity?

"Yes. Around 2 o'clock we'll have a reading of the Declaration of Independence," he says.

"It's a sad thing that people read the Declaration of Independence in their heads, when it should be spoken. And boy if the hair don't stand up on the back of your head when you hear those words," he explains.

"Then we're gonna rest a little, bit, head back to the tavern for a little rum and some cider.

"At 3:30 the fun for the kids begins. I don't rightly understand it myself, but balloons are the vogue. We've got to be careful because kids in this town are setting up fire balloons, filling up hot air paper balloons and sending them up 50, 60, 100 feet up in the air. We'll be sending one up that afternoon.

"At 4 o'clock we'll hear the Martial Band do a separate little program, play and march around, and we'll enjoy the spirit of that patriotic music. And at 4:30 you'll have a chance to see some people dance.

"You know, they sort of put us together in what they call a "museum" here, but we do end up doing things here during the day that people in the 1830s would have done at night. Now we don't have a ball at night, with people dancing. It might have started at 7:30 or 8.

"So we're gonna to take some dancers up to the village around 4:30 and show what a dance might have been like at a Fourth of July ball and how they had some fun.

"At the end of the day, 5 o'clock, we'll ring the Meeting House bell loud and clear and that'll signify the end of the day in this "museum." And people will have had a chance to share a fourth of July as it might have been 150 years ago," says Asa.

Miss Belknap has the menu for the day.

For her ordinary work, Miss Belknap is wearing a short gown and petticoat, but her holiday plans also include dressing up.

Men in historic dress will toast the young nation after the dinner hour.

"I'll be wearing a lovely pink gown — quality goods — with puffs in the sleeves, several petticoats, a lovely new bonnet which Mrs. Fenow, the widow, made for me.

"It's a tried and true pattern," she says.

"We are going to have baked ham. Of course that ham has to be freshened, because it has been smoked. So we'll have to be freshening that up probably starting Monday next," says Miss Belknap.

"And we'll be having baked beans, we'll be having a spice cake. I think we are going to bake some pies with apples which were stored and dried over the winter.

"We will of course have bread and some famous Freeman Farm cheese, and perhaps some other cheese from Asa Knight, should he be so kind.

"Yes, well, unfortunately, we do sometimes have some difficulty. Last year, when we were offering sentiments and toasts — hm, hm, well you know, living here at the minister's home I do have to bring it up."

"Last year, although most people acted with propriety, things did get somewhat out of hand when Asa Knight brought over extra, I might add uncalled for, ardent spirits: rum and gin," she says.

"All approved by the Committee of Arrangements, I assure you," says Asa. "I can't be responsible for the militia members who imbibe too freely. I did not, though they did."

"What example was set for the community, I might add," Miss Balknap says.

"Young boys running around aping their elders doing foolish stunts. It was shocking, frankly."

"I can assure you, it will not happen this year," says Asa.

"The committee has taken the militia to task, and we will be watering down the rum a little bit this year."

"I can assure you, we will not have — besides, turning over the table and dumping all that crockery — the bill that went out to the individuals, will certainly discourage such behavior in future.

"Picnics were not always very casual meals served on a blanket.

"This will be a dinner-picnic nooning meal that is outdoors on tables and chairs, with formal table settings. Usually a member of the militia, the Ladies' Committee or the Committee of Arrangements sits at the head of each table and serves each plate before it is passed down the table," say Asa.

"There will also be informal picnics taking place," says Miss Belknap. In the houses they will be preparing food. Some houses will have started earlier, such as the Freemans.

"They'll be doing their ham earlier in the week, freshening it up and making ham sandwiches, and they'll be preparing chickens and making chicken salads, and apple pies from apples that were stored in bags over the winter, that kind of thing.

"So the families in the houses will have prepared meals and some of them may take them outside to eat. I think Freeman may do that, and maybe Fitch," she says.

"This here is Phil Eckert, the head of our militia, and he's going to play a very important role this militia day," says Asa.

"The militia is the honor guard for the procession to the Meeting House and they're also going to be helping lead the parade. And as I understand it, those militiamen that are able to stand up for lack of taking great amounts of rum will be firing salutes.

"Yes," says Phil, "about half of them last year, I remember. You don't want to give the intemperate ones live ammunition; that can be dangerous."

"Miss Belknap called us to tasks for the militiamen last year, who, after the formal toasting got a little rowdy and tipped over the table and broke all the crockery," says Asa.

"I assured her that it wouldn't happen again. The fact that they had been charged for the breakage might dissuade them from such low and slovenly action again, but — you know the militia."

"Notices have gone out. The cartridges have been rolled. Hopefully they'll be dry this year. Rain got into the cartridge box last year," says Phil.

"We don't give the militiamen large powder horns filled with powder since one blew up a few years ago, and the militia will have pre-measured charges for the muskets that they'll be firing that day."

"Of course, we'd have the cannon too, but the cannoners — I am afraid the cannon broke down, it's up in Northampton and they can't get it fixed by July 4th. So unless they carry the barrel in by themselves, we'll have no cannon."

"Just like the National Guard is today. Every adult male from 18 to 45 had to come out three times a year and play soldier," says Phil.

"It started out much more seriously during the colonial period, but by the 1830s there had been no wars for quite a while, and people weren't taking it very seriously any more."

"So it turned into — almost a carnival. You still had to come out with your gun, a knapsack and canteen, spare gun, flints and powder and ball — everything that you would need to march into battle with."

"The town would elect a captain who would drill the troops in the hope that if a war ever came all the town militias would gather together into one large army. It never happened; they weren't called until the Civil War," says Phil.

"During the 1830s men would tend to come drunk; there are references to men coming with their clothes all put on backwards,

What To Do

100 Years: 'Pops' Goes The Crowd

By Seth Borenstein

You probably know me. I was on national television. I didn't kidnap anyone, hijack a plane or anything. I conducted the Boston Pops.

Well, I really didn't conduct the orchestra by myself. I was helped by John Williams.

The scene was Boston's Esplanade and the day was July 4, 1984.

I was on ABC-TV's "Nightline" because I was standing in the front row of 200,000 people, waving my arms in time to the music. ABC's cameras cut away from Pops Conductor Williams to me and back to him.

Of course, I have learned to deal with my fame and now am willing to give instructive tips on how to be seen among 200,000 people at this year's July 4 extravaganza.

The most important thing to do is to come early.

Three friends and I camped out at the Esplanade the night before. We were able to grab the last front row seats. Other campers had come two or three days early to get the other seats.

Would-be campers this year should be prepared. We showed up on July 3 prepared for a large-scale invasion. There was food, games (Trivial Pursuit is a must), tents, water (not enough), mosquito repellent, and blankets.

The blankets were not needed as the temperature pushed well past 90 degrees on July 4.

Those of us who braved the heat were later rewarded when the Metropolitan Police figured that water hoses might be pretty useful in cooling off a simmering crowd.

People lined up for the opportunity to be doused. I went back three times.

Of course, some people preferred liquid refreshment inside, rather than outside. It is illegal to drink alcohol in public, but some of the more enterprising campers found unusual ways of sidestepping laws.

If the erstwhile officers catch someone trying to smuggle liquor on to the Esplanade, the booze gets promptly dumped on the ground.

If you camp out on Wednesday, bring earplugs. Although Thursday night the music of Tchaikovsky and John Phillip Sousa will resound through the Hatch Shell, the night before the music is less pleasing to classical ears.

The songs of Led Zeppelin and other heavy metal bands dominated through the night. I finally dozed off around 2 a.m.

And if you are going to invest in earplugs, buy a blindfold, too. The 6 a.m. sun is awfully hard to sleep through.

The biggest enemy is boredom. Try to bring plenty of games, books, radios, television sets, newspapers, friends — anything.

Sitting outside trapped among thousands of people with nothing to is not the way to spend the Fourth of July.

But if you come prepared with games, liquid refreshment — legal refreshments, that is — food and an active mind, there is no better way to spend the day than waiting for the Pops. And the Pops and the bigger pops — the fireworks display — are worth it, especially if you have a front row seat.

What Do You Say

Well, I think it's a pretty safe town; I appreciate that. There's a high police presence near where I live and that's very nice. I lived in Arlington, I don't know why, but I like it better than Arlington. There is something that is intangible that's hard to explain. It feels more peaceful, it's a smaller town, you get to know the people that you deal with in the banks and stuff like that. It's more personal. I'm very comfortable here. It's got good recreational facilities, it's got a lot of nice things going for it. I use the swimming pool at the high school. They have an Olympic size pool over there. It's real nice. Plus you've got the tennis courts.

I like the transportation on the 'T. I go from Waverley to Harvard to go shopping. It's a nice area to live in here. It's quiet and you can go shopping right over here in Belmont Center. I like to shop at Filene's.

I do like Winchester and Woburn very much. Number one, I like the people. My children were all educated in Woburn. I like the school system. I like Winchester, too. My children were originally educated there at Immaculate Conception which is now closed. I like everything about Winchester. It's a nice town, a conservative town. I feel safe working in the square because of the good police force. I enjoy working at the bakery also. I've made friends with a lot of the people who come in here, people are always happy when they come into a good bakery.

It's quiet and peaceful. It's not like Woburn or Malden. It doesn't smell like Woburn. We have the best high school football team.

I like it. It's quiet and my neighbors are good to me. It's friendly and I like it. I've lived here for 15 years.

It's quiet, and we have Arlington Center to hang out. It's not like Boston. Boston is too noisy. There's good people here, it's a good area. It's more neighborly.

Freedom. We cherish it, as we celebrate another milestone year in our nation's great history, for the democratic ideals set forth in our founding doctrines still prevail today. We can recite these words from our Pledge of Allegiance proudly, knowing that in America, freedom is more than a word, it's a way of life.

Our Children When Family Has Twins

By Willard Abraham
Ph.D.

What topics in letters from readers bring the most reactions from other parents? I've done an informal survey for several years, and these subjects are among those that head the list: Discipline, sex education, single parenthood, working mothers, giftedness, handicapping conditions, toilet training.

The follow-up letters that readers send in are sometimes creative, often practical and occasionally angry at me or at the original letter writer — but they are always welcome.

They may be just plain interesting, as are these regarding twins in the family. A lengthy one on this subject from a perceptive teacher will be shared with you next week.

Our twin sons were and still are very close. I dressed them alike until second grade.

Our school officials insisted on separating them after first grade. I was against that. They were doing great with friends and school until the separation. It turned out to be a turning point in their lives, and was not a good experience for them.

Twins have their own personalities, friends and desires. However, I think there is a special closeness between them, born in them, from which we should not try to separate them.

It took much prayer, work and patience in dealing with their adjustments to the separation during the early part of their lives. They needed each other — then especially.

I'm sure all twins differ, but their separation was perhaps the biggest problem we ever have had to face with our sons.

My husband and I have four children; the oldest is a 4-year-old girl, then a 3-year-old boy, and identical twins, 2 years old.

We believe the twins should be separated in school; there would be an opportunity for making more friends. We will encourage them to pursue different activities to prevent too much competition.

I think it's sad to see twins who cannot adjust to life because they depend on each other too much. I have girlfriends in that situation; one is divorced and the other never married due to the time they spend together. Now they live together and have the same career.

As a 33-year-old identical twin, I can relate to the letter from the mother concerned about having her girls separated when starting school.

My sister and I were separated in the third grade by our teacher who refused to have twins in her classroom. We both came home from school crying and fearful.

We each had started to develop our own likes and dislikes, so when we expressed our desire to dress differently, my wise mother let us.

Even though my sister and I are identical, and to this day very, very close, we also like being recognized as individuals. Therefore, dressing differently and being in separate classes helped encourage the individuality we both needed and wanted so much.

Are you the parent of a pre-school child, 2 to 5 years old? Send a stamp, plus your request for information about a monthly service that may help you, to Dr. Abraham, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

Picnickers' Paradise:

By Verne Palmer

You can keep your picnic safe and simple by planning a menu loaded with fresh fruits and vegetables; smoked or cured meats such as ham, hot dogs, sausage and cold cuts; preserved condiments such as olives, pickles and marinated vegetables; packaged goods such as crackers and chips, and unfrosted cakes, muffins and cookies.

That doesn't mean you have to forgo those wonderful potato and pasta salads, fried chicken, deviled eggs, baked beans, etc.; just keep them at a minimum and make sure the hot foods stay hot and the cold foods stay cold.

outdoors, and active games add an extra edge to appetites, so plan for extra helpings. Some general guidelines follow:

Hot dogs: Plan on an average of two hot dogs per person per adult (counting teenagers as adults) and one and a half per child.

Cold meat sandwiches: For hearty appetite-appealing sandwiches consisting of 3 ounces of meat and a 1-ounce slice of cheese (plus condiments) on a kaiser or onion roll or sesame bun, allow an average of one and a half per adult and one per child. Try cutting the sandwiches in half so everyone will get to try at least two different varieties.

Salads: A standard serving of potato salad is 1/2 to 3/4 cup. If making your own, allow 1 pound of potatoes for four average servings. If several other side dishes are served, one serving per person may be enough. If it is the only starchy side dish on the menu, you may need as much as 1 cup.

For tossed green salads, allow a cup per serving.

Baked beans: One 16-ounce can will make about three servings, but allow for some seconds. In cooking dry beans, keep in mind that 1 pound cooks up to 5 or 6 cups.

Fresh fruit: If fruit is the only dessert, allow one and a half to two average pieces per person, a fourth of a melon or 1/4 to 1/2 pound of grapes. A large watermelon yields about 16 servings.

Desserts: Allow three to four cookies and one to two slices of cake or quick bread or muffins, depending on size.

Ice Cream Secrets Are Explained

What makes great ice cream? Very simple. More quality ingredients. A deep richly colored chocolate tastes distinctly chocolate; not so for a pale pinkish version with very little cocoa base. As a matter of fact, the flavor chocolate will tell you a lot about an ice cream establishment. Look at it. Is it a deep chocolate color? Taste it with your eyes closed. Can you tell what flavor it is? How about a nut flavor? Does it have a lot of nuts in it or do you feel skimpy?

You see, more quality ingredients cost more money. Homemade ice cream is an individual store's version of homemade; some establishments have different ideas about recipes, cost and eventual profit. A store that exists for the bottom line may sacrifice quality a bit, especially if there are lines of people waiting to buy their product.

It's true. Great ice cream has no secrets. It's all to be seen and tasted in the chocolate.

Food's A BLAST!!

Summer Food Festival

Ready, Set, Munch!

(From previous page)

Beverages: The temperature and length of the picnic will have a lot to do with how much liquid is consumed, but on average allow one drink per person every 45 minutes. Children usually drink only one-third to one-half a can of soft drink, so include paper cups so they can be shared.

A selection of nutritious picnic food ideas follows.

PICNIC PITAS

- 1½ cups finely shredded cabbage
- 1 (4½ oz.) can shrimp, drained and rinsed
- ½ cup finely chopped celery
- ¼ cup shredded carrot
- 2 tbsps. raisins, if desired
- 2 tbsps. mayonnaise
- 1 tbsp. spicy deli mustard
- ½ tsp. curry powder
- ½ tsp. salt
- 3 medium-size pita bread pockets, cut in half

Combine all ingredients except pita bread. Stuff pita bread with shrimp mixture.

FRUIT NIBBLES

- ¼ cup confectioners sugar
- 2 tbsps. lemon juice
- 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- ½ tsp. ground ginger
- ½ tsp. paprika
- ¼ cup oil
- 6 cups cut-up fresh fruit

In small bowl, combine sugar, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, ginger and paprika. Gradually add oil, beating briskly with whisk until slightly thickened. Toss with fruit.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Lemon Ice Cream

- 2 c. whipping cream or half/half
- 1 c. sugar
- 1-2 T. lemon peel grated
- ½ c. fresh lemon juice

Stir cream and sugar till dissolved. Mix in peel and juice. Pour in 8" square pan or into sherbert dish. Freeze several hours till firm. Garnish.

Salsa

- 3 sweet red peppers, seeded and coarsely chopped
- 2 scallions, coarsely chopped
- 2 hot peppers, seeded and finely chopped
- 2 tomatoes, chopped
- 1 garlic clove, peeled and chopped
- 3 T. olive oil
- 2 T. fresh lime juice
- 12 sprigs fresh coriander

Mix all ingredients together. Serve with crisp tortilla chips.

Strawberry Pie

- 1½ c. water
- ¾ c. sugar
- 2 T. cornstarch

Cook over medium heat till boiled then low heat till clear. Add 1 3 oz. package (wild strawberry) Jello. Stir till mixed. Pour over berries in cooked pie crust while still hot.

SUMMER COOLER DESERTS

Raspberry Fool

- 1 pint fresh raspberries
- Sugar to taste
- 1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Force raspberries through a fine sieve to remove seeds; sweeten to taste. Carefully fold the raspberry puree into whipped cream, spoon into individual glasses, and chill.

Cranberry Sherbert

- 2 c. cranberries
- 1 t. gelatin soaked in 2 T. water

DURING THE SHOWING

What should a homeowner do during the showing of the house to a prospective buyer? Probably the homeowner would be of the greatest help doing nothing. Often, it's best that the homeowner not be present at all. Prospects feel that they should not criticize a home when the owner is present. However, part of the Realtor's job is ferreting out their objections, then offsetting them. Many sales have been made immediately after clearing up such doubts. With the owner around, the problem that is blocking the sale may never be known.

If the owner is at home when the Realtor arrives with the prospects, it would be best to withdraw after the introductions. It is not necessary to be present to fill any awkward gaps in the conversation. It's during such gaps that many prospects make up their mind to buy.

If you ARE going to be around during the showing, you can arrange a vase of freshly cut flowers for the dining table; brew a pot of coffee or iced tea and take the pets out in the yard.

Blackpowder Shooters

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North-South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery consists with 50 cal. rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and an 1,800 lb. full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 call pigeons on a 4x8 cardboard backer at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over - from Maine to Rhode Island to New York - but more are from eastern Massachusetts. Call Ron Borjeson at 1-833-3102 for further information. 11/3/TF

PRAYER to the Holy Spirit. Oh Holy Spirit, thou who art all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my idea, thou who givest me this divine gift of forgiving and forgetting wrongs done unto me and who in every instant of my life with me, I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all your blessings and affirm once again that I never want to part from thee though the illusion of material things abound. My desire is to be with thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank you for your mercy on me and mine. (Person should pray three consecutive days without revealing petition. Within three days, grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be.) Publish this prayer once grace attained. Grateful for grace attained. ENS 6.27/7.11

NOVENA to Mary, Queen of All Hearts, O Mary, Queen of All Hearts, Advocate of the most hopeless case; Mother of Divine Love, full of divine light, we confide to you the care of the souls which we ask of you today. Consider our misery, our tears, our interior trials and sufferings! We know that you can help us through the merits of your Divine Son, Jesus. We promise, if our prayers are heard, to spread your glory, by making you known under the title of Mary Queen of All Hearts, Queen of the Universe. Grant, we beseech you, hear our prayer: for every day you give us so many proofs of your love and your power of intercession to heal both body and soul. We hope again at hope: Ask Jesus to cure us, pardon us and grant us final perseverance. O Mary, Queen of All Hearts, help us, we have confidence in you. (3 times) Publication must be promised. I have had my request granted. ENS. 6.27

MAY THE Sacred Heart Of Jesus be adored, glorified, honored, loved, and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us, St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, help of the hopeless, pray for us. Say this prayer nine times a day for nine days. It has never been known to fail. Publication must be promised. I have had my request granted. Also thanksgiving to St. Anthony. 6.27/7.11

THANK YOU St. Jude for favor granted. C.W. 7.4/7.18

Board To Hear Rotondi Plan

By JILL M. HIGGINS

At what is expected to be a packed public hearing tonight, Winchester's Conservation Commission will again review developer Sam Rotondi's plans for a 70-unit housing complex off Forest st.

At a June 5 meeting, the commission ruled that water that runs through the property puts the 4.5 acre site under the jurisdiction of the state Wetlands Protection Act.

At a 7:30 public hearing tonight, the board is expected to consider guidelines for the proposed $4.1 million development.

The hearing will be held in the health clinic room in Town Hall. Residents opposed to the complex have complained about possible traffic backups, while others have charged there will not be enough parking for prospective tenants.

Meanwhile, Commission Chairman Maggie Howard said on Tuesday that she disagrees with some people's allegations that Rotondi is circumventing the traditional zoning application procedure in order to railroad approval of the project.

"We have a stringent area that we have to regulate and that is our concern. As far as we're concerned, he's been right to the letter of the law," said Howard.

The commission will scrutinize the mandatory notice of intent filed by Rotondi, a lifelong Winchester resident and former state senator.

According to law, a notice of intent is required of developers whose land is determined to be covered under the Wetlands Act. The notice must spell out how the developer will avoid destroying the wetlands area.

On Tuesday, Howard said she has already studied the 19-page notice, which Rotondi released last week.

"We feel his engineer has to be a little more specific about the water retention basin," said Howard. She said the basin call for a retention basin to catch the water flowing through the property.

"We need more specifics about the grading and the actual figures on the slopes. It's not specific enough on the depths," she said.

She said she has told Rotondi about her board's concerns and expects he will come forth with more detailed plans tonight.

On Tuesday, Rotondi said he and (Please See ROTONDI, Page 14)

Two Workers Injured When Scaffolding Falls

By NANCY PICK

A 45-year-old Medford contractor fell from the second story of a Mt. Vernon st. building Monday morning, breaking his hip and right leg when a cornice collapsed under the weight of scaffolding.

The contractor, Hector Figarola, was listed in fair condition Wednesday afternoon at Winchester Hospital. He was filling cracks in the building's brickwork when part of the roof gave way.

The building, formerly Randall's Restaurant, was constructed in 1890. Renovations are underway to convert it to Lucia's Ristorante.

A second worker, Oscar Jara, 39, of Quincy, suffered shoulder bruises and head wounds in the accident. He was treated and released from Winchester Hospital. Both men are employed by Pescara Construction of Medford.

The scaffolding fell in a cloud of brick and dust, said Mike McDonough of Dorchester, who saw the accident while working on new town sidewalks across the street.

Figarola fell on a pile of broken bricks while more debris tumbled on top of him, McDonough said. He landed with his leg twisted backwards underneath him.

McDonough said he brushed brick and mortar out of the victim's eyes while others gingerly removed broken bricks from under his back, trying not to move him.

When firefighters arrived, they applied ice packs, untwisting his leg while he winced and groaned in pain. They then slid a back board under the contractor, who lay on his back near mangled sections of rusty metal flashing.

A group of seven men carefully lifted the board and placed Figarola on a stretcher. After he was taken to the hospital, firefighters arrived with a ladder truck to remove the scaffolding, which still dangled from the roof.

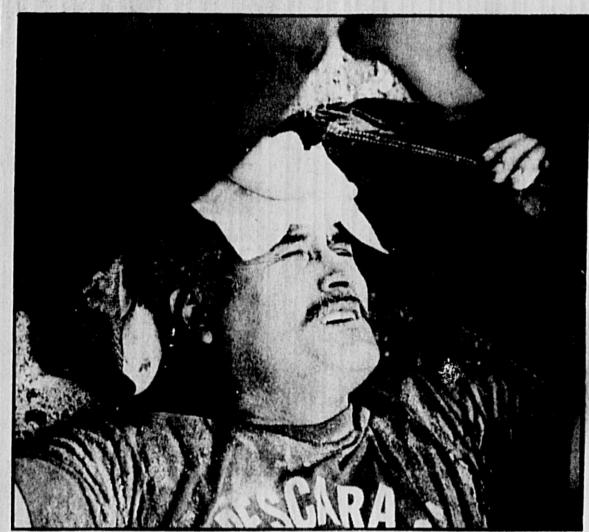

By Monday afternoon, all the debris had been removed and the sidewalk carefully swept clean.

Ambulance Costs May Skyrocket

By NANCY PICK

If a plan to expand Winchester's ambulance service is approved, the cost of taking someone to the hospital could skyrocket from $65 to $250.

On Monday, Selectmen debated the ambulance plan for an hour and a half, but came to no decision.

While supporters claim the new ambulance service would save lives, its detractors call the service unnecessary, complex and expensive.

Under the plan, a team of paramedics would be rushed from Arlington to medical emergencies in Winchester, in addition to the town's own ambulance. The Winchester ambulance is staffed by firefighters who have less training for medical emergencies than paramedics.

If approved, the paramedics team would provide better medical skills, radio contact with a hospital, and "the improved chance to save a life," said Dr. Thomas J. Mulvaney of Winchester Hospital.

The town would not have to finance the new service, according to Neil Stroman, chairman of the North Suburban Medical Consortium. He said Winchester Hospital, Lahey Clinic and Choate-Symmes Health Services Inc. have agreed to foot the bill for the paramedics system.

However, the town of Winchester would lose money every time the consortium ambulance transported a patient to the hospital, said Stroman. Although Winchester's ambulance would be sent to every emergency, no fee would be collected unless it transported the patient.

The consortium ambulance would only be sent for the most serious cases, said Stroman. Winchester's police and fire dispatcher would judge whether the paramedics were needed, based on a list of grave emergencies.

Mulvaney said, "We would hope that the dispatcher makes a decision (Please See COSTS, Page 14)

Robert Penna

Penna Is Bank Director

Robert C. Penna has been named a director of the Winchester Cooperative Bank as announced by Edward E. Goodwin, bank president.

Penna, a lifelong Winchester resident, is currently president and chief executive officer of the Arrow Paper Corp. of Somerville.

Penna, a graduate of Boston University, is married to the former Judith Gail Ober. They have three children — Lahn Charles, 8, Scott Charles, 5, and Nicole, 2.

Penna is the son of Muriel and Archille Penna, also of Winchester.

Penna is a director of the Winchester Chapter of the American Red Cross as well as being a member of several trade associations affiliated with his profession.

It was reported in error last week that Penna would leave his position at Arrow to join the bank. The Winchester Star regrets any inconvenience caused by the error.

by the film "Testament," she says, for "to watch the children in that movie die was the hardest thing."

Evans has two children of her own, a 13-year-old daughter and a 12-year-old son.

The Eaton st. resident has also made ribbon panels with her son's Sunday school class at the Unitarian Church. For each panel, she sewed together hand-colored pictures drawn by the children.

The pictures range from flavorful to philosophical. One student drew a seven-scoop ice cream cone, dripping with luscious colors. Two drew pictures of the planet Earth. And one drew a cake with candles in it — that student, says Evans, "couldn't bear not to have another birthday."

Winchester resident Marjorie Moore also delivered a ribbon piece to Evans' home. "Dona Nobis Pacem," it reads (Give Us Peace).

The central image is an appliqued Christmas stocking with the name of Moore's granddaughter, Emma.

All told, Evans estimates at least a dozen panels have been made in Winchester, mostly by religious groups. They will be delivered to a central Boston office this month.

In Boston, Evans has viewed dozens of other ribbon panels. "Some are technically incredibly beautiful," she says, "while for others, the message just hits you."

Evans particularly admired a panel called "All Creatures Great and Small," a graphic artist's parade of animals, from turtle to elephant. For another ribbon piece, a woman appliqued her child's baby clothes to the panel, complete with rattle, cloth books and bib.

After the ribbon parade in Washington, several panels will be sent to the Peace Museum in Chicago. Other sections will be forwarded to the Smithsonian Institute in the nation's capital.

And to Massachusetts will go those panels made by Bay Staters. According to Evans, no decision has been made on where to display them.

Evans learned to sew long ago, under her mother's guidance. She started with doll clothes, and moved on to sewing her own wardrobe.

In the late 60s and the 70s, when crafts came into vogue, Evans tried her hand at macramé. Later, in 1975, she started quilting. Since then her needle has barely been at rest.

But Evans is no old-fashioned lady who stays at home to sew all day. By profession, she runs a mass spectrometer, a high-tech instrument used in chemical research.

Wind And Water

Using the spectrometer, Evans can pinpoint the metabolism of several medications together, helping trace how they interact within the body.

Looking at the chemicals is "sort of like looking at fingerprints," she says. Each substance shows a different pattern of masses under the instrument's eyes.

But quilting, she says, is "what I do to unwind from work. If you're doing research or chemical work, you do the same things day after day, and you don't necessarily have a finished product."

Quilting, by contrast, is "very concrete" and "very relaxing." It's easy, she says, to get lost in the soothing rhythm of the needlework.

Besides working on the ribbon project and making quilts for friends and relatives, Evans has undertaken an ambitious project for Winchester's Unitarian Church.

Eight quilted panels, designed to hang from church rafters, are being sewn, each displaying the symbol of a major world religion. Unitarianism is a humanist religion, she says, which tries to encompass all world views.

Evans even dyes her own fabrics, to give them a softness that commercial fabrics lack. Her chemistry background helps her obtain the desired hues.

Dyeing cotton fabric is a messy process, she says, relegated to the kitchen.

"I clean off all the countertops, cover everything over with newspaper, and put on my lab coat and rubber gloves." Then she stews the fabric in the dyes and leaves it out in the back yard to dry.

Evans, past president of The Quilters Connection, a quilting group based in Arlington, sews several times a week. She pieces segments together using a sewing machine, but the quilting — tiny stitches used to hold the blanket layers together — she does by hand.

Quilting, she says, is no more fad from the era of peace signs. "Macrame came and went. Quilting came and it's still getting stronger."

Police Seize 1,000 Pills

By NANCY PICK
Police Monday seized 1,000 pills believed to be narcotics.

Salvatore A. Foti, 34, of Everett, whose white Corvette was stopped on Bigelow ave., was arrested and charged with three counts of intent to distribute a controlled substance. If convicted, he could face a maximum jail term of 10 years.

Foti was also charged with three counts of possession of controlled substances.

The pills, 500 light yellow and 500 in both bright red and bright yellow capsules, were taken to a state police laboratory for analysis.

Foti was released on bail Monday afternoon. Arraignment is scheduled for July 17 at Woburn District Court.

Library Has New System

The Minuteman Library Network is coming to Winchester to pave the way for this new automated system, the Winchester Public Library is re-registering patrons for new library cards.

Beginning in July, library users will obtain new cards which may be used at Winchester and 19 other Minuteman Network libraries. These cards will have barcode labels that new laser scanning terminals will "read" upon checking out material. Old cards will not work with the new automated system.

Patrons with overdue materials are encouraged to return them before the new registration begins. Popular hiding places are under the bed, on top of the refrigerator, in the car trunk, next to the bathtub, and on the coffee table.

Library record albums sometimes get accidentally shelved with private collections. A library cassette may be in the car deck. Patrons must return overdue materials if they wish to re-register.

The library's summer hours are: Mon., Wed., Fri. - 10:5-3:30; Tues., Thurs. - 10-9.

Recreation Dept. Mime Delights Kids

Strangers became friends recently, as the mime, magic and mini-camp program, held by the Winchester Recreation Department, worked wonders.

The campers learned magic tricks and mime techniques from Jim Vetter, a professional mime.

June 24 opened the door to the world of mime where campers also learned a variety of card and coin tricks.

On Wednesday, after a day of practicing and the taking of the magicians' oath, the youngsters were introduced to a slew of rope tricks, along with the famous "tug-of-war" mime act.

The campers also learned to make sound effects to pretend they were facing a fierce rain storm (which wasn't too far from the truth last week) as well as pretending they were walking through a steamy jungle.

The next day, campers were entertained by a visit from mime and mask expert Drucilla. After learning about many different types of masks, the campers created their own masks.

On Friday afternoon, the Winchester minicampers proved the adage that the hand is quicker than the eye in a thrilling display of wizardry. The auditorium featured an array of amazing tricks and mime — learned during the week and performed by the campers themselves.

The audience was fascinated by the crafty Barbara Baron, Anne Bartol, Margaret Boettcher, Chloe Caci, Liane Caci, Joey Corkery, Donna Corrado, Jeannette Cross, Sean Crowley, Mahrya Dakubu, Alec Duffy, Emily d'Entremont, Jeff Emunds, Jeremy Gilbert, Jeremy Misra, Tomoe Murakami, Len Nolan, and Caroline and Raymond Regan.

The curtain closed on the final bow, after a convincing "tug-of-war" mime story, in which the campers topped off a fun week by giving their best in the show.

Musicians Sought For Summer Band

The Winchester Recreation Department and Winchester High School Band Director, Priscilla Miller, invite all musicians to participate in the Summer Community Concert Program.

Monday, July 8 was the initial meeting date for rehearsals, but participants who are not able to make this first rehearsal may attend subsequent rehearsals on July 15. All rehearsals are held at the High School Music Room at 7:30 p.m. Concerts will be held at the Duck Pond behind the library beginning July 17 at 7:30 p.m. They will continue on the three following Wednesday evenings through August 17. Continuing rehearsals during this period will be held on Mondays (at the High School).

The concert music covers a wide range of interest and appeal. Show tunes, music of the 40's, contemporary and popular music will be featured as well as the traditional finale program on the 17th of August highlighted by the 1812 Overture.

As an added treat, the 1985 Summer Program will include intermission dramatic vignettes by the newly formed "Duck Pond Players" under the direction of Brian Milauskas. Local individuals and groups will also provide music entertainment during the half time break.

Contact the Recreation Department (721-7125) for further information.

Assertiveness Will Be Taught

Choate Hospital in Woburn is offering an Assertiveness Training Workshop on Wednesdays, August 7, 14, 21 and 28 from 7 to 9 p.m. to help participants improve their communication skills.

Assertiveness is the ability to express feelings, both negative and positive, in an open, honest, straightforward manner. An assertive person is able to express anger and resentment without feelings of hostility or guilt.

Lack of assertiveness may cause social stress, because the person who holds back his or her feelings may eventually "explode," alienating others.

On the other end of the spectrum is the aggressive person who tends to say too much, is tactless and a poor listener, also alienating others.

Both the passive and aggressive types can benefit from an assertiveness training workshop, where they can learn to express themselves more positively and where they can learn listening skills to respond to others who are angry or upset.

The workshop is limited to 15 participants to allow all the opportunity to practice techniques learned during the course. Pre-registration is required. Please call 933-6700, ext. 377 for additional information.

SENIOR SCENE

Rev. Storer Will Lead Play Reading

By GEORGE WELLS
Special To The Star

The Rev. Robert A. Storer of the Unitarian Church will conduct play reading groups this fall at the Jenks Senior Center. When he does, he'll be holding sessions in a building which he helped found.

In 1976, he originated the idea in a march in the center of town to dramatize the need for a place seniors could call their own.

On June 5, 1984, as chairman of the Walk Committee, he led more than 200 seniors from Manchester Field to the banks of the Aberjona on Skillings rd., the site of the Jenks Senior Center.

With a deep religious conviction combined with a high degree of sensitivity to the needs of his parishioners, Rev. Storer continues to participate in church and community events, although he is retired.

Storer, who has been interested in play acting since his youth, began The Unitarian Players several years ago.

Anyone interested in joining the play reading groups should sign up at the center. The sessions will begin in October and will be held on Thursday afternoons.

In other senior news, Jenks officers are reminding residents about its referral service. The Jenks informal referral service acts as a clearing house of information by helping seniors find appropriate agencies for their needs.

There is always an agency to help seniors through a particular problem — be it health, housing, financing or employment. Seniors are encouraged to call the center for more information.

Gas Prices Are Climbing

Eastern Massachusetts gasoline prices have increased since the July Fourth holiday last year, according to the results of a spot check of service stations conducted by AAA Massachusetts.

The AAA survey found that regular leaded gasoline is now selling for $1.173 up 3.1¢, and regular unleaded gasoline at $1.275, up 5.2¢ over last year.

Massachusetts gasoline prices are still the lowest of all New England states. Average per-gallon prices for regular unleaded gasoline are higher by two-tenths of a cent in Maine; 1¢ in Vermont; 2.3¢ in New Hampshire; and 5.4¢ in both Connecticut and Rhode Island.

AAA's survey found that 72 percent of the service stations in New England will be open on July Fourth.

CLUB NOTES

Judith Thyson of the Enka Society and members of the Beautification and Design Review Committee, Lois Dallow, Jane Kittredge and Sergei Sorokin, work and watch as town employees install new plantings at the Aberjona Parking Lot. Two large islands at the lot's entrance will also soon be filled with plants selected by Sorokin and purchased with a generous gift from Enka to the Town Beautification Fund. Enka was one of the first organizations to respond to this fund. Plants going into this island include a Dr. Merrill magnolia, the pink rhododendron 'Janet Blair,' Sargent's weeping hemlock, dwarf white pine, an azalea and a clump of chamaecyparissus.

Winchester Kernels

For two years, Star photographer Amy Sweeney has captured the essence of Winchester in black and white. She caught victory on the baseball diamond and disaster at a burning home. She captured the thrills of the EnKa Fair and the diplomacy of Town Meeting.

She has seen deep into the eyes of many a Winchester citizen, catching them not always at their most beautiful, but at their most honest.

Now, Amy is leaving for a daily newspaper in Gloucester. She'll have to get up a little earlier. She may have to work even harder.

But she won't be more appreciated. Sure will miss her around here.

Column By Terry Marotta

Down The First Big Hill On Life's Rollercoaster

Yesterday I looked into the mirror and discovered a new dimple - not in my hands, like the kind babies have. Not in my thighs either - this isn't a tale of cellulite woe.

The dimple I found is square in the middle of my right cheek, a place that's been dimple-free for the last 36 years.

At first I thought I was seeing things, and rubbed my eyes accordingly; it was there all right. I checked the other side of my face, with the thought that perhaps that cheek, which has been dimpled all my life, had somehow donated its little indentation to its fellow.

Maybe I've had a stroke in the night, I thought to myself, and grown strangely dyslectic, perceiving on my right everything that's really on my left. But no, that dimple was there, too, right where it always has been.

What had happened, then, was I'd grown a new one.

I can live with this new arrival, understand, it isn't the worst thing in the world to wake up and discover residing on your body.

At the same time, though, I know very well that nature has not tardily decided to turn me into Shirley Temple. In truth she has given me no dimple at all, but a new, short wrinkle.

I take this as yet another signpost on the road toward old age.

There are more such signposts all the time now.

I ran into a friend not long ago that I grew up biting and trading punches with all through the golden years of childhood. I hadn't seen him in some time, but we'd always meant a lot to each other.

The first thing he said to me that day was, "Where did you get that SPACE between your bottom teeth?"

Now this proved an awkward question all around, especially since I didn't even know I HAD a space between my bottom teeth.

A trip to the Ladies' Room soon revealed it, sure enough: my lower teeth had been drifting like continents, evidently, leaning away from each other like headstones in an ancient graveyard.

It's the sort of thing the person himself is blessedly unaware of, somehow - who looks for tooth migration in the daily mirror-check? But my friend had noticed it before all else about my appearance, and remarking on it, lettered another sign for me on the road toward Elder Acres.

Every day brings new discoveries of this sort, both in myself and those around me.

My husband is growing unrecognizable from one day to the next, so fast is his hair turning grey.

I greet new embellishments on my crows' feet weekly. Now that it's summer, too, I've found that a tan does wonders to light up my wrinkles. I walk around in the sun with just enough of a grimace on, I guess, that everything but them turns brown. Then I get home feeling fine and fit-looking, gaze into the mirror and see my lines standing out like a map of tributaries to the world's great rivers.

For a long time, it seems you go through life under the pleasant delusion that things stay pretty much the same. You look roughly the same as you've looked since your early twenties; the same chickenpox scars dot your hide here and there; Bob Hope still regales the troops on foreign shores.

Then, one day, you walk into the hardware store and meet the most gorgeous guy in your high school class. His hair has all but disappeared, and he's resting his belly on the counter for support.

It's terrible to see, in one way, but strangely exhilarating in another. "Is that you?" you find yourself wanting to shout in joyful recognition. "Is that really YOU hiding behind there?"

"Where did you get that SPACE between your bottom teeth?"

Because the truth is, things don't stand still in this whirling world, nor should we wish them to. Days dawn, babies come along, we all grow a little older - it's supposed to be fun, I think.

The best musicians aren't the ones who get to the end first. Life is a journey. You're not meant to hurry its pace, or slow it down either.

It's a trip, if you like. I mean to smile my way through it, if I can - just dimple up and enjoy the ride.

EPA Meeting Re: Toxic Waste Site Will Be July 24

EDITOR'S NOTE: This letter was sent to The Star to increase local awareness of progress on the clean-up of Woburn's hazardous waste dump site. Winchester is also concerned with this work: The Aberjona's watershed is partly within the Industriplex site. A public meeting will be held July 24 at 7 p.m. in Woburn High School.

Dear Mr. King:

Enclosed are about a dozen copies of the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) Information Sheet which was handed out at the public information meeting in Woburn on May 21 and also on Town Day.

This sheet gives relevant background information and summarizes the principal alternative clean-up strategies and the recommendations being made to the EPA by the Stauffer Chemical Company which first conducted a Remedial Investigation (RI) of the site and now has completed a Draft Feasibility Study (FS) of clean-up methods.

You have already on file a copy of the Feasibility Study for anyone who wishes to study the original material; this includes an executive summary.

The EPA has extended the public comment period to Aug. 1, 1985. There will be an official public hearing held in Woburn High School on July 24 at 7 p.m. by the EPA. The CAC (Citizens' Advisory Committee) continues to study the recommendations and discuss problem areas with the EPA and DEQE representatives.

I would greatly appreciate your posting a copy of the Information Sheet on the library bulletin board and providing any interested citizens with copies of it, as well as convenient access to the full Feasibility Study.

I also include some copies of two plans from the study which have been marked up by the CAC to make them more legible and comprehensive.

Figure A shows East Woburn and surrounding towns, showing the relationship of "the site" to Reading, the Aberjona River, Wells G & H, the "leukemia cluster" and Winchester.

Figure B shows the waste site with prominent features (hazardous waste, etc.). Contamination of Wells G & H, south of Route 128, has been from sources closer to them. The EPA is still conducting a separate study of this problem, including a Feasibility Study of clean-up methods.

Earlier preliminary investigations of groundwater contamination by Ecology and Environment, Inc. for the APE (1980-81) have shown widespread pollution throughout the Aberjona Aquifer, especially in the Sweetwater Brook area just north of the Winchester boundary "barrier," primarily from organics.

There is no Citizens' Advisory Committee (CAC) for the Aberjona as a whole; it was created by the state specifically for Industriplex-128. The EPA will limit itself to public hearings on any other investigations done by it, unless there is great political pressure to do otherwise.

Thank you very much for your cooperation and interest.

Sincerely,
Thomas D. Ward

Fells Walker Cuffed By Police; Reader Says: 'Dangerous'

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Malcolm Masters, a senior citizen and very good friend of the Town of Winchester for many years, was handcuffed in the Fells a couple of weeks ago, taken to the police station to be booked, and last Monday was fined $100.

Due to a casual conversation with the Town Manager at a social gathering, Mal went to the Fells because his opinion was asked (unofficially) about the surveying of the boundaries of the waterland in the Fells.

The MDC and our Selectmen are aware that many of the No Trespassing signs are in the wrong places and the conservation Commission has been pushing for action to correct this problem.

Mal was in the Fells alone, standing a few feet on the reservoir side of a No Trespassing sign, maps in hand, when approached by a Winchester policeman on duty in the Fells.

He was not allowed to show his papers which give him permission to be on waterland. He was told to leave by a path that would have led him far from where he had left his car.

When he asked to be allowed to follow a path back to his car he was handcuffed, taken to the police station, and booked. (It turned out that the officer had no keys for the handcuffs, a dangerous situation.)

What has happened to the good judgement that we expect of our Police Department, and of our Selectmen, who heard an explanation of this incident within a day or two of its happening?

I can understand how a mistake could be made initially, but I am appalled that sensible discussion and common sense did not bring an immediate end to this case.

It is ironic that during the many years Mal and Claire Masters have lived in Winchester, they have devoted hundreds of hours to helping keep trails in the Fells in good condition for the rest of us to enjoy.

Betsy Ewing
195 Cambridge St.

All-Day Classes Should Be Option

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

As the school year closes I would like to take this opportunity to express my thoughts concerning my son's very positive experience in Winchester's experimental all-day kindergarten.

My son was one of the youngest children, as well as one of the few with no previous pre-school experience. In September, he was lacking in self-confidence and quite shy about being on his own. The change in his attitude toward dealing with the outside world is nothing short of amazing to me. This year was a very positive learning experience for him not only academically but also psychologically and socially.

I would like to thank the very involved and professional staff at Muraco, and in particular Dick Young and Jane Martel. Mrs. Martel inspired the highest confidence in the children, enabling them to be relaxed and self-confident about their place within the class.

In closing, I would like to say that I hope in the future to see at least enough classroom spaces for all of the children whose parents would find this all-day kindergarten program beneficial.

Sincerely,
Ann Marie Lyons

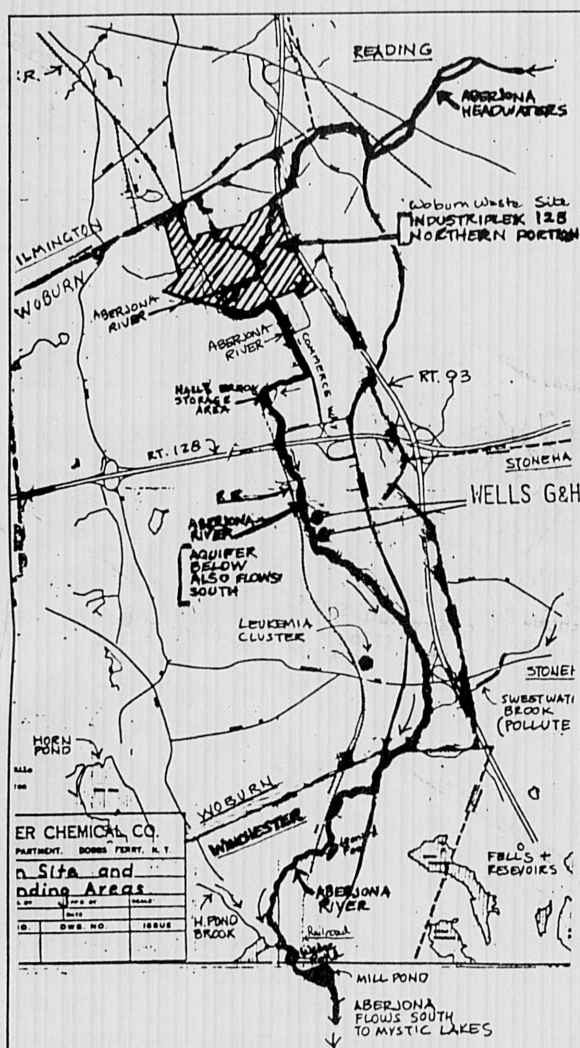

Figure A: The Aberjona River flows directly through the Industriplex site, and later into Wedge Pond, the Mill Pond, and the Mystic Lakes.

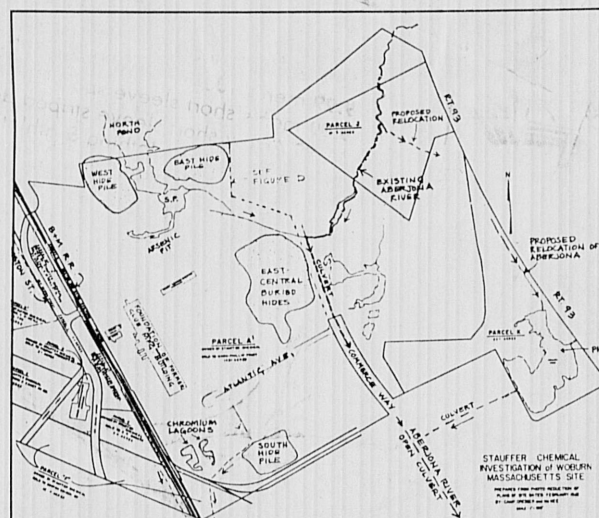

Figure B: Proposed clean-up plans for the Industriplex site in Woburn would include diverting the Aberjona from its present course.

Crowd Gathers Early

By BILL LITTELL

On most mornings, the crowd gathers early at the Palmer Street courts.

Carrying only their racquets, boys and girls — often accompanied by their parents — begin to congregate well before nine o'clock. By the time the tennis balls arrive, these kids are ready.

Soon after, courts 9, 10, 11, and 12 are arenas of blazing activity. Spinning yellow spheres fly everywhere — over the nets and over the fences — as the energetic youngsters try to chase them down.

Ten minutes later, they pick up the balls and sit on the wall adjoining court 9.

The Lesson has begun.

Such is a typical start to the Winchester Youth Tennis Program's day. Beginning at nine o'clock, the Recreation Dept. conducts three morning classes and one afternoon class. Each one is designed for different ages and abilities.

But, according to several players, it is not a real "class." They are just having fun.

"I just like to play," said eleven-year-old Drew Lasley. "It's just a lot of fun."

Andre Towns paid the program an even higher compliment: "I could've been swimming right now, but I wanted to play tennis instead."

This popular program runs from June 24 through Aug. 2, divided into two three-week sessions. The second session begins Monday, and registration will take place at the courts. (Call the Recreation Dept. for details.) The lessons are open to anyone between the ages of eight and sixteen, beginners through intermediate.

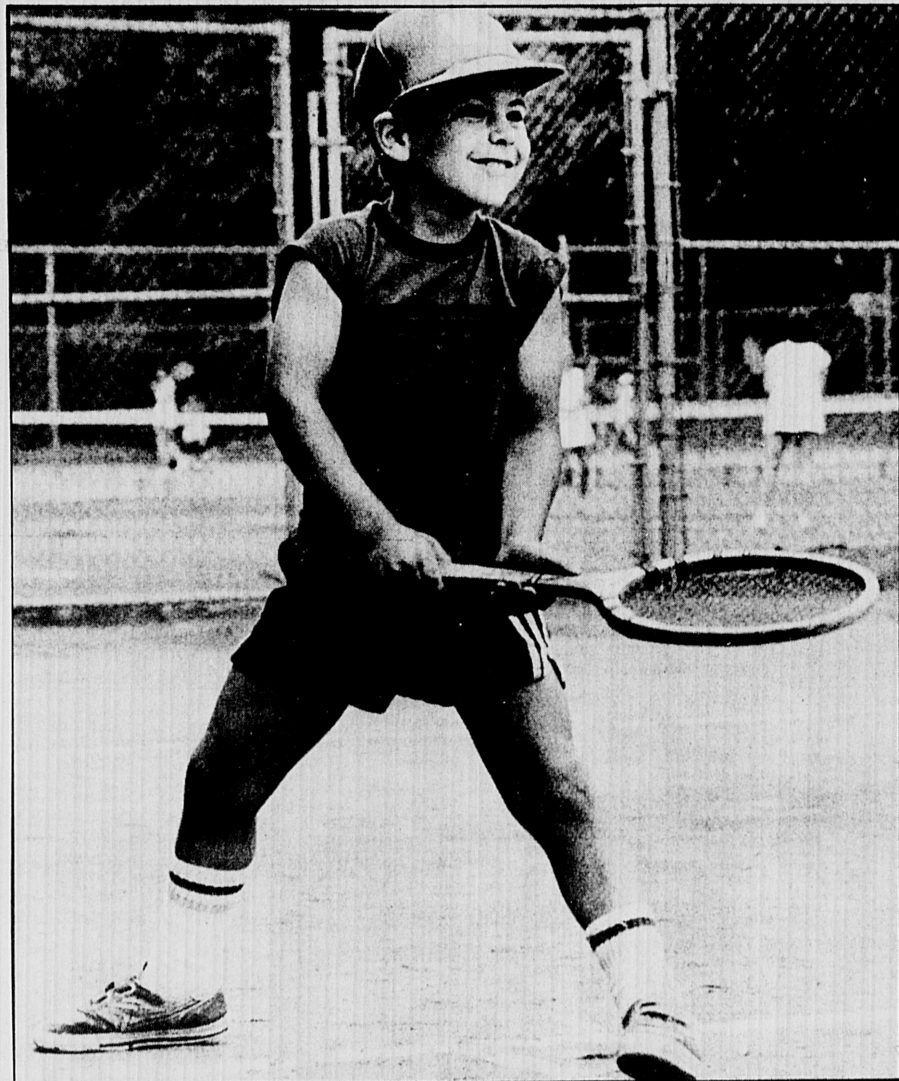

In addition to lessons, the program also sponsors other activities. The annual day trip to the U.S. Pro Championships at Longwood in Chestnut Hill took place yesterday. At this event, the kids are able to see and meet the pros.

And, on the last 3 days of the second session, July 31 and Aug. 1 and 2, a Novice Tournament is being held. Sponsored by the New England Lawn Tennis Association (NELTA), the tournament is only open to beginners and, at this writing, is restricted to players taking lessons. The tournament is designed to promote tennis at the novice level.

For more advanced players, an afternoon ladder is also offered, where both boys and girls can play under more competitive conditions. The top players on the ladder also have the opportunity to engage in team play against neighboring towns.

According to Program Supervisor Donna Tanner, the opportunities for instruction and/or competition can accommodate most youngsters' abilities.

Younger, less experienced players can start out in the Beginners Clinic, and move up through the program until they are ready for the ladder.

Phil DeLuca, 13, has done just that. He began lessons seven years ago, and plays now both on the ladder and on the team.

'The success of the program lies in the fact that the kids keep coming back. Fifty percent of the kids are repeats.'

—Tanner

"My sisters used to play down here," DeLuca explains. "I used to come down and read a book, so when I was six, I just got into the program."

"The teaching is excellent," he continues. "I learned a lot when I first started out. They really teach you well. . . And now it's fun being on the team. It's great to play other towns instead of just local kids."

Like DeLuca, many kids involved in the lessons return year after year.

"The success of the program lies in the fact that the kids keep coming back," said Tanner. "Fifty percent of the kids are repeats."

"I think one reason for that is that the instructors enjoy being with the kids as much as the kids enjoy being with the instructors," she added.

Diane Intravia and Alison Johnson, the instructors, would agree.

"They're great kids," said Johnson. "And after a while, they get to know each other and they loosen up and start being themselves. It's real rewarding to see them gain confidence in themselves."

"I love working with them," agreed Intravia. "It's very rewarding to see them improving every day."

Tennis games are not the only objects of improvement, though.

Winchester won three of four games in Babe Ruth 14 to 15-year-old action over the weekend.

The locals lost the Friday game, 7-6, when Methuen tallied four times in the top of the sixth frame to take a 7-4 lead.

On Saturday, Winchester ramblled by Bedford by a score of 27-0, and then rallied in the late innings to defeat Burlington on Sunday, 15-7. On Monday at Leland Park they edged Woburn, 5-4.

Winchester jumped into an early 3-0 lead in the game with Methuen. In the bottom of the first inning in the game at Manchester Field, Dave Colozzi walked, and Greg Wyse reached on a fielder's choice, and then stole second base.

After J.R. Morton went out, Andy Sexeny walked and Al Nasson doubled in Wyse. Sean McElhinney reached on an error with Sexeny and Nasson circling the bases with the second and third runs of the inning.

Methuen got on the scoreboard in the top of the third, and knotted the count at 3-3 with two runs in the fourth frame.

Winchester moved ahead in the bottom of the inning. Shane Wyse walked and Colozzi singled. Greg Wyse moved the runners along with a sacrifice. Morton walked, and Shane Wyse scored on a wild pitch.

Methuen then tallied four times to take a 7-4 lead going into the bottom of the sixth.

The home team rallied to cut the lead to a run in the bottom of the inning, on a triple, a single, a wild pitch, and a walk, but it was not enough.

Eric Cyr was the winning pitching for the third consecutive year. Al Nasson took the loss.

Winchester stranded nine runners, five in the initial three innings.

The Bedford game was all Winchester as the Sachems pounded out 21 hits and crossed the plate 27 times. Sean McElhinney, working on the mound, had all the support he needed as his mates scored early and often.

Mickey Feeley had three hits for the winners, and Al Nasson, Andy Sexeny, Sean McElhinney, Vandy French, and Shane Wyse chipped in with two each. J.R. Morton belted a 350-foot homer.

Neil Harrington worked the final three innings, allowing one hit.

The victory over Burlington was a come-from-behind effort with the locals trailing 7-2 going into the fifth inning.

Burlington jumped out front first, scoring three times on four hits.

Winchester scored a single run in the top of the second in the game at Morrelli Field. Sexeny walked, moved to second on a balk, and scored on an error.

Burlington got that run back in the bottom of the same inning on a triple and a wild pitch.

After a rain delay Winchester tallied another run in the top of the third inning on three errors.

But, in the bottom of the fourth frame, Burlington scored three more times, and seemingly had the game under control.

But, a six-run explosion by the Sachems turned the contest around in the top of the fifth inning. Four Winchester batters walked, and McElhinney supplied the big hit, a three-run triple.

The lead was increased to 10-7 in the top of the sixth. Colozzi doubled and Greg Wyse sacrificed him along to second. Morton walked and stole second. Nasson singled scoring Colozzi. Nasson stole second with Morton scoring on the throw.

The locals scored five insurance runs in the top of the seventh on hits by Colozzi, Greg Wyse, Nasson, and Mike Casalinuovo.

Sean McElhinney worked on the mound after coming in relief of John Kirkpatrick. Colozzi and Greg Wyse were on base all day, and Al Nasson had several key hits.

In the Monday contest, Woburn scored a run off of John Kirkpatrick in the top of the first inning.

But the Winchester team bounced back with a run of its own in the bottom of the inning. Dave Colozzi reached on an error. French grounded out on a close play at first and Colozzi moved to second. Morton walked and Nasson singled Colozzi home.

The Flight In Space And Communication

By STEVE NORTON

Does space flight have any affect upon communication? Can weightlessness affect mental and physical endurance?

Don Lee, marathon runner and high school English teacher, and former Bay State resident hopes to answer these questions after personally orbiting the earth in the space shuttle next year.

Each applicant for the Teacher in Space Project (TSP) had to explain a project he or she would possibly conduct if chosen to ride the shuttle in early 1986.

Lee plans to teach an English class. His lesson will be on communication skills before, during and after the space flight and he intends to teach it "live" via satellite to the entire nation.

Lee's "Classroom in the Sky" is like a 21st century "field trip."

Another project Lee hopes to complete during the shuttle mission is to run a marathon or do a triathlon. This test of endurance in a weightlessness environment could provide some interesting data for future shuttle and space station activity.

Lee is already an accomplished 26.2 mile marathoner and triathlete (3 events: swim, bike, run) and will use the standard treadmill for the bike and run events, but the swim could be very interesting.

In another part of the application, each teacher had to answer several essay questions such as: describe their communication skills, their philosophy of teaching and explain why they wanted to be the first U.S. citizen in space.

The applications are reviewed in Washington, D.C., then forwarded to the applicant's home state. Then each state announces two candidates to attend a national workshop. From this workshop 10 semi-finalists are chosen by a NASA evolution committee. Finally, in September the announcement of the selected teacher and a backup candidate will be made.

Lee hopes his enthusiastic "campaign" will enable his application to receive a second look from the judges. He has written letters to congressmen, senators, and educators, hoping for their support and attention. He even sent President Reagan a Valentine, thanking the president for the opportunity to apply for the Teacher in Space Project.

Don Lee entered the 1985 Boston Marathon wearing a "space suit." With this famous 26.2 mile race he hoped to attract attention to the Teacher in Space Project in general and to his enthusiastic "campaign" efforts to be the chosen teacher in particular.

Opportunity, communication and participation are very much part of the spirit of being a good teacher. In the spirit of America, Don Lee is enthusiastically demonstrating his spirit through his campaign to be the teacher in the Teacher in Space Program.

The Runner's Eye

By Steve Norton

Dear Readers,

Many of you have written to the "Eye" asking what brand of running shoe I recommend. Instead of naming brands, I suggest you use the following guidelines in selecting a pair of running shoes.

Make sure they have strong heels for a good fit.

You need good flexibility in the forefoot, where the toes bend and also needed are fairly high back levels, since tight Achilles tendons are a common problem.

Midsoles should be fairly soft, but not too soft, and should not flatten out too easily.

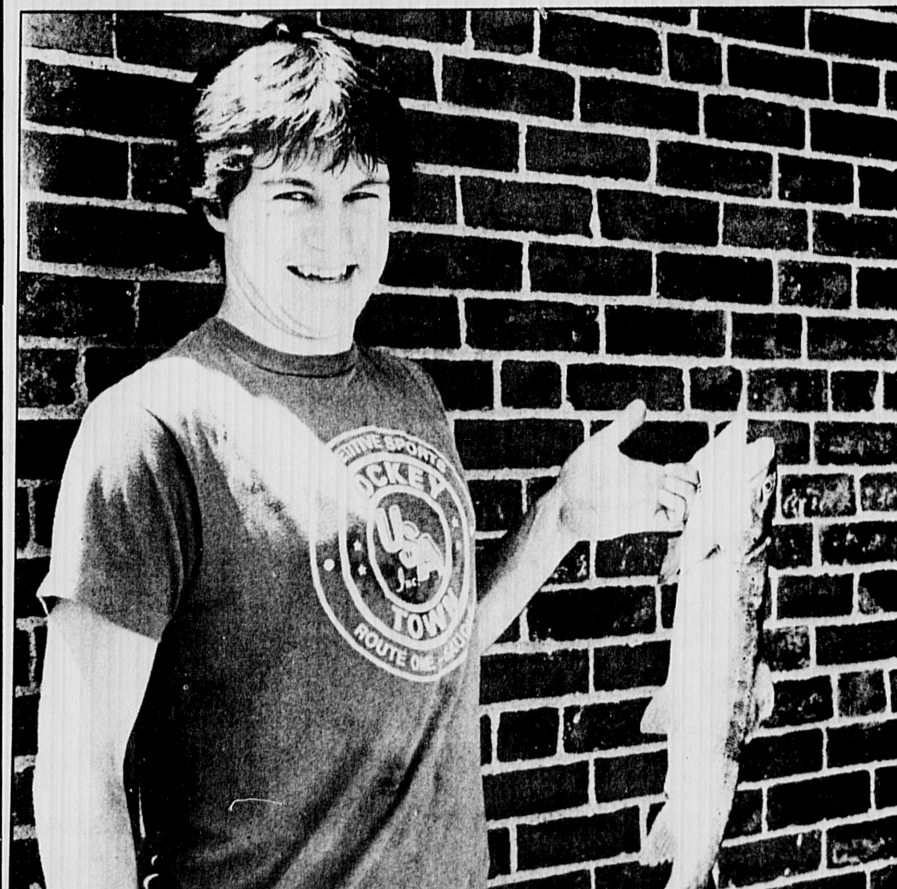

Heel counters should be high enough to surround the foot and accommodate orthotic device if needed.

Heel counters should be securely fastened to the sole so counter does not bend or come loose.

Quality construction is important, including stitching along seams, rubber in midsole and outsole, bonding between outsole and midsole.

Material used in construction should be nylon or cowhide. Most shoes are a combination of both. Goretex, however, is a new promising material.

Happy shoe hunting.

Under the plan, the towns of Winchester and Arlington would share use of a consortium ambulance stationed at the Armstrong Ambulance service garage in Arlington.

Winchester's own ambulance would normally arrive first at the scene, where firefighters could assess the situation and again determine if paramedics were needed.

Winchester Fire Chief Robert McElhinney was unhappy with the plan. He said Winchester's own emergency team is top-notch and paramedics may be unnecessary.

his engineers "spent the weekend looking for an alternative to the 20-foot retention tank." Rotondi said he has come up with two possibilities: an underground holding tank or a combination holding tank/basin.

He said the holding tank would be enclosed underground and water would either be released periodically or it would be pumped out.

With a combination holding tank/basin, some water would be stored in a metal tank, while the rest would be caught in an open basin area where the water could gradually evaporate.

"We felt it would be better to bring up a plan that's not so tightly over-drawn," said Rotondi about the Commission's concerns. "We felt that if we were less restrictive — then we can see what they say and work with them to come up with something good."

Basketball Program Set

The Winchester Recreation Department will be conducting a pilot program for open community use of the lighted basketball courts at Ginn Field. During the period of July 9 through July 29, the lights at the court will be turned on from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. nightly for pick up games and recreational play. Exceptions to this use for open play will be on the dates listed below. On these selected dates, the courts have been reserved for league play by the Winchester Summer League Team.

These dates are as follows: July 9 (the initial night of the pilot program period), July 17, July 22.

the enjoyment it generates, then this program should receive accolades. When asked what they thought of it, almost every player's immediate reply was that the program was "fun."

Meanwhile, the youngsters are progressing in the play of a lifetime sport.

John Hamilton, though, views this improvement in somewhat more tangible terms: "This is great. Before, I couldn't even hit the ball in the air."

monwealth of Massachusetts," said the chief. "I would hate to see the town lose what it has."

"I cannot see, after 30 years of dealing with severe trauma injuries, where the [Winchester] service can be improved."

Selectman Judith Muggia said she sees a limited need for the service. Winchester is a small town, just six miles in area, she said, with its own hospital and 26 trained emergency medical technicians on the firefighting staff.

"At what level is the town responsible for this kind of extra service when our records indicate at least three years with no fatalities due to lack of expertise (or) lack of an ambulance?" she asked.

Selectmen plan to meet again with consortium representatives to get more information on the plan.

Hospitals and town officials in the area have been debating a regional paramedics network since 1981.

Howard, meanwhile, said she was encouraged by Rotondi's plans to deal with potential flooding at the site.

"Other than needing more specifics on the retention tank, I don't think there is anything else that we are dissatisfied with."

"I think his plan to cover up the brook with a drain pipe is a fairly standard procedure. And they do have a storage basin at top. They have addressed the problem of flooding, so as far as we're concerned, if they just give us more details, I don't think there is much more we need."

She said the board will issue an order of conditions once it approves the plans. After that, Rotondi will have 10 days to appeal the board's ruling if he disagrees with their finding. She added that the board can extend the public hearing to a second night if members feel they need more information.

Woburn added two more runs in their half of the second on a walk, a hit, and an error, but once again Winchester bounced back.

Three runners crossed the plate to make the score, 4-3, Winchester. But, from that point in the game the pitchers took over, and the game remained scoreless until the seventh frame.

But Woburn knotted the count in the top of the seventh on a double and a single.

Winchester tallied the game-winner in the bottom of the inning. Al Nason tripled to deep left field, and Sean McElhinney, who had hit the big triple on Sunday, hit a ground ball to second base.

The Woburn fielder threw to first in an effort to get the racing McElhinney, who slid into the base. The ball was bobbled and Nason scrambled home with the game-winner.

Kirkpatrick pitched five strong innings of ball, and Morton came on in relief for the final two innings.

Nason has a 10 for 14 series to date.

What To Visit

Clockwise from top left: Pedestrians rush across the bridge in Boston Public Garden. Lumus Grebnevel, formerly of Arlington, keeps his bean sack in the air. A pidgeon flies over the gardens. The hunter prevails, as this hawk enjoys a pigeon lunch. Benjamin Stookey, 5, plays in the Garden's trees. The Common is ripe for people watching. Common Boston And Public Grow With

Story by Anne Marie Reidy

One part of Boston mirrors the city in miniature: Boston Common and the Public Gardens.

Both were set up for the pleasure of all residents — something other cities have adopted.

But Boston's tradition is longstanding. The Common was set up as pasture land shared by all the city's freeholders when Boston was first settled, in the early 17th century.

The Public Garden evolved out of the efforts of early Back Bay residents. To this day, volunteers raise funds to help maintain it.

Both parks are well known: one for demonstrations and street-corner speakers who, over the years, reflect the city's patchwork diversity; the other, for the elegant setting and studied beauty mirroring the city's legendary formality and love of learning.

Young office workers brown bag their lunches, or carry sandwiches from fast-food restaurants lining Tremont st.

Circles of Trivial Pursuit players sprout like mushrooms after a rain. Sunworshippers stretch out on the grass, making the most of the opportunity. Shoes come off (so do some shirts), slacks are rolled to the knee — a few even bring coconut-scented lotion.

Tanners seem oblivious to all that's going on around them. And there's plenty going on.

Lunchtime may find a street musician or two working on the Common, offering anything from rock to jazz on a single saxophone to classical guitar.

A group may gather in a quiet corner to practice Renaissance madrigals together on recorders — wooden flutelike instruments.

At the very least, the Park Street Church at the corner serenades loungers with noon bells.

By the subway station, vendors sell newspapers and magazines, straw handbags, silver foil balloons.

Some days, informal lobbyists leaflet people crossing the Common, and streetcorner orators make their case for some cause.

Sometimes, it's several sides of the same issue — at once.

On one patch of grass, a lively Frisbee game criss-crosses through a patch of fat, sassy pigeons, causing a picturesque flutter — but the birds settle back down only a few feet away.

A group of youngsters stomp barefoot in the "Frog Pond," a spray fountain and wading pool. There are a few adults cooling their toes, too — some with toddlers in han-

Tourists find the Common a pleasant spot to sit and rest aching feet; families traveling with little ones find it a convenient spot to let the kids work off a little excess energy.

And, although like most big city parks, the Common after dark does present certain hazards, in recent years it has enjoyed a rebirth in the evenings.

A controversial series of popular music concerts — controversial because, while they require ticket purchases, they are held on land Bostonians traditionally hold open to all — has been well attended.

For pure people-watching, or getting a pulse on the city, the Common is the place to go.

The Common

Any sunny summer day, the broad green patches of lawn at the Common are sprinkled with State House staffers, tourists and street people.

Thread: Common Gardens The Times

The Public Garden

Boston's Public Garden may be one of the smaller gems in the city's famed Emerald Necklace of parks — but it is among the most precious to many people.

The country's oldest botanical garden, it has an orderly, mannered feeling to it, a strong contrast with the Common just across the street.

Formal plantings of flowers, shrubs and trees line the paths, recalling the 19th century formality of its establishment.

In fact, Back Bay supporters of the garden hold an annual costumed Easter Parade to raise funds for special projects.

Long, narrow beds of marigolds, coleus, and lantanas complement oval beds of tea roses and evergreens.

Patterned swirls of red and white wax begonias fill other beds near the entrances.

Ancient, honorable trees — American elm, ginkgo, Norway maple, weeping willow, and others, all labeled — shade the walks and benches. They make the Public Garden an oasis of cool, even on the most sweltering days.

Enjoyment of the Public Garden is meant to be more passive than at the Common.

Picnicking is not allowed in the Public Garden — but the Common is so close by, that's not a problem. And pets are banned, as is sitting or walking on the grass — but neither rule seems to be heavily enforced.

Still, most visitors seem happy to stroll or sit in the shade.

A wide stone pedestrian bridge crosses the small man-made lagoon in the center of the Garden.

If it looks familiar, that may be because it is a replica, in miniature, of the famous Brooklyn Bridge.

But it is also possible it's familiar as one of the illustrations in Robert McCloskey's children's classic, "Make Way For Ducklings."

The little island where Mack, Pack, Quack and their feathery siblings lived is visible from the bridge, too.

But there's a much better view from the Swan Boats — a Boston tradition since 1877.

The boats are such a tradition that when Carol Channing was in town a few years ago for a road show, a local television station asked to interview her. She agreed — and they talked on the Swan Boats.

The return of the elegant white Swan Boats from winter quarters have marked the beginning of summer each year for Bostonians.

The boats — actually, wide flat barges with park benches on them — are people-powered.

Teenagers sit, enveloped in a giant white swan, and bicycle all day, turning the giant paddlewheels.

Gears are designed so a leisurely pace is enough to propel a fully loaded boat around the lagoon.

For 90 cents (50 cents, under age 12), riders can take a cooling turn around the lagoon — about a 10-minute ride.

Many visitors bring old bread, and feed the ducks who — well-trained — cluster around the boats.

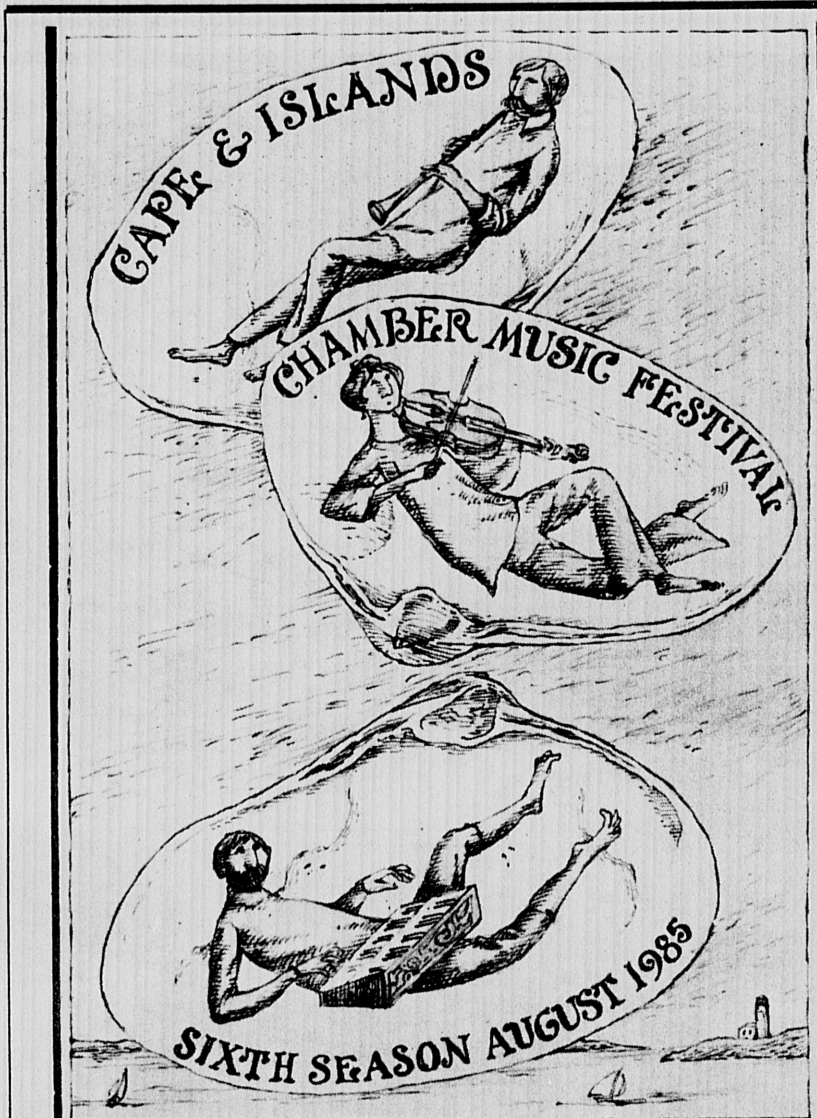

At the end of the ride, those who want to ride again can simply pay another fare. They needn't wait in line again. That's ideal for little ones, or adults whose feet have succumbed to the Freedom Trail.

The Swan Boats operate until October from 10 to 5 every day, unless the weather is very rainy or windy. To check if the weather has cancelled the rides, call 522-1966.

For a taste of the studied elegance Boston is noted for, a stroll through the Public Garden — complete with Swan Boat ride — is the answer.

What To Do

Come To The Cape:

Chamber Music Extraordinaire Sparks Summer

By Leslie Kandell

Cultural life on Cape Cod will again be enriched this August as the expanding Cape and Islands Chamber Music Festival moves into its sixth year.

Packed into the two and a half weeks Aug. 7 and 25 are 10 concerts in several locations on the Cape, plus open rehearsals, guest speakers, children's concerts and post-concert receptions.

The festival's founder and artistic director is pianist Samuel Sanders. In addition to holding faculty positions at the Juilliard School and Peabody Conservatory, he appears regularly in recital with Itzhak Perlman, Mstislav Rostropovich, Beverly Sills, Pinchas Zukerman, Paula Robison and Yo-Yo Ma. Sanders has also founded Musica Camerit, the resident chamber ensemble of New York's Hebrew Arts School.

Most of this summer's performances will be in local congregational churches, but this year a new site has been added — the synagogue in Hyannis.

Other concerts will take place in Wellfleet, Woods Hole, Provincetown, Edgartown and Nantucket.

In addition to Cape residents, the concert audiences are made up of vacationers — from all parts of the world, as Sanders points out.

While each town has its own individual character, all are naturals for Sanders' brand of intimate musical performance. There are no white jackets; musicians perform in suits to a casually dressed audience — and if it's hot, in shirtsleeves.

'People who might be put off by contemporary music can relate to it better when the composer is there to talk about the piece,' says Samuel Sanders.

"I like informality," said Sanders. "It brings closeness between the audience and the performers without compromising the music."

In designing the group's format, the chamber music festival that most influenced Sanders was Aston Magna.

Based in Great Barrington, Aston Magna formerly sponsored a three-week institute for the study of philosophy and arts relevant to the period of the music chosen for public performance. Recently, Aston Magna has begun to give concerts in other parts of the state.

Cape and Islands, in addition to its several locations, has a composer in residence for the season, to work with the musicians and address listeners about his work.

Sanders believes that both audience and performers have learned from having a composer in their midst.

"People who might be put off by contemporary music can relate to it better when the composer is there to talk about the piece," he observed.

Last summer the composer was Ezra Laderman, and this year it will be Earl Kim, Harvard professor who studied with Schoenberg and Sessions, and who has been in residence at Marlboro and Tanglewood.

Two works by Kim are scheduled: one is writings of Chekov and Beckett set for two violins, piano and narrator.

The narrator will be mezzo-soprano Elaine Bonazzi, who sang the role of Mrs. Lovett in the New York City Opera's winter production of Sweeney Todd.

The other Kim work, a virtuoso violin piece called Caprices, will be performed by Stephanie Chase, a Bronze medal winner at Moscow's Tchaikovsky competition who is currently at the Boston Conservatory and a member of the Boston Chamber Music Society.

Kim will be present at an open rehearsal to coach the performers and discuss his work with the audience.

Another appeal of Aston Magna to Sanders was the concept of focusing on a particular theme.

Accordingly, he has planned an "Irish Week" to open the season, beginning with a speech by William Shannon, former Ambassador to the Republic of Ireland.

Tenor Robert White — no stranger to the Cape and Islands Festival — will sing arrangements of Irish songs, ranging from anonymous folk music to Beethoven. There will also be chamber works by Irish composers, and other related events such as step-dancing.

Sanders says he doesn't like to do all the keyboard work himself. This summer he shares that department with forte-pianist Steven Lubin, a Harvard, Juilliard and NYU alumnus who directs the Mozartean players and performs with groups that use original instruments.

The other pianist is 14-year-old Navah Perlman, daughter of violinist Itzhak Perlman, who will give a recital of mostly Chopin conceived to attract a younger audience in addition to the adult one.

Last year's teenage soloist, cellist Joshua Bell, was successful enough in reaching this new audience segment so that Sanders decided to give one such concert each summer.

Miss Perlman's concert is not necessarily for children, however; there will be a children's concert in Hyannis Aug. 16 at 2 p.m.

Although he has appeared with the world's foremost artists, Sanders does not care for the term "accompanist," which denotes someone who goes along. He prefers "collaborative pianist," since he feels he is not just an accessory to the performance, but coexists on an equal basis with the "soloist."

A gentle, creative, disciplined man, Sanders became a pianist for reasons of health. His chief career hopes were to play either bassoon or baseball, but a defective heart valve ruled out these choices.

He minimizes the trauma of his first operation ("I was a kid and not playing concerts, so there was no problem") and his second (I played till a week before — it's one way to get it off your mind") but the third operation forced him to concede that "it has interfered with my career and not made my life easier."

During one sold-out Carnegie Hall appearance he went into heart failure and after finishing the concert, went straight to the hospital.

Sanders is connected to the Cape by marriage. His wife, painter Rhoda Ross, was brought up in the Plymouth area, and her brother, violinist Barry Ross of the Kalamazoo Orchestra, helped mount the first program in Plymouth six years ago.

Sanders stresses the numbers of local people who have since sustained the festival — friends, board members, and residents who donate housing, driving, ushering and myriad other essentials.

Recognizing the vacationers on the Cape do not like to travel around, the concerts move to where the audiences are. But while there are ticket locations all over the Cape now, the home address for tickets and information on the varied programs, schedules and curtain times, is:

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — It may be time for discussions to reach new agreements with mate, partner or roommate. You may even want to draw up a legal contract. In another matter, don't be pressured into making a big decision — take your time.

Our Children Romance Is In The Air

By Willard Abraham
Ph.D.

Romance seems to be in the air, and it is hitting some of "our children." Let's listen to them.

Q. I am 17 years old and my problem is that I like this guy down the street. But he is shy around me.

A. You might consider becoming involved in a school activity in which he is interested or try through other friends to find out if you have similar interests. In this way you will be able to spend time with him in a group, have the opportunity to talk, and share common interests. This might develop into a friendship.

Q. I am 17 years old and my problem is that I like this guy down the street. But he is shy around me.

A. You also might try to find out if you have friends in common who can arrange an outing or an activity that you both could attend. Another idea may be to invite him to a special activity, such as a school dance, football game or skating party. This way he will know you're interested. Remember, it's just as hard for boys to ask for girls out the first time as it is for girls to do this.

What Do You Say

What Is Your Favorite Book?

By WILLIAM HAYNES

Beth Katra, 25
Systems Network Coordinator,
Harvard University
Arlington Heights

I've got a lot of books I like, but I'll say The Phantom Tollbooth. I think it's very relaxing and entertaining. It's about a kid who goes into another land and learns a lot of things about himself. It's not just for kids. The kid finds himself. It's interesting and funny.

Marion O'Connell, 64
Receptionist, Division of Employment Security at Charles F. Hurley Building
Arlington

I like those books put out by Loretta Kennedy. She put out Maggie, Libby, and Kitty. They are very good reading. They are fantastic, very wholesome reading, 'home-life' stories. About a young girl growing up, getting married, and having a family. I don't like trash. I wouldn't waste my hours on it. Right now I am reading The Days of Winter, by Cynthia Freeman. It takes place in Paris during the Second World War. I read a lot going back and forth on the bus and at lunch time.

Karen Murphy, 42
Bookstore Clerk
Lexington

My favorite book is the novel I am writing. It's about two brothers who are attorneys, who work together but hate each other, and the woman who comes between them. I should be done in four months. This is my first novel. I worked as a freelance writer in New York for a time a while ago. Now, in my novel, I'm on the eighth chapter out of ten and the characters have come alive, so it's much easier to write.

Amy Legee, 18
Cashier, CVS in Belmont
Arlington

I'd have to say A Clockwork Orange. The writer made a totally new language. It was a very violent book. I like reading weird books. I like Sherlock Holmes books too. A Clockwork Orange is a statement about the world.

Shawn Dwyer, 18
Night Crew Worker,
Purity Supreme
Woburn

My favorite book is The Best Days of Patton. It was well written. I liked reading about his tactics. He was against all the odds but he won.

Garry Rogers, 18
Night Crew Worker,
Purity Supreme
Winchester

My favorite book is The Once and Future King. It's about King Arthur and the Round Table. I like other fantasies like that too. I wish I was born back then. I like all the fighting they do and all the quests they go on.

Museum Sets Folk Singer

For more than 200 years, songs and ballads have been a major form of entertainment throughout New England.

Before the days of radio and television, friends and neighbors met to share songs and stories at husking and apple-paring "bees," sugaring-off "frolics," and other gatherings. On July 28 at 2 p.m., Folkways recording artist Jim Douglas will present a concert of traditional songs and ballads at the Museum of Our National Heritage.

Admission is $1 for adults, and 50 cents children.

A resident of Connecticut, Douglas has traveled throughout New England collecting and sharing songs that have been sung for generations.

He holds a master's degree in history from the University of Connecticut and has appeared at thousands of schools, as well as numerous libraries, historical societies, folk festivals, and coffeehouses along the Atlantic seaboard.

He has appeared on radio and television and has two records on the Folkways label: A Peddler's Pack and Yankee Notions. He accompanies himself with guitar, English concertina, mountain dulcimer, and limberjack.

Fitness Boom Spurs Injury Boom

By Janet Gordon

Does your body look good but feel bad? While the majority of us are busy creating the fitness boom, sports medical professionals are learning to cope with an injury boom.

Dr. Philip Claussen, a sports medical practitioner from Chicago and former Olympic competitor, warns that too many fitness fanatics may ignore injuries in the hope that they'll heal without treatment.

"Injuries are like bills," he said. "If you ignore them, they only get worse."

Rest, Ice, Compression and Elevation.

"Keep the injured limb elevated above your heart, if possible, wrap it to contain the swelling, apply ice for 20-minute periods every hour for 36 hours and rest," he explained.

"If the pain persists or the injury seems serious, see a doctor as soon as possible."

Claussen offered additional guidelines for treatment of some of the most common sports injuries:

— Tennis or golfer's elbow. This injury, a tearing at the origin of the flexor or extensor muscle of the elbow, causes the elbow to swell and become tender to the touch. It also can weaken a person's grip.

The injury is caused when these muscles are contracted suddenly and forcefully in activities such as tennis, golf, baseball or pole-vaulting.

Appropriate treatment is ice for 36 hours, followed by moist heat, range-of-motion and strengthening exercises and supportive wrap.

— Sprained ankle. This refers to a variety of injuries to the ankle ligament ranging from a slight irritation to a complete tear. The injuries result from an unnatural extension or flexion of the joint during activities such as football, basketball, ice skating or jogging.

The tender, swollen and weak ankle should be iced for the first 36 hours, elevated and wrapped to compress swelling. After 36 hours, alternate heat and ice and do range-of-motion and strengthening exercises.

— Sore shoulder. Usually caused by bursitis, an inflammation of tissue between tendon and bone, this injury can come about after being hit or falling in contact sports such as football or hockey. It also can result from chronic irritation from overuse in sports such as swimming, golfing, throwing or weightlifting.

Treatment includes ice for 36 hours, rest and range-of-motion strengthening exercises. This injury also may require electrical physical therapy.

— Lower back strain. Generally the results of muscle spasms or a misalignment of the lower back joints. This injury can be caused by trauma such as twisting or turning sharply while lifting heavy weights; chronic irritation from aerobic dancing, jogging or football, or bad posture and excessive body weight.

Symptoms include tightness, stiffness, inability to move freely and a dull ache or shooting pain.

Treatment includes moist heat, a supportive device such as a brace, range-of-motion strengthening and stretching exercises, chiropractic manipulation and correction of posture, if necessary, and weight loss.

— Knee injuries. According to Claussen, these injuries are some of the most prevalent of all sports injuries.

"Since there are so many things that can go wrong with a knee joint," he said, "it's impossible to outline one consistent treatment. The best advice I can give is to see a professional."

Tired Feet? These Tips Should Help

By Janet Gordon
Copley News Service

Walking is becoming a passion. People throughout the world are walking for pleasure, exercise and health. It can improve the cardiovascular system and is a convenient and easy exercise to pursue. But it also can lead to foot fatigue.

The first symptoms of foot fatigue are overall tiredness, lack of desire to continue walking or standing, irritability or dizziness. As fatigue continues, a burning sensation or sharp pain often occurs in the foot.

About 85 percent of foot fatigue is caused by excess walking or standing, especially when wearing ill-fitting shoes, according to Dr. A. Louis Shure, podiatrist, foot surgeon and director of New York's Accent On Feet, an outpatient foot care facility. The remaining 15 percent can be caused either by poor circulation or musculoskeletal foot deformities such as flat feet, bunions or corns.

Shure said, "Pain is an index or barometer that something is wrong and often can be prevented." Following are tips to ward off foot fatigue, recommended by Shure and compiled by Combe Inc., makers of Johnson's foot care products. The tips may not be appropriate for people with diabetes or circulatory problems.

— Buy the right size shoes. An easy way to ensure a better fit is to make sure there is one index finger-breadth between the foot and the top of the shoe.

— When you are planning on walking or standing for more than three hours, heels should be 2 inches or lower. Lower heels distribute your weight evenly and usually will cause less pain over a long day.

— Wear cotton socks that absorb perspiration and don't constrict circulation. Lighter weight pantyhose are comfortable and allow feet to "breathe."

— Prevent feet from slipping by placing a mini-sole in your shoe. Corns and callouses are caused by friction of the foot moving backward and forward in the shoe.

Companies Reward Physically Fit

By Eric Jude

It seems that everyone's doing it. Across the United States people are running, stretching, swimming, weightlifting, working out and shaping up. Being physically fit these days not only is good for you, it's "in." And now, thanks to a growing number of life insurance companies, it's also financially rewarding.

The reward is coming in the form of fitness discounts to physically fit non-smokers.

Betting that people who exercise regularly and do not smoke are better underwriting risks than sedentary people, a few life insurance companies now offer fitness discounts that cut premiums significantly — as much as 50 percent, according to a spokesman for ITT Life Insurance Corp. of Minneapolis.

To receive these discounts, also called "preferred risk" discounts, you need only pass a medical exam, usually paid for by the insurer, that certifies you are physically fit. Among the factors evaluated are weight, blood pressure, cholesterol level and family medical histories. In addition, you must not have smoked cigarettes for at least 12 months prior to the exam. Most companies also require that you participate in a regular exercise program.

"This doesn't mean you have to be a world-class runner in order to qualify," explains Donald E. Kreider, ITT Life vice president. "We're simply looking for non-smokers with good height-weight ratios and good blood pressure readings."

Currently, 90 percent of U.S. families own life insurance, paying $40 billion annually for their policies. Millions of those policyholders may be eligible for fitness discounts.

Published reports estimate that two-thirds of the U.S. population does not smoke and that 55 million Americans exercise regularly. Depending on the insurance company, the savings for those who qualify can be significant. Discounts range from 5 percent to 15 percent for non-smokers and from 35 percent and up for non-smoking exercisers.

To shop for a fitness discount, insurance experts recommend that you:

— Make sure you are quoted a fitness or preferred risk rate instead of the more expensive standard rate given to most applicants.

Also, make sure the rate quoted is more than just a non-smoking discount. While these rates may reduce premiums, fitness discounts cut premiums still further.

— Shop around. Don't settle for the first quote you get, even if it's lower than your current premium. Talking to at least three agents can save hundreds of dollars — dollars that can be saved or spent on something else.

Health Care Changes Benefit Consumers

By Gregg Howard

Changes occurring in the health-care field mean good news to the consumer.

Many changes represent an attempt by health-care providers to clamp down on runaway medical costs, which total nearly $300 billion annually in the United States. Other changes reflect the public's growing insistence on personalized health care, speedy medical attention, convenience and the ability to take greater responsibility for their own well-being.

Here is a roundup of some health-care concepts working to meet these demands.

— Birth Centers. The surroundings chosen for giving birth appear to have come full circle in the '80s. Most women gave birth at home prior to the 1920s when advances in medical technology and better health insurance led them to deliver in hospital settings.

Now many women of childbearing age are questioning the need to be hospitalized for what is essentially a normal, healthy human event. Some of these women are choosing to have their babies in their own homes with the help of a licensed nurse-midwife. Others are selecting birthing centers.

Also known as maternity centers or alternative birth centers, these freestanding units reflect the growing commitment to natural childbirth, extensive prenatal counseling and avoidance of drugs — all within a comfortable atmosphere that includes the personal attention of certified nurse-midwives.

There are more than 120 such birth facilities scattered throughout the United States. Their home-like interiors are combined with modern medical equipment and highly professional staffs. Because one out of every five births involves some complications, all birth centers follow pre-established procedures to quickly and safely transport a patient in need to a nearby hospital for supervision.

Costs usually are lower at birth centers than in a hospital and most private insurers now reimburse their subscribers for delivery at these facilities.

— Home Health Care. As a result of changes in laws that specify how the federal government reimburses hospitals for patient care, many hospitals and physicians now discharge patients as soon as possible — sometimes when they still are in need of medical supervision. One solution to this problem is home health care.

An estimated 8,000 agencies across the country offer a variety of health-care services including some that use high-tech medical equipment. Previously, patients had to spend lengthy periods of time in the hospital to receive high-tech treatment. These treatments include intravenous therapy, parenteral nutrition, kidney dialysis and forms of chemotherapy, according to Linda Duval, R.N., assistant vice president of Olsten Health Care Services.

Another reason for the growth in home health care is the increasing number of people over the age of 65. Many of these people may require medical assistance, but may not want to live in a nursing home. For them, home health-care agencies provide a wide range of professionals such as registered nurses, physical therapists, homemakers, home health aides and other ancillary personnel.

A major advantage to at-home care is that patients receive only the specific treatment they require, at a cost substantially lower than in-hospital care. The average cost for a day's stay in the hospital is approximately $350, while the average home treatment cost per day is only $39, according to Dan Lerman, program director for ambulatory care of the American Hospital Association.

— Emergency Centers. If you've ever waited for treatment at a hospital emergency room, you may welcome the growing number of "emergenciers." These immediate-care facilities, most often found in neighborhood shopping malls or storefronts, provide convenient, prompt attention and lower cost often not found in hospital emergency rooms.

About 600 emergency centers have cropped up throughout the United States. Most of the centers are owned by physicians or private hospital chains, although some hospitals now are beginning to open their own emergenciers.

Question Dentist For Best Choice

By Eric Jude

How do you know you're getting the most for your money when you visit the dentist? And how can you tell if you're getting quality care?

These and other questions are on the minds of wise dental consumers. The subjects may seem elementary, but in today's economy, it pays to hone your skills in looking for and getting good dental care.

According to the 27,000-member Academy of General Dentistry, the first task is to find a dentist you are comfortable with and who is known for quality care. Friends, neighbors and co-workers are good places to get recommendations. You also might ask your pharmacist and physician. Local dental societies also can provide names.

Once you have recommendations, evaluate services. To make an informed choice, compare at least two or three dentists and their services.

Your evaluation of a dentist's services will depend largely on your reaction to the people in the office. If the staff is receptive, friendly and works well together, it reflects the dentist's attitude and enthusiasm.

Here are some questions to ask a dentist to help make the best dental choice:

- Are you affiliated with a hospital or teaching institution?
- Do you regularly enroll in continuing education courses?
- To what professional organizations do you belong?
- How will you remind me when it's time for my next appointment?
- Do you see children? Will you treat my entire family or just adults?
- Do you have evening and weekend hours?
- Do you have hygienists and dental assistants?

— What services do you perform? What treatments would have to be referred to another dentist?

— Do you emphasize preventive care? What kind of professional preventive care treatments do I need? Can you work out a care plan for me and my family?

Preventive care includes regular examinations, tooth cleaning, X-rays, good at-home care and occasional fluoride treatments for some patients. These preventive measures can help you save money on corrective treatments — and help you save your teeth, too.

If a dental problem is diagnosed during an exam, ask your dentist to describe it in lay terms. Ask for a rundown of corrective treatment options available — materials, methodology — as well as time and estimated cost involved in the treatments.

— What kind of anesthetic or pain control do you use? Novocain? Nitrous oxide? Sodium Pentothol? Do I have a choice?

— What kind of substances do you use to fill teeth? Gold? Silver? Porcelain? Amalgams? Do I have a choice? What is the price difference? Why do you use some and not others?

— How long can I expect a filling to last?

— What do I do in an emergency? Will you consult with me before deciding on a method of treatment?

— Will you give me a cost estimate in advance?

You have a right to know what you'll be paying for. And you should ask your dentist to work with you to set up mutually agreeable treatment and payment plans in advance.

— What kinds of fee arrangements do you have? Are credit cards acceptable? Do you offer any family or inflation-fighter plans?

— What does an examination fee cover? Examination alone? Examination and tooth cleaning? X-rays?

— How much do you charge for other treatments?

Salt-Free Gourmet Talks To Diet

By Nanette Wiser

When Jeanne Jones talks, dieters listen.

The lithe, blond San Diegan doesn't believe in the word glum. Or fat. Nor does she think dieting should reduce the palate to a liking for cardboard.

The striking 115-pound guru of dieting salt-free and cholesterol-low faces her weekend class of chubby socialite matrons and rattles them first into laughter, then hope.

"So you've entertained your husband's clients at that fancy restaurant. You come home full, open the silver drawer and pull out a fork." Picking up speed, Jones runs her elegant hands through her hair, ready to take a jab at the battle of the bulge.

"You take out the pie, finish that. Then to the freezer for the ice cream," she says. The ladies giggle and nod. It's a familiar skirmish.

"Now you feel really bad," says Jones, and the matrons think, "She's one of us. She's been there before."

In fact, Jones never had faced being fat. Her rise to the top of the diet heap came not out of a search for thinness, but as a solution to her battle with diabetes. Living well and dining gourmet did not seem like too much to ask for, thought Jones. So she combined a lifelong avocation — elegant eating — with a nutrition degree to take on a vocation that benefits heart patients, diabetics, everyday folk and the rich and the famous.

According to David Nelson, food critic to the Los Angeles Times, Jones is a genius.

"I belong to the butter-and-cream school of eating, and she's into high fiber and lettuce," Nelson says. "But she can really churn out some tasty meals that pose no danger to diabetics or those who are concerned about health."

Jones' low-salt, low-cholesterol, low-sugar recipes are whipped up in her state-of-the-art kitchen overlooking the Pacific surf. To date, Jones has published her recipes in 13 books. Her latest, "Jet Fuel — The New Food Strategy For The High-Performance Person," also is an audio-cassette album.

Jones is a consultant to and plans menus for the National Institute of Health, Scripps Hospital, Hoffman-La Roche, Pritikin Longevity Center and the Four Seasons Hotels.

"Low-sodium cooking is not only a new approach to seasoning — restoring the subtle, delicate flavors of food that salt white-washes — but a whole re-education of the palate," says Jones in her book, "Secrets of Salt-Free Cooking" (101 Productions, San Francisco, 1982).

Jones believes that 1,000 milligrams of sodium per day is all that is needed for proper body function. But by calculating the milligrams of sodium present in food, even taboo foods can be enjoyed on a low-sodium restricted diet.

"Never say never," says Jones, smiling. "Even clams and Parmesan cheese can be eaten sparingly, so long as you stick to carefully counting the milligrams of sodium that wheedle their way into most prepackaged foods."

Recognizing the special pitfalls of eating well while traveling, Jones suggests some tips for dieters on the go:

— Order fish, poultry or meat broiled or baked without salt when dining out.

— Take a cube of unsalted butter or margarine with you in case you order something sauteed.

— When ordering salads, ask for fresh vegetables. Tell the waiter to leave out cooked or canned vegetables and croutons, and ask for separate bottles of vinegar and oil.

— Pass on all soups in restaurants, as they have salt added.

— Potatoes should be ordered unopened, and fries cooked in oil without salt.

— When making airplane reservations, ask for low-sodium meals.

Avoid Osteoporosis With Early Start

By Sharon Huish

One of the biggest tragedies of the crippling bone disease osteoporosis is that it's considered an "old lady's" disease, according to Dr. Elizabeth Connell, professor in the department of gynecology and obstetrics at Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta.

"It's too bad to tie it (osteoporosis) to some poor old lady in a nursing home," Connell said.

But the disease can be prevented if people follow a healthy lifestyle when they're young, Connell said. And that is why young people, not older people who already show signs of having the disease, should be the target audience for osteoporosis education.

Osteoporosis literally means

"porous bones." It is a weakened condition of the bones that results from a slow loss of calcium, the mineral that builds strong bones. Weak bones break easily, and the majority of fractures in older people are the result of osteoporosis — bones too weak to withstand the stresses of normal living. Typically, osteoporosis produces no symptoms until a fracture occurs or the back begins to curve, as vertebrae collapse, into what is commonly called a dowager's hump. Osteoporosis cannot be detected through standard laboratory tests or X-rays.

The best way to prevent osteoporosis is to ingest adequate amounts of calcium during youth when most bones are produced, Connell said. After age 35 or 40, the body doesn't produce significant amounts of bone, she said.

ROLLOVER VS $125,000 EXCLUSION

What is the difference between a rollover and the $125,000 profit exclusion? The rollover is a means of deferring payment of any capital gains tax if you sell your principal residence and buy another (within two years) for more money. There is no limit on the number of times you can use this deferment. There is no age limit involved.

With the other great tax break, you can elect to exclude up to $125,000 in taxable profit from the sale of your principal residence — whether or not you buy another home. This exclusion can be used to wipe out the tax on your immediate profit plus the gains from other sales that have been rolled over each time you sold. However, it can be used only once in your lifetime.

To qualify for the $125,000 exclusion, you (or your spouse if you own your home jointly and file a joint return) must be at least 55 the day the sale becomes final. The home must have been your principal residence for at least three of the five years preceding the sale.

Blackpowder Shooters

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North-South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with 58 cal. rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and an 1,800 lb. full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a 4x8 cardboard backer at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over - from Maine to Rhode Island to New York - but more are from eastern Massachusetts. Call Ron Borjeson at 1-835-3102 for further information. 11.3/TF

PRAYER to the Holy Spirit. Oh Holy Spirit, thou who art all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my idea, thou who givest me this divine gift of forgiving and forgetting wrongs done to me and who in every instant of my life art with me, I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all your blessings and affirm once again that I never want to part from thee though the illusion of material things abound. My desire is to be with thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank you for your mercy on me and mine. (Person should pray three consecutive days, without revealing petition. Within three days, grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be.) Publish this prayer once grace attained. ENS 6/27/7.11

NOVENA TO Mary, Queen of All Hearts. O Mary, Queen of All Hearts, Advocate of the most hopeless case, Mother of Divine Love, full of divine light, we confide in your care the favors which we ask of you today. Consider our miseries, our tears, our interior trials and sufferings! We know that you can help us through the merits of your Divine Son, Jesus. We promise, if our prayers are heard, to spread your glory, by making you known under the title of Mary Queen of All Hearts, Queen of the Union. Grant, we beseech you, hear our prayer, for every day you give us so many proofs of your love and your power of intercession to heal both body and soul. We hope against all hope. Ask Jesus to cure us, pardon us and grant us final perseverance. O Mary, Queen of All Hearts, help us, we have confidence in you. (3 times) Publication must be promised. I have had my request granted. ENS 6/27

BONNELL FORD—A GREAT STORY

Sixty years ago, Ralph Bonnell Sr. opened the doors of his brand new Ford dealership, selling the impressive Model T automobiles. He worked diligently through the Depression to build a reputation for honest, courteous and dependable service.

Today, Bonnell still has faithful customers from those early years. In fact, Eleanor and Frank Sweeney of Malden recently purchased a 1985 Ford Crown Victoria some 60 years after their first purchase of a 1925 Model T at Bonnell Ford.

Today, Bonnell sells hundreds of cars a year, making it one of the largest dealerships in New England. The service department at Bonnell has 50 service bays, certified mechanics, computer engine analyzers and alignment and balance testing equipment. And Bonnell's daily rental fleet is second to none! To this day, Bonnell is still building on the reputation of honest, courteous and dependable service.

Smog Is Worse In The Suburbs

By MARY ANN MCCARTHY

Residents who fled Boston to avoid city ills such as noise and smog are in for a surprise: Smog is often heavier in towns like Winchester than in the crowded, traffic-clogged city.

Of five Boston area sites monitored last summer by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, Sudbury had the highest smog readings and most days (six) when levels exceeded federal standards. During that same period, Boston measured the lowest smog readings.

Although Winchester has no monitoring station, officials say the town, being a suburb, has a higher likelihood of having poorer air quality than Boston.

Robert Boisselle of the DEQE's air quality control division attributes this low city-high suburb smog pattern to the "scavenging phenomenon."

Wind sweeping through a metropolitan area picks up pollutants, he says, which combine with sunlight to "scavenge" incoming air particles to form smog. As pollution-filled air drifts toward the suburbs, the smog becomes greater.

In addition, abundant sunshine and distinctive wind patterns make summer the worst season for smog, he says.

"Meteorological conditions have a big impact on levels of ozone (smog)," Boisselle says.

Summer winds come mostly from the southwest, he explains, bringing

Tips For Dealing With Smog

STAY INDOORS with the windows closed. During periods of healthful air quality, the air in your home is probably less polluted than outside.

STAY COMFORTABLE. Keep your room cool. If you have an air conditioner, set it to circulate and cool room air. If you don't have one, or if you cannot control it, use a room fan or dehumidifier. Whether using a fan, dehumidifier, or air conditioner, be sure to keep blades and/or filter clean. If you must open the windows periodically, do so early in the morning and then again late in the evening. This will help avoid the increased heat of the sun during mid-day hours.

AVOID STRENUOUS AC-

TIVITIES. Do not do heavy work. Eat simple, cold meals instead of cooking. Extra activity strains your lungs and heart... and it stirs up dust and other particles that make breathing more of a strain.

AVOID SMOKE and other lung irritants. Ask smokers to respect your need for clean air. Don't stay in a room where others are smoking: tobacco smoke pollutes the air you breathe. Don't use aerosol sprays or strong chemicals, such as ammonia, chlorine bleach, or oven cleaners.

DRINK PLENTY OF WATER. Call 1-800-882-1497 for daily reports on the air-quality index.

STAY CALM. Remember to breathe slowly and evenly.

air from the highly populated and industrialized states of New York and New Jersey.

Brisk winter winds coming from Vermont, New Hampshire, Canada and the Atlantic Ocean really clean out the air, he says.

However, he adds, "In July and August there is more sunlight, so you have a longer time for the [chemical] reaction [which creates smog] to occur."

Last year, DEQE rated eastern

Massachusetts' air "unhealthful" eight days and "moderate" for half the days from April through September.

An unhealthful rating is given when air quality exceeds 100 on the Pollutant Standard Index; a moderate rating indicates air between 50 and 100 on the index.

Smog and other air pollutants are the byproducts of high concentrations of traffic and industry, such as in (Please see SMOG, Page 1)

Safety Checks Aren't Kid Stuff

By JILL M. HIGGINS

Health inspector Joseph Tabbi enters the Salem st. home like a detective who's out to solve a crime.

He says little as he slowly scans the room, looking for signs that point to potential disaster.

"Where do you keep your shampoo," he asks suspiciously. "If it's on top of the tub, you could be asking for trouble."

Tabbi, who started as health director April 1, is on a "child-proofing" inspection. He aims to flush out all the potential health and safety hazards that could bring harm to an unsuspecting youngster.

Armed with a briefcase stuffed with gadgets, stickers and pamphlets, Tabbi goes through the house from top to bottom, checking off each offender.

Even a simple matter like a bottle of shampoo could spell disaster if a youngster were to swallow it, warns Tabbi. "It might not be fatal, but it sure would make the child very sick," he says.

Rosanne Gangi, whose daughter Danielle, 2, and son Andrew, 4, tag along behind her, listens carefully to Tabbi.

She is more aware of the safety factors than are many parents — her mother, Rosemary Gangi, works for Tabbi.

Still, Tabbi catches a few oversights that could prove dangerous to Gangi's energetic youngsters.

The moveable gate that keeps children from going down the stairs is a hazard in itself, warns Tabbi. "Those accordion-type gates are dangerous," he explains, "because a child can stick his head through the bars, while another one unlatches the gate. The next thing you know, the child gets his head stuck in the gate."

Gangi turns red, saying, "My mother told me you'd say something about that. . . I haven't had problems with that, but you're right. It is dangerous."

Turning to another potentially dangerous site, Tabbi checks off a positive safety measure. "You've done a good job on the banister, though," he says, pointing to a tall barrier that keeps the children from falling over the banister to the stairs below.

At another point, Tabbi shows Gangi how to cover electric wall outlets with plain, plastic "shock stops."

The plan, he says, is to keep youngsters from being attracted to sockets, as they often are when parents use the commercial type covers, such as those with Mickey Mouse on them.

"Come here, Danielle. Try to take this out for Mummy," says Gangi, as she tries out the child-proof cover.

The blond-haired toddler meanders over to the socket on the kitchen wall, probably wondering why mom is suddenly letting her do something so daring.

Her tiny fingers work at the socket. In about a minute, she pulls off a piece from the plastic cover — something that wasn't supposed to happen.

"She broke it," says Gangi. "I don't believe it. She actually broke it."

She takes the broken piece of the clear plastic from Danielle and smiles sheepishly.

Tabbi just blushes, saying, "That's not supposed to happen. They're supposed to prevent the children from gaining access to the outlet."

He moves down to the next few items on the official checklist, which was provided by the state health department.

The state provides local community health departments with the child safety kits, part of its efforts to get local health agents to stir up public interest in preventing home accidents.

Not all towns take part in the program, however. Diane Butkus of the state health department said the childhood injury prevention program is regrouping since she took over the reins last September.

As part of her takeover, she has issued the kits, which cost about $6 each, to a few towns at random. Tabbi was chosen to distribute 30 free kits partly because he had implemented such a program as health inspector in Saugus.

Included in the kit are pamphlets, hotline information stickers and gadgets such as thermometers that measure the temperature of hot tap water in a family's home.

"All you do is stick this in hot water from your faucet and if it measures higher than 125 degrees Fahrenheit you know you should turn it (the water heater) down," said Tabbi.

Next he turns to the kitchen cabinets, checking for child-proof locks that keep tots away from deadly cleaning chemicals. The locks can be pressed from the inside by an adult in order to open the door.

Gangi pulls at the bottom cabinet door, showing him a metal brace that keep the door from being opened by little fingers.

"The metal locks are better than the plastic ones," she says. "At least you can bend the metal ones back if they get bent out of shape."

Gangi gets a brownie point for that, as well as for keeping all knives and matches high up in locked cabinets.

"Most people, especially those who don't have kids, forget how much children mimic adults," says Tabbi.

"The little ones see mommy or daddy taking out matches from a drawer and they want to do the same thing."

"It's convenient to have matches or knives near where you're cooking, but it's dangerous when youngsters are around."

After nearly an hour of poking into every nook and cranny of the house, Tabbi completes his checklist.

In conclusion, he explains that his department also conducts testing for lead poisoning at its Town Hall office. Gangi promises to make an appointment to have her children tested.

It's a wise investment, says Tabbi, who is looking to involve as many Winchester residents as he can.

"It'll take a while to catch on," he says, "but I think it's definitely worthwhile."

Town Hall Repairs Will Be Costly, Says Architect

By NANCY PICK

Town Hall has no elevator, no wheelchair ramps, and no bathrooms for the handicapped.

That means the handicapped get locked out of many a town decision. They can't attend a Selectmen's meeting, or even deliver their tax payments.

Now the town is looking at solutions to that problem. Expensive solutions.

Winchester must spend at least $1.2 million to make Town Hall usable for the handicapped, according to Boston architect Kenneth F. DiNisco, who drafted a study of the building.

And, if the town wants to expand office space using part of the building's vast auditorium, that figure soars to $2.9 million.

Town Hall will celebrate its 100th birthday in 1987. Already, $1 million worth of exterior renovations are planned and will likely be funded by bond issue. According to DiNisco, the interior deserves just as much attention.

He said the building is inefficient, with 60 percent of town office space in the basement. By converting the first floor of the auditorium to office space, Winchester could move town services up from the cellar and also create an auditorium with improved acoustics.

The price tag for that plan was estimated at $2.87 million in 1984. DiNisco said inflation has now pushed that cost up about 10 percent.

"Since you're going to spend all this money, you might as well use the space intelligently," said DiNisco. "If you spend this kind of money you're probably not going to spend it again for another 100 years."

Keeping costs down is tricky, said the architect. The town can't just tack on an elevator and build a few ramps for the handicapped.

Under the $1.2 million plan, an entrance lobby and elevators would eat up basement space now used for offices. As a result, offices would have to be moved to the third floor, now used for storage space.

Also, DiNisco said, the town faces the "domino effect" of funding building renovations.

Once the town pumps money into revamping Town Hall, DiNisco said, it must make it conform to building codes and upgrade its heating, ventilating and electrical systems.

And, according to town bylaw, a sprinkler system must also be installed once "major renovations" are undertaken.

However, Selectman Wade Welch said he thinks less expensive alternatives can be found. He said the town must review regulations to see which building improvements are mandatory.

"My view is [that] making this building handicapped accessible is not a major alteration," he said. "What I'm telling you is that it doesn't necessarily follow that you have to spend $1.2 million for handicapped access."

DiNisco, of DiNisco Kretsch and Associates Inc., also reviewed other options for redoing Town Hall. For $1.9 million, the town could re-do offices and also partially renovate the auditorium, used each year by the Winton Club for their benefit cabaret.

Or, for $2.2 million, the town could pay for extensive auditorium renovations, including new wiring and lighting and a new fire alarm system.

Other options, apparently dismissed by Selectmen, included converting Lincoln School or Mystic School to a Town Hall or building a new Town Hall on an unspecified site downtown.

In other action, Selectmen noted that a public hearing on the "Woburn Loop," a stretch of abandoned railroad bed planned for sale by the town, will be held at 7:30 p.m. July 24, at Jenks Senior Center on Skillings rd.

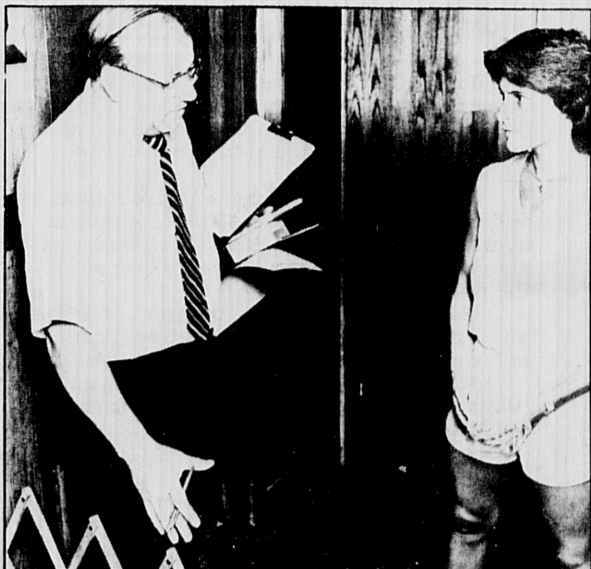

Selectmen approved a 5 percent across-the-board increase in burial and disinterment fees at Wildwood Cemetery. The new rates, designed to offset increased labor costs, will be effective August 1.

The board also voted to change the rules for common victuallers' licenses in town. All stores and restaurants that cook food must now get a license, even if they have no seating.

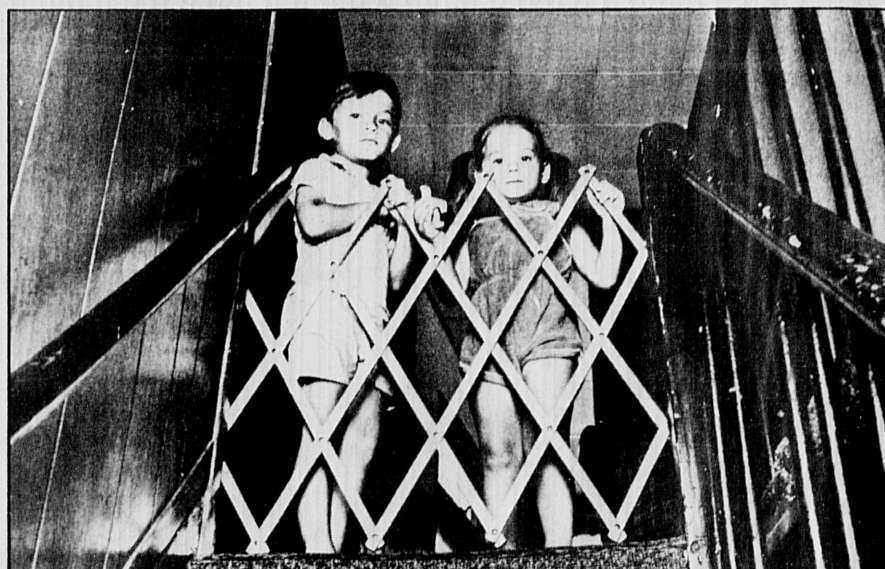

Stores that serve only coffee, tea, soft drinks, ice cream or salads do not need the license, the policy states.

In other news, the board appointed Peter Van Aken to a three-year term on the Capital Planning Committee. Curtis Jones was appointed to a one-year term on the committee.

Also, Selectmen accepted a gift of $310 to the Beautification Design Committee.

Board Continues Hearing On Rotondi Housing Plan

By JILL M. HIGGINS

The Conservation Commission has continued to July 30 a hearing on developer Sam Rotondi's plans for a 70-unit housing complex off Forest st.

Residents jammed a hearing on Thursday, as the commission reviewed Rotondi's proposal and heard a presentation by his architect, Joseph MacKay.

For more than two hours, the commission pored over mounds of maps detailing a compensatory storage basin that would be 16 feet deep with a water storage capacity of 60,000 cubic feet.

MacKay detailed plans that would allow construction at the site to comply with the state's Wetlands Protection Act.

According to law, potential developers must spell out their plans for avoiding wetlands destruction.

After several board members questioned plans to store water from runoff and a small nearby stream, MacKay and Rotondi agreed to "consider redesigning the compensatory storage area."

The commission ordered Rotondi to provide percolation test results at the July 30 hearing. He also must find out if natural gas lines run through the property.

During his review, MacKay detailed possible plans for diverting water runoff, as required by the Wetlands Act. The Rotondi plan had offered two possible means of storage, both above ground and below the site.

Several commission members, including Chairman Maggie Howard, questioned the idea of an open storage basin, citing fears that children might wander into it.

"By adhering to the Act, you're creating another hazard by building a pond where people can fall in," said commission member John Shawcross.

It was suggested that a grid over the top of a basin might prevent such incidents, although some argued that it wouldn't prevent debris from clogging the basin and threatening flooding.

"I'm worried about that... filling up and overflowing," said Shawcross.

"Since you don't know about the percolation (test results), I don't see how you can tell that it won't overflow," he added.

MacKay said the proposed basin was designed so that it could accommodate the heavy rains of the "100-year storm." MacKay explained that he planned the basin to hold twice as much water as is generated by the heavy rains of a massive storm that occurs on the average of once a century.

"It's a fail-safe system," said MacKay. "There's no way we're ever going to see this thing filled."

Some residents, however, complained that there is already flooding in the Forest st. area during heavy rains.

"I feel I have every right to sue the town if my property is flooded," said an angry David M. Brooks of 227

Forest st. He explained that he already has a sunken driveway, blaming that on earlier regrading of the road.

Brooks added that the town should take steps to insure itself against any liability for work done that might result in suits or complaints.

Brooks said he also believes the town is "in violation of state law" because it does not have a complete map of all wetlands in Winchester.

According to state Department of Quality Engineering officials, communities are only required to have maps which designate the local wetlands area. A single, comprehensive map is not required.

Brooks further asked the board if Rotondi's successors would be bound to the same rules regarding water storage and other issues.

"We can have that written into the agreement," replied Howard.

Another resident, Robert DeWald of Horn Pond Brook rd., said the town should order Rotondi to do a survey of industry near the site.

"My contention is that before we cover up more of the stream (running through the site), we should do a complete study," said DeWald. "I think we should do a study for the safety of it and Mr. Rotondi should do it."

Arthur Myette of Forest st., who first called for the site to be protected under the Wetlands Act, also questioned Massachusetts District Commission requirements for covering drain sites.

Myette also said he suspects there are natural gas lines below the site, and asked that the board provide assurance that such lines would not be disturbed.

Freemans Give Maine Land To Audubon

Ruth and Maurice Freeman of 11 Lorena rd., Winchester, have donated 30 acres of land to the Maine Audubon Society to complete their Gilsland Farm Sanctuary in Falmouth, Maine. This most recent gift was preceded by the first parcel of Gilsland Farm donated by the Freemans in 1974.

Ruth Moulton Freeman is the daughter of the late David Edward Moulton of Falmouth. Moulton, a founder of the Portland Water District, was an avid amateur horticulturist who planted a wide variety of ornamental trees, shrubs, and flowers around Gilsland Farm.

These plantings — especially the prize peonies, when in bloom — are of special interest to Gilsland Farm visitors. They are easily enjoyed from the 2.5 miles of footpaths that wind through the property.

Gilsland Farm is one of the largest public open spaces in the Greater Portland area. Sixty acres of rolling fields, woods and saltmarsh provide opportunities for recreation and nature study within sight of Portland's skyline.

The gift of the remaining acres to Maine Audubon for the people of Maine ensures that this beautiful section of greater Portland's natural landscape remains accessible in perpetuity.

The Maine Audubon Society Board of Trustees recently honored the Freemans at a reception at Gilsland Farm. The reception was attended by several friends of the Freemans from throughout Maine and the Winchester area.

Local Math Whiz Goes To Helsinki

A team of six American high school students, including one from Winchester, captured second place in the 26th International Mathematical Olympiad last week in Helsinki, Finland.

Romania took first place with a score of 201. The United States team won second place with 180 points followed by Hungary, 168 points; Bulgaria, 165 points; Vietnam, 144 points; and USSR, 140 points.

"I was tremendously impressed with our team's performance," said U.S. team coach Cecil Rousseau. "Their success demonstrates our strength in mathematics. The exam also showed us some areas, notably geometry, where we need to work harder next year. The great depth of the Romanian team earned them first place, but we gave them a good race!"

At the International Olympiad each team member is given six extremely difficult mathematical problems. (See the sample problem below.) During two three-hour sessions each student develops individual solutions to the problems.

The solutions are evaluated and assigned points by a panel of judges. Each team's score is the total of the individual scores of its members.

The judge also awarded individual first, second, and third prizes to deserving team members. Two U.S. team members received first prizes: Waldemar Horwat of Hoffman Estates, Ill., with a score of 35 out of a possible 42 points; and Jeremy Kahn of New York City, with a score of 34.

Their teammates all received second prizes: Bjorn Poonen of Winchester, with a score of 31; David Grabiner of Claremont, Calif. (29); David Moews of Willimantic, Conn. (27); and Joseph Keane of Pittsburgh, Pa. (24).

The U.S. team is chosen on the basis of performance in the United States of America Mathematical Olympiad, held this year on April 23, and on an evaluation of their work at a rigorous three-week Training Session.

The winners of the 1985 USA Olympiad, including U.S. Team members Horwat, Kahn, Keane, and Poonen, were honored on June 4 at ceremonies in Washington, D.C. The Olympiad Training Session was held on June 6-27 at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

The Mathematical Olympiad activities are sponsored by seven national associations in the mathematical sciences with arrangements made by the Mathematical Association of America. Financial support is provided by IBM, the Army Research Office, the Office of Naval Research, and Hewlett-Packard.

A sample problem from the 26th International Mathematical Olympiad held July 1-10, 1985:

"Given a set M of 1985 distinct positive integers, none of which has a prime divisor greater than 26, prove that M contains at least one subset of four distinct elements whose product is the 4th power of an integer."

Musicians Needed For Band Concert

The Summer community Concert Program is in need of musicians to fill out the ranks of their reed and brass sections.

Those who play the flute, clarinet, saxophone or trumpet are especially needed.

The Summer Community Concert Program operates under the direction of Priscilla Miller and is sponsored by the Winchester Recreation Department.

The initial concert date of July 17 has been moved to July 24 and subsequent concerts will be held on July 31 and August 7.

Rehearsal dates for all interested musicians are scheduled for July 15, 17, and 22 at 7:30 p.m. at the Music Room in the High School. Concerts are held on Wednesday evenings (beginning July 24) at 7:30 p.m. behind the library at the Duck Pond.

SENIOR SCENE

Jenks Senior Center will mark the 50th anniversary of the Social Security Act of 1935 on Friday, August 9, when Social Security representatives will be present from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. to discuss the program with interested members of the community. Refreshments will be served.

Adoption of our Social Security plan lagged well behind other countries. Germany was the leader when in 1884 under Bismarck a health insurance plan was adopted. Britain followed suit in 1911 and many of the European nations soon enacted similar measures.

But it was not until the Great Depression that we overcame our cherished ideal of rugged individualism of managing one's own problems without governmental interference.

Before the advent of industrialization when agriculture was the principal livelihood, the farmer usually was his own employer and all family members lived as a unit and supported each other.

As agriculture's dominance declined and economic hardships increased during the Thirties, the stage was set for the country to modify its thinking by adopting a social insurance plan.

A new and far-reaching concept occurred on August 14, 1935 when President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed into law the Social Security Act.

Initially only benefits for retired workers were provided, but later dependents and survivors became eligible. Additional changes during the years added disabled workers, medical insurance for elderly and the poor, vocational rehabilitation, and grants to states for maternal and child health and crippled children's services. A guaranteed income for all needy blind, aged and disabled Americans was implemented in 1972.

All are welcome to attend the August 9 anniversary observance at the Jenks Senior Center. Please telephone the Center for more information.

Pet Health Myths Can Be Dangerous

The myths some pet owners cherish about dogs, cats and other pets can be detrimental to animal health, according to the American Animal Hospital Association.

If a dog's nose is cold, it must be healthy: A persistent belief that is simply untrue. One veterinarian says he has seen dogs with cold, wet noses and temperature of 105°F plus pneumonia.

Animals heal themselves by licking their wounds: Licking can actually slow down the healing process and cause further damage to the wound.

Club Offers

Boating Lessons

The Arlington Boys and Girls Club will be offering a summer boating program available to youth residents of all communities including Winchester, starting June 24. This marks the 20th year that the club has offered the program.

A boating staff will be assigned to give instructions. Staff leader Bill Sullivan said that the group will use a 13-foot sailboat for teaching the children to sail. "Graduates" will receive a boating card, which will allow the youngsters to use boats.

The boating will be conducted on Spy Pond which, according to Sullivan, "has enough wind to sail on yet is calm enough for beginners."

The children will be taught rowing, canoeing and sailing and will be able to use the various boats available.

They Came From East And West To State Games

BY DAVID DEMARCO

They came from all over Massachusetts.

From the hot asphalt courts of Roxbury to the green mountains of the Berkshires, they came to participate in the Bay State Games.

Even as the weekend's hot weather wilted the fans, the athletes came ready to shine. The games, after all, have become the annual showpiece of amateur athletics in the state.

Winchester was well represented as 14 athletes were placed on the Metro squad from town. Overall, Winchester walked away with two gold medals and one bronze medal.

Hank Lynch won a gold medal as a member of the Metro boys basketball team. David Suvak won a gold playing for the Metro Men's open soccer team.

Metropolitan Women's Open soccer team seemed like a Sachemette reunion, as five of the 20 team members were from Winchester. The impressive Metro women's team was the defending champion but this year they had to settle for a bronze medal.

Other members of the Metro teams were Sachem lacrosse star Matt Galvin, who participated in the 1-3 meter diving event.

Young Brooke Foley from Lincoln School participated in the gymnastics competition. Foley who could always be seen clutching a stuffed animal in the stifling heat of Northeastern's gymnasium, performed well considering the heat and level of competition.

In the boys soccer division, Todd Wheelon of Winchester was on the Metro team, which just missed out on the bronze medal by losing to the Western team 4-1.

On the Metro Girls Scholastic Soccer Team, Leslie Strazzulo and Debbie Maida were the Winchester representatives. Try as they might, though, the Metro team could not squeeze out a medal on the final day of competition.

On Sunday, the gold medal rounds were played. Sachem Hank Lynch scored 2 points off the bench, as Metro defeated Southeast 93 to 78. The Metro team was in control the entire day and led at the half 45-34. Terrence Couper of Dorchester was high scorer for Metro with 30 points.

For the rest of Sunday, the action was at Harvard University, as the soccer medals were decided.

In the Men's Open gold medal game David Suvak's Metro team defeated the West 1-0. Erik Weiss of Framingham scored in the first half at 44:00 to give Metro the only goal it would need that day.

The Metro women's soccer team found itself playing Southeast for the bronze. The former Sachemettes did very well as Boston College's Ann Porell had two assists. Both Karen Sericka of Harvard and Maria Montouri of Boston College netted goals in the 4-3 Metro win. The games were a raving success, even though the heat and humidity were overwhelming at times.

The gymnastics events were held in Northeastern University's sweat box gym and were packed with enthusiastic fans all day. According to officials, several soccer events did not draw as well as expected, as the majority of fans were parents and family members.

The Hatch Shell was the site of the closing ceremonies. The majority of people in attendance were again family members with a few scattered groups of athletes. The ceremonies would have been fantastic had it not been for the rude intrusion of a vicious rain storm.

As the rain came down, everyone scattered and the Rhythm and Blues band packed up and left. All that remained of the Bay State Games of 1985 were the empty milk cartons, wrinkled old programs, empty bottles of Perrier and the dreams of 1986.

The League of Women Voters has published a book that will answer residents' questions on town government. It outlines all the various boards and their functions and authority. The slick, 66-page paperback even comes with a map of the town and an organization chart.

Speaking of organizations, the Police Department is honoring two of its longtime pros at a retirement party tomorrow night.

Lt. Andrew Crawford and Inspector William Nash will be the guests of honor at a reception beginning at 5 at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Mount Vernon st.

Heard the party organizers got a bit of a surprise, though, as they were planning what was supposed to be a surprise party.

'Seems Nash had already taken off to relax in Canada and the countdown for the party had begun. Luckily, we're told, he was expected back for the big bash.

'Wonder if the folks who went to the senior prom so doll'd up will show for this black tie affair. . . ?

By the way, the flag has been flying at half-staff recently, because, we're told, a local veteran has passed away. According to someone in the know, it is always flown that way for those who served this country in the armed services.

On the other end of that topic, file this one in the "tacky and tasteless advertising" department.

"You read about it in the newspaper," says the ad in large black letters. "We bury the victims," it continues in equally obtuse lettering.

Then it goes on to talk about drunk drivers, etc., as the business makes its pitch to talk to "interested groups and organizations on this serious social issue."

Yep, you guessed it — the guy is a funeral director. . . .

Column By Terry Marotta

A 'Respected' Man's Tale

It's 95 degrees. The line of people snakes down the hall and around a corner in the small hot courthouse. On the sweaty wall a hand-lettered sign reads "SPEEDING." "GET IN LINE AND WAIT QUIETLY," another reads below it. "MAKE NO ATTEMPT TO TALK TO THE PROSECUTOR."

Like all the other wilting criminals in line, I am considered guilty of speeding in this state's eyes.

I get in line. I wait quietly. I plan no attempt to talk to the prosecutor.

A man in front of me whirls to face me as I pull in behind him. "Hey a sexy lady!" he sings out. "What's a sexy lady like you doing in a place like this?"

The remark passes, an obvious fiction. I'm here to contest a $75 ticket. I carry a briefcase stuffed with pertinent documents. I'm dressed like Emily Dickinson.

My acquaintance goes on through. He's a man past the noon of his sixties, dressed in baggy Bermuda shorts and wing-tip shoes. He is here with his son, a pimply and oddly tired-looking boy who neither looks at nor addresses his father.

"Sooooo, where ya from, honey? Boston? Lived in Boston m'self once, corner of Commonwealth, selling cars, long time ago now, the war."

Worked for the Mafia, yessir, didn't know it at the time though. Tell ya what happened. I'm in Scollay Square, see, and this chickie goes by. Get a load that tamale says I to my buddy, and over I go.

Pardon me ma'am, but I've had just some terrible news and I'm as low as you can get. Sit and have a drink with me, no sex. So she does and we're talkin', see, and this guy comes up, starts pushin' me, and I'm a fighter see, Golden Gloves, only I don't say nothin'. I let him push me once, twice, then BLAM, I let him have it. And three friends come out of nowhere, and beat me up, BANG, BANG, my head on the steps!

The chickie says OOOOOH OOOOOH! What should I do? Says I, get me to the hospital, but she doesn't; she takes me to her hotel, not bad, you know what I mean.

Next day, I tell my bosses. Show us the guy, Johnny. We go back, Blackjacks, brass knuckles, I mean to tell ya. A gun to the guy's temple. I seen enough, boys, says I. You can stop now. That day on, I'm the most respected man in Boston.

"So, you married, honey? Ya, I'm married myself, two, three times. This here's m'boy. Got himself a ticket. I'll take care of it though, that's why I'm here. Hey, I started out down here, what do they think?"

A fifty dollar loan in '42, and now

I'm rich. Casinos, motels. The Mafia doesn't own me though; they WISH they owned me. Tell the lady what I gave you for your wedding, boy. That's right, a house! A hundred-and-fifty thousand dollar house. Hey, why not, he's a good boy. No dope, no booze even, helps change the kid's diapers."

Two young women in purple makeup join the line behind us at this point. They wear tiny muscle-shirts and little else. They sport hairdos like shaving brushes. They become audience, like me, to the man's performance.

"Well, we're movin' along pretty good now. Our turn soon. Let me do the talkin' now, Billy. Be out here in no time. Trials are for saps. With the law the smart guys all take care of things ahead of time. Reach an understanding, know what I mean.

"So girls, what are you both - wrestlers? Ha ha. Hey no offense, but too much makeup, you know? My boy here, did I tell you, president of my empire. That's right. Me I'm chairman of the board, I supervise, too old now. Not for everything, mind you."

"Here we go now, Billy, we're next. I'll walk in front....

".....Hey honey! you're not leaving, are you? What do you mean, dismissed? What are you, a lawyer? What's in the briefcase? Us, we gotta stay here all morning, enter a plea, the whole thing. Real crap.

"Well, how 'bout we go for a drink later? You want to stay in one of my motels tonight? Free, for you no charge. I mean it.

"OK, then, all right. See you again some day. Up in Boston. Hey, I'm up there all the time. Like I told ya, a respected man."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Local Woman
Criticizes
Discrimination

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Many of us take it for granted that it is illegal for an educational institution to discriminate against women. It is therefore of the utmost importance that people learn that this is no longer the case.

In 1984 the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that educational institutions could legally discriminate and receive federal money, as long as the discrimination does not take place in the particular program or activity that is funded by federal funds.

This ruling — which also affects civil rights legislation that protects minorities, the aged and the handicapped — will force taxpayers to contribute to institutions that discriminate against them. There has not been a public outcry, and I found that nobody is aware of this.

Congress has now before it the Civil Rights Restoration Act, which will restore non-discrimination in education (T IX) and the laws that protect the civil rights of minorities, the aged and disabled.

It is in the interest of all of us to make it known to the people who represent us in Congress that we expect their support and votes for a bill that does nothing more and nothing less than restoring these laws to what Congress originally intended them to be.

Sincerely,
Anne del PradoLet's Keep

(Editor's Note: The following letter was addressed to Winchester's Parks Department, care of Richard Tofuri. Tofuri is officially grounds supervisor for the DPW, not park commissioner. Parks commissioners are the members of the Board of Selectmen.)

I wish to congratulate you and your fine staff for maintaining the parks in Winchester. I realize that it is a massive job attending to all the small and large parks.

I wish, however, to point out Davidson Park, a lovely green oasis, through which the Aberjona River passes. Your staff maintains this park very carefully, cutting down everything and anything that grows. Trees are the only exception.

There is a strip of land approximately 6 feet deep running along both sides of the river. This flower border has been a source of delight to the residents adjoining the park, and the many visitors that pass through. I realize the budget could not allow for the planting of beautiful flowers in this park, but God in his wisdom has sown the seeds for all native wildflowers along these banks, the yarrow, Queen Ann's Lace, leafy daisies, lilies, and many more abound here at no cost to the taxpayer.

The cutting of these wildflowers is a crime, for we are deprived of their beauty and have to pay for the carnage on our tax dollars. Have you, sir, ever seen the park in full bloom? Would the Scotts mow down heather in their yards? Would the Irish pull up the shamrock in their little bit of heaven? How about the hills which are alive with the beauty of these flowers?

Please, sir, continue to cut the grass and maintain the park, but leave us the beauty that God planted, and to which there is no comparison. Thank you, and please visit the lovely park in August, for it will take that long for the plants to reconstruct themselves, for the roots which hold back the soil from erosion are still there.

Urges Film
Attendance

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The film, "The Silent Screem," will be shown July 21 at 8:15 p.m. at Fellowship Bible Church, 71 Center st., Burlington. This movie features an actual ultrasonic record of a 12-week old unborn baby being aborted. This is essential viewing whether your stance be pro-life, pro-choice, inbetween or undecided. A speaker from Massachusetts Citizens for life will be present to answer questions.

The purpose of this meeting is to educate the public on abortion issues and defend the unborn child's right to live. The pro-life view is common sense.

We all learned from high school biology that life begins at conception. Three weeks after conception the baby's heart begins to beat. Brainwaves begin at 7 weeks. All organs are present at 12 weeks.

After conception, all he basically needs to grow into an adult human being are time and nutrition. Yet this unborn child is often a victim of cruel prejudice because of his or her age and place of residence.

The womb which was once a place of peace, security and love has now become a place of wholesale slaughter. In 1973, The United States Supreme Court passed down a decision saying that as long as a child lives in the womb, he or she can be destroyed by abortion.

The wording of Roe vs Wade and Doe vs Bolton is so broad that the court allows a child to be aborted until the day it is born. Most abortions are committed in the first or second trimesters, but it is not uncommon in the sixth through eighth months of pregnancy. The "dreaded complication" of this is that some of the first trimester abortions produce live babies, which are often allowed or "helped" to die.

Not all women choose to exercise their legal rights to abortion on demand get off scot free. They may feel relief about the ended pregnancy, but often they discover they have traded one set of problems for another. Many pay an unexpectedly high physical and psychological price as complications such as pain, perforation, hemorrhage, infection, sterility, endangered future pregnancies, self reproach and sorrow occur.

There are alternatives to abortion. Help and counseling is available through the 5,000 crisis centers scattered throughout the U.S. — equal to the number of abortion clinics. A girl or woman in need of pregnancy counseling here in Massachusetts may call Cambridge Catholic Charities (482-5440) or Family Life Services in Lynchburg, Va. (1-800-368-3336).

The Family Life Services number will refer you to a group in your area, including Massachusetts, to help you at this crucial time of life. There are people who will gladly give assistance and support to a girl or woman who decides to have her baby.

If she feels she cannot keep her child, they will see that it is adopted into a loving home. For every woman contemplating abortion, there is a couple wanting a child to adopt and love. Abortion is not the only option.

Markey
Discusses Terrorism

(Editor's Note: The following letter was released by the office of Congressman Edward J. Markey of the Seventh Congressional District.)

EDITOR OF THE STAR: The past few weeks have been a time when the United States has experienced the frustration of dealing with the irrational acts of murderous terrorists. During this time period, we lost a neighbor — Robert Alvirde of Lexington — to a terrorist attack in El Salvador.

In the Middle East, the 39 hostages from TWA flight 847 have returned to freedom, and we are all relieved by their release. I believe President Reagan handled the crisis in a positive manner; he deserves recognition and credit for the safe return of the group. But we must also remember that there are seven Americans still being held hostage in Beirut. One of these is also a neighbor — William Buckley of Medford.

As we look towards long-term solution, it is important that we consider that we are not alone in being the victims of terrorism. During the same time period, India, West Germany, Japan and Canada were directly affected by terrorist activities. The problem is a worldwide problem, and any solutions should therefore be global in scale.

We must also consider that, just as the causes of terrorism are deep and long-term, our solutions should be long-term in scope. A sound, consistent foreign policy, which relies at the outset on diplomacy, is our best hedge against terrorism.

I thought it particularly ironic that during the hostage crisis in Lebanon, the House of Representatives debated the budget for the Department of Defense. As the members approved a Defense budget of close to $300 billion, a "Rambo mentality" prevailed.

We live in a dangerous, sometimes hostile world. Military force is an unfortunate necessity. But force should center around a sound foreign policy; foreign policy should not center around force.

Our defense will always have points of vulnerability. And there will always be fanatics who, out of frustration and confusion, will point their angry fingers at the United States. But diplomacy and a foreign policy which uses as a basis our own Constitution and Declaration of Independence will make us a less likely target for murderous terrorists.

As this crisis fades from the papers and the newscasts, I think it important that the American people and their representatives remember exactly how we felt during those two long weeks. Solutions to the problems of terrorism will take the resolve and commitment of the American people.

The challenges may come in the form of future hostage crises, or they may come in the form of regional struggles in the Middle East, Central America or elsewhere. These are areas where we can use diplomacy rather than might, persuasion rather than military power. It's in their best interest. And it's in our best interest.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

This week's column records local representatives' and senators' votes on roll calls from the week of July 8-12.

SUPPLEMENTAL BUDGET (H 6236) — The House, 149-0, refused to concur with the Senate's $180 million version of a fiscal 1985 supplemental budget. Opponents of the Senate version noted it is some $70 million higher than the House one and said members have not had time to study it.

A "Nay" vote is against the Senate version.

Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh voted no.

COMPETITION (H 5623) — House 125-27, rejected a bill requiring the state to purchase supplies and materials from private contractors.

Supporters, claiming the recent creation of a government entity which apparently sells some technical goods, said the bill would prohibit these sales and ensure government does not compete with the private sector.

Opponents said the bill would prohibit the state from buying goods from prisoners.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

FIRE SPRINKLERS (H 3347) — The House, 82-66, rejected a local option bill requiring any lodging or boarding house in communities which accept the provisions of this bill, to have automatic sprinklers.

Supporters said the sprinklers will save lives and protect the downtowned, alcoholics, and mentally ill who live in these buildings.

Opponents said current building codes and regulations are stringent, and claimed the bill will result in the shutdown of many community residences and will force thousands of homeless into the streets.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh voted no.

ENACT BAILOUT (H 6391) — The House, 101-38, gave final approval to the so-called "Boston Bailout Bill," allowing any community to impose a tax of 5 percent on jet fuel and to raise the tax on hotel and motel rooms from 5.7 to up to 9.7 percent.

Supporters said the bill will raise $20 million to help Boston. Opponents said it will hurt the hotel and airline industries.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh voted no.

POSTPONE (H 6391) — The House, 101-41, refused to postpone final consideration of the "Boston Bailout Bill" until July 17.

Supporters of postponement said this would allow the legislature to see how the Boston City Council acts on several proposed changes to clean up the city's fiscal act.

Opponents said the move was just another attempt to delay and kill the bill.

A "Yea" vote is for postponement. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

DOCTORS (S 217) — The Senate, 39-0, gave near final approval to a bill requiring that doctors who participate in the medicare program accept the medicare assigned fee for a particular service.

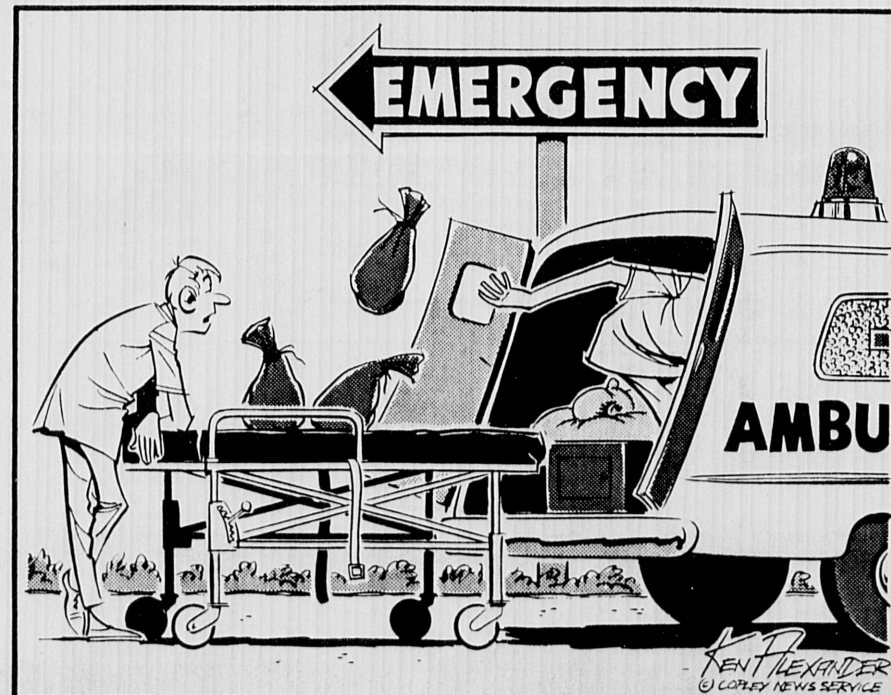

Supporters said the bill will help the elderly and prevent doctors from overcharging patients.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Sen. Richard Kraus voted yes.

BAII (H 2425) — The Senate, 31-8, referred to the Senate Ways and Means Committee a bill requiring a judge to consider whether the release of certain prisoners on bail will seriously endanger any person or the community.

Supporters of sending the bill to Ways and Means said the measure is "ACTUALLY, GRIMES, WE'RE ALLOWED TO UNLOAD THE PATIENT BEFORE WE UNLOAD HIS MONEY"

Local Pastor To Be Honored

The Rev. Arthur L. Reardon, pastor of St. Mary's Church for the past 11 years, has been appointed pastor of St. Florence Parish in Wakefield, effective July 30.

There will be a reception in his honor on Sunday, July 28, in the Parish Hall, from 2 to 4 p.m. All are welcome to attend.

Blood Drive Is Scheduled

The Winchester Board of Directors of the American Red Cross will sponsor a community bloodmobile on Wednesday, August 7, from 3 to 9 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus hall on Mt. Vernon st.

There is a great need for blood during the summer months, according to Dr. Robert Smith, chairman of the Winchester Board.

Martha Bett, Bloodmobile Volunteer Coordinator, said there are openings for volunteers to work at the bloodmobile as typists, donor room attendants and canteen aides.

Anyone wishing to help or to make an appointment to donate should call the Winchester Red Cross office at 729-2300.

Registry Offers Driving Tips

Wondering how to estimate a safe distance between your car and the one ahead to avoid tailgating? "A simple two second count will assure adequate space between your vehicle and the one ahead," advises Registrar of Motor Vehicles Alan Mackey.

"Just choose an object near the roadway ahead; when the vehicle before you passes the object, start counting: one-one thousand, two-one thousand. If you reach the object before counting for two seconds: you're following too closely."

Help prevent unnecessary motor vehicle accidents. If the roads are wet, use a five second count instead.

Fenway Day Set

The Massachusetts Democratic Party is sponsoring "Democrat's Day at the Fenway" on July 27 at 2 p.m. The Boston Red Sox will face the Seattle Mariners. All tickets are Reserved Grandstand Seats and must be paid for in advance.

For tickets or more information, contact your local Democratic Ward or Town Committee or call Pattee at the Democratic State Committee at 367-4760. Proceeds from this event will help underwrite the costs of services to local Democratic Committees.

'Fantasticks' Needs Three More Actors

The Winchester Players are looking for actors to play the parts of El Gallo, Bellamy and The Mute for their November musical production, "The Fantasticks."

Auditions will be held in the Michelson Room at the Unitarian Church, 478 Main St., on Tuesday, July 23 and Wednesday, July 24, at 7:30 p.m.

The bandit El Gallo, who sings the hit song "Try To Remember," is handsome, somewhat cynical and dominating. He is, throughout the play, both cruel and kind.

Bellamy, the father of The Boy, is a gardener. He sings, "to manipulate children, you simply say no!" with his next-door-neighbor friend.

The Mute, either a man or woman, is El Gallo's sidekick and friend.

Although he says no lines, The Mute is onstage during most of the play and is very active and imaginative.

Other roles in "The Fantasticks" were cast in previous auditions.

Director of "The Fantasticks," Arlene Fins, was musical director for The Players' "Man of La Mancha." Ann Baehr, the assistant director, is well known on the Winchester stage, having played Mrs. Hardcastle in "She Stoops to Conquer" and Anna-Maria in "A Doll's House."

As always in Players' productions, the back-stage crew is as important as the cast onstage. The Players are looking for people interested in set design and building, lights, publicity, costumes and make-up.

Please call director Arlene Fins at 926-3805 or assistant producer Karen Barton at 729-0094.

Lenox Brass Quintet To Play Sousa, Verdi

The concluding concert in the Parish of the Epiphany's 1985 Cloister Garden Series will feature the Lenox Brass Quintet, with light musical favorites spanning three centuries.

The concert will take place Thursday evening, July 25, at 8:30, in the garden of the Parish of the Epiphany, 70 Church Street, Winchester.

In the event of rain, the concert will be held indoors, in the adjoining Hadley Hall.

Together since 1982, the Lenox Brass Quintet has performed throughout New England, with concerts at the Gardner and Fogg Museums, the MIT Chapel, and Trinity Church on First Night.

Members are: Thomas Smith, trumpet; Dana Oakes, trumpet; Louisa Striker, French horn; Robert Couture, trombone; and Robert Carriker, tuba.

With the exception of Striker, an Ithaca College graduate, all are graduates of New England Conservatory.

These well-educated young musicians are also free-lancers with the area's most prestigious musical organizations, including the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops.

Among the selections the quintet has planned for July 25 are Handel's "Water Music," Verdi's "Triumphal March" from "Aida," and "Porgy and Bess Suite" by George Gershwin, and "Washington Post March" by John Philip Sousa.

The concert is funded in part by a grant from the Jessie B. Cox Charitable Trust Fund, and the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, through the New England Foundation for the Arts.

Tickets for the concert may be purchased at the door or in advance by calling the Parish Office, 729-1922.

★ Smog

areas like Boston, Springfield, Worcester and Fall River.

"We've had no days with unhealthy air so far because it has been a wet summer, but we can expect to have five to seven (unhealthy) days," he says.

Smog aggravates asthma, emphysema and other pulmonary diseases and is dangerous to those with heart disease, according to the American Lung Association of Middlesex County.

Young children and the elderly should also avoid exposure to polluted air.

Even in healthy people, heavy smog may cause eye, nose and throat irritation, headaches and coughing, the association says.

Dr. Michael Zaslow, a specialist in lung disease at Winchester Hospital, said some should take precautions when air quality is unhealthy, but most people will experience no adverse effects when air quality is moderate.

"Air pollution can make bronchitis and asthma worse in some people," Zaslow says.

"It can cause breathing tubes to constrict in some people, particularly those with lung disease, impairing the lung's ability to transfer oxygen to the rest of the body," he explains.

Scientific research has uncovered links between health problems and polluted air, Zaslow says.

"Studies show lung cancer is more common in heavily polluted environments, and some studies in Europe suggest children have more colds when they live in areas with polluted air," he adds.

Still, says Boisselle, "Massachusetts is not in the top 10 polluted states. Others have larger problems than we do, but we're in the top half — probably 25th or 30th — because of the high concentration of transportation and industry here," he says.

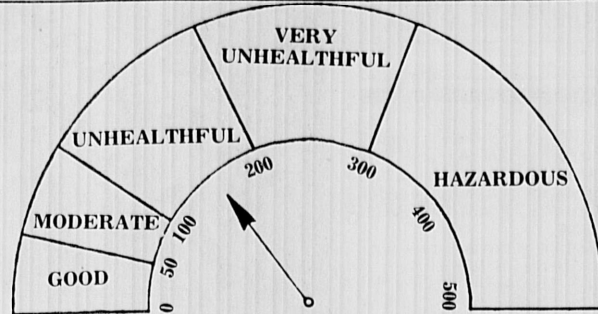

Experts suggest anyone with a lung or heart ailment should take extra care, especially on particularly hot, muggy days.

In addition, the Massachusetts Lung Assoc. and the DEQE have teamed up to provide a toll-free telephone hotline number for those who want to keep tabs on the quality of the air.

A daily reading of the smog levels and a forecast for the following day is available by dialing 1-800-882-1497. Above all, say experts, the best way to stay healthy during the "unhealthy" days is to simply relax a bit and try to keep cool.

Arlingtonsmog for 7-18.

Arlington may be "out in the country" to the folks in Boston, but health experts say the "country air" just isn't all it's cracked up to be. According to the American Lung Assoc., city air may actually be more smog-laden because of a chemical reaction that increases the concentration of city smog as it moves toward towns like Arlington.

Two Hospice Groups Merge

Hospice Care Inc. and Hospice of Middlesex East have merged to produce a joint venture which will provide comprehensive hospice services to families in 18 communities in the greater Boston area, according to Hospice Care Executive Director Ed Dolan.

The joint venture was preceded by a six-month agreement by the two hospices to share services. The union of these two organizations will not only increase the number of people served and the number of services offered, but will improve fundraising capacity and make Medicare certification viable, said Dolan.

The new service area will include Winchester and 17 neighboring communities. For more information on hospice, please call our Arlington office at 648-3172.

What Then

Saugus History Of Steel

A hillside full of sunny yellow coreopsis and delicate Queen Anne's lace slopes down to the edge of a quiet backwater crowded with cattails.

There is no trace of smoke or flames, no smell of charcoal or sweat, no clanging of metal on metal — just the flowers rippling in a light breeze.

Yet this pretty park on a hill holds a crucial place in America's industrial and commercial development.

It is the birthplace of the steel industry: the site of the Saugus Iron Works, one of the first entrepreneurial corporations in this hemisphere.

That's how park ranger Steve Cronin describes the Iron Works to visitors to the national park.

"This place is unique, because it represents the first successful industrial attempt at the commercial production of wrought iron in the colonies," Cronin explains.

In fact, he says, the Saugus Iron Works foreshadowed much of Massachusetts' economic history: it led in technology, had the support of local government, had trouble finding enough workers with the necessary skills, and got into financial trouble more than once.

"The whole concept of the Iron Works was the idea of John Winthrop the Younger, the son of the governor," Cronin explains.

"It was his idea to bring the technology to the colonies, where the raw materials were plentiful." The Saugus complex was the New World's first "integrated iron works," producing cast iron and wrought iron from raw ore at one location.

"They used what was known as the Walloon process; it was state-of-the-art technology for that period," Cronin says.

"The investors chose that because it would produce the best quality wrought iron . . . The iron produced here was compared with Spanish iron, which was the best in the world."

But the Saugus site — which is a reconstruction of the complex, not the original buildings — was not the first home of the iron works, Cronin says.

In 1643, Winthrop and his investors built a furnace and a forge in Braintree — on two separate rivers, two miles apart. Cast iron bars made at the furnace had to be hauled to the forge for conversion to wrought iron, a more desirable product.

Winthrop grew frustrated with the problems of carting the iron bars between the two facilities, Cronin says.

What's more, his investors were pressuring him to turn a profit. Winthrop resigned in 1644.

The new manager, Richard Lieder, immediately sought a new location for the iron works.

He found a spot along the Saugus River, with enough water power for both a furnace and a forge in one place.

"It was at a tidewater, so it also allowed for shipment of the iron products to either Salem or Boston by river," Cronin says.

The Saugus site was also rich with gabbro, an igneous rock full of calcium carbonate, used as a catalyst in separating the iron from wastes in the ore.

"Another reason for choosing this site was the natural bluff; it was ideal for building the furnace, because it gave a lot of drainage, to keep moisture away," Cronin explains. That was crucial — moisture in the furnace could cause an explosion.

Construction began in 1646: first came the canals and sluiceways to divert the river to power water wheels.

The water wheels turned gears that did everything from pump bellows — to keep the furnaces burning at 2,100 degrees day and night — to flattening bars of iron.

Next to be built was the furnace, a sloping-sided stone-and-mortar column — 26 feet square at the base — next to the hill.

A "charging bridge" led from the top of the hill to the top of the furnace: everything used to make the cast iron was measured out, and trundled across the bridge to be dumped into the furnace.

[Visitors used to be able to go right across the bridge and peer down into the reconstructed, non-working furnace.

But an arsonist set fire to the bridge sometime during the night of April 13, Cronin says, and caused almost $1 million in damages. Experts say the charging bridge can be rebuilt, but the work will take four years. There is still no indication who caused the damages.

The iron works furnace ran day and night during what 17th century industrialists called "the campaign," which started in April, and ran until the rivers froze up sometime in December.

"For each 24-hour period, the eight to 10 workers here could produce a gross yield of about a ton of cast iron," Cronin explains.

To get a ton of cast iron, workers used three tons of iron ore, two tons of gabbro, and 265 bushels of charcoal.

"That's about a 20 percent yield, and 80 percent waste," Cronin says.

The waste, called "slag," was dumped in the river.

As cast iron flowed into the crucible, some was poured into molds for simple tools, cooking pots, and firebacks — decoratively patterned cast iron slabs placed in the back of fireplaces to reflect the heat into the room.

The remainder was made into V-shaped — "sow" bars, by pouring it into sand trenches dug in the floor of the furnace. They weighed as much as 500 pounds apiece.

The sow bars were carted next door to the forge, where they were "drawn" into wrought iron — a much more durable and pure product.

The blacksmiths worked to remove the impurities, heating and hammering the bars to bring remaining slag to the surface, and then breaking it off.

Visitors can see several sow bars in various stages, lined up on the floor of the forge. A blacksmith, in costume, often does demonstrations, working small bars of iron at one of the forge's hearths, using a small live fire.

Costumed volunteers also operate the waterwheels as hourly tours come through.

But working conditions for the 17th century counterparts were hardly as pleasant, Cronin says.

"They'd work 24 hours, in shifts, in the season," he says. "The only reason they'd stop would be a major breakdown or a fire: the chimneys caught fire all the time — they were wicker lathe inside, and were instant fire hazards.

"The iron workers averaged about 5 feet, 5-foot-2, and were subject to all sorts of injuries: cuts, burns, bruises, fractures," Cronin says. "They breathed polluted air.

"But the most pronounced effect of working here was deafness. Anyone who worked in the forge for any length of time eventually went deaf," says Steve Cronin.

"But the most pronounced effect of working here was deafness — anyone who worked in the forge any length of time eventually went deaf," he says.

Their life style was rather dismal, from a modern point of view, Cronin adds. "Every worker in the Saugus Iron Works was indentured to the company, for an average of seven years."

The company paid their passage from England, and supplied food and shelter for the workers and their families.

"Should they incur any major debt — say, nursing for an illness — the company would cover it, and simply add it to the worker's indenture," Cronin says.

The iron workers, generally not Puritans, were often in trouble for breaking the Sabbath rules, according to early court records, Cronin says.

"They were, for the most part, functionally illiterate, and the Puritans really looked down on them," he says. "The Puritans found them an embarrassment, and a troublesome lot to deal with."

But the workers were also skilled craftsmen, a breed none too common in those days.

They helped guarantee the iron works investors the 21-year monopoly on wrought-iron production that Massachusetts officials offered for the first company that could supply the colony's needs for three straight years.

The ability of the iron workers also made it possible for the investors to install a rolling and slitting mill — special machinery to flatten the cold wrought iron bars

Concerts

Besides offering an historical perspective on New England's development, the Iron Works makes use of its beautiful setting for a series of free outdoor concerts.

Visitors are welcome to bring picnics — but no alcoholic beverages — and should bring along a blanket or folding chair.

The concert schedule is:

• July 24 — The John Penny Band, a top country show band; at 7 p.m.

• July 31 — The Rivas, a popular North Shore-based group performing oldies and current Top 40 music; at 7 p.m.

• Aug. 8 — The Northeastern Navy Show Band, from Newport, R.I.; at 7 p.m.

• Aug. 15 — The U.S. Army band, from Fort Devens; at 7 p.m.

• Aug. 18 — The New England Brass Quartet; at 2 p.m.

• Aug. 21 — Satin Doll, described as "a musical tour from 30s thru 80s," at 7 p.m.

• Aug. 29 — The New England Winds, an Air Force band woodwind quintet; at 7 p.m.

• Sept. 2, Labor Day — , performers to be announced; at 2 p.m.

in general in the park's rebuilt structures and museums.

"This group of investors were, for all intents and purposes, a corporation, without the benefit of a charter," he says. "It was one of the earliest such business ventures in the country."

"This is where the iron industry got its foothold in America," he adds.

"If it weren't for Winthrop and his successors, this would never have gotten off the ground," Cronin adds. "And when the Saugus Iron Works failed, its craftsmen spread out all over the country, and taught others."

Skilled iron workers spread out — and colonists were able to make their own tools and supplies, without depending on English imports.

The mother country didn't control the colonies' economy the way it once did. And those beginnings of economic independence — more than 100 years before the political rumblings that separated the States from the sovereign — were the start of a way of life in this country.

(This is the first in a series of articles about local museums and parks which celebrate New England's leadership in another revolution, the Industrial Revolution.)

How To Get To Saugus

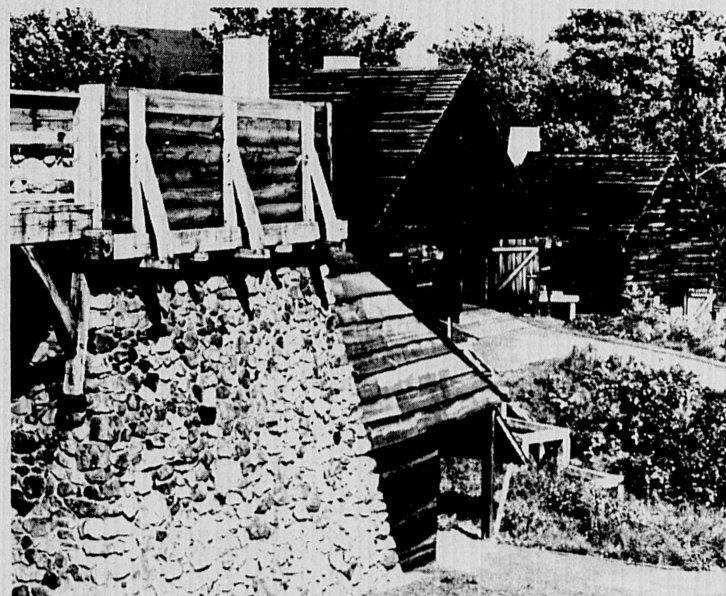

The Saugus Iron Works, a recreation of a 17th century innovation — an integrated iron works — offers visitors guided tours of the iron works buildings, a separate museum, and an original 17th century house that was not part of the iron works complex.

Visitors can walk through the iron works' blast furnace, forge, and rolling and slitting mill, and see seven working water wheels in operation. (Only the water wheels and one forge hearth are in operation now, for demonstrations only.)

The Saugus Iron Works is a national historic site run by the National Parks Service, open 9 to 5 every day through Oct. 31. There is no admission, and parking is free. A few places are handicapped accessible, but the steep slopes of the park do not seem barrier-free.

To get there, take Route 1 to the Saugus exit, and follow brown-and-white signs, or take the Fellisway (Route 28) through Melrose to Marble st. and Main st. For more information, call 233-0050.

First Impressions Confessions Of An Aging(?) Music Fan

There they were, aging flower children moaning to a live audience of how many millions?

I admit I had been oblivious to the Live Aid concert until Saturday afternoon when a friend yelled, "Look at this. Look at this — isn't it great?" and waxing poetic about the great service music was doing for humanity.

Ho hum, I thought. Just another telethon.

And for one who at the tender age of 11 or so had tried — and failed — to watch every single minute of a Jerry Lewis telethon, without sleeping, I was not prepared to be impressed.

"We should be in Philadelphia right now!" implored the friend. "I'd kill to be there! It's history!"

Leave me alone, I thought. Don't annoy me with thoughts of yet another mass demonstration. I've been in enough of those — both violent, like the University of California at Berkeley anti-Vietnam efforts, and race riots in Watts, and peaceful ones like Britain's Royal Wedding.

But then those off-key sounds blaring out of the radio caught my attention. Is that Crosby, Stills and Nash? They sound awful! What happened to the melody? But that song! The memories! I've got to see this.

And sure enough, there they were on the screen. Were those familiar faces? I could hardly believe my eyes. But only as much as I could believe my ears: the words were right, but the sound was a bit off. In fact, it was downright labored.

But look at the crowd, I thought, and think about Woodstock. And think about the differences.

Woodstock, that gathering of the 60's children, was frowned on by the older generation. All those drug-addled, anti-war, commie-pinko-long-haired-scrubby types huddled together by the thousand to hear music protesting all the things that made America great, right?

And here, a couple of decades later, the Live Aid concert. A similar gathering, to be sure. But this one supported and televised around the world, instead of pilloried in the media. Still playing the music that made a generation. But this time, the performances were an accepted act of a generation — this time, two generations, or three — building and helping the world.

And the bands played on. . . Crosby, Stills and Nash, Neil Young, Bob Dylan, Tina Turner, and Madonna, and so many more.

And with the echoes of those musical memories ringing still, the pervading thought. . . Have I aged as badly as that?

Valerie Jones-Long

What Do You Say

What Is The Single Greatest Problem Facing The U.S. Today?

By WILLIAM HAYNES

Dean Floudaras, 16
Maintenance, Gifford School, Weston
Belmont

There's a lot of problems: the economy, Reagan, taxes. In the next four years taxes are going up anyway. Reagan thought he was cool by lowering taxes this year, but whoever is in office next time has to raise the taxes.

Arms are another problem. I feel worried, real worried about that. Worried about war, nuclear war. I think it would start in the Middle East. We don't know what to do. No one can do anything. You never know what's going to happen.

Nuclear war: it's not really a concern, if it happens, you can't do anything about it, but I hope I am right next to the bomb when it goes off.

Donna Bradley, 23
Underwriter, Coolidge Bank,
Arlington
Watertown

I'm not worried about nuclear war. I'm not hearing so much about it. President Reagan is pretty mellow. He seems like a nice guy. He cares for the citizens. Like with the hostages, he cared for the people. The Russians would have just blown up the plane.

I think crime is a big problem. I'm not for the death penalty. We should expand the police force instead. I think taxes is also a big problem because I'm not sure where the money is going. Other problems are starvation and crime. People being healthy and safe are more important than taxes. I think we live better than people from other countries.

Jeanne Donnelly, 25
Loan Closer, Coolidge Bank,
Arlington
Bellingham

I think it's crime and people getting stabbed, etc. Maybe we should bring back the death penalty. We don't need more police, just stricter punishment. We should give less to the prisoners and kill the prisoners that have life sentences. If we have the death penalty, we can save money.

I think crime and the cost of hospitalization is also a problem. I think the problem is with insurance costs. People are paying insurance and then giving out life settlements that they wouldn't be able to give out if they didn't have the insurance. So, if the insurance companies cut back, the hospitals couldn't get it out of the people. I feel sorry for the people who don't have it (health insurance) because I don't know how they live.

Courtney McKenna, 15
Student, Belmont High School
Belmont

I think it is nuclear weapons and the threat of nuclear war. I think that is the greatest threat. I think we should have more current events classes in school about it, because people really don't know much about it, just what's publicized. Officials tell you what favors their side and we don't get a good picture of it. I mostly hear about the threat on TV or in the president's speeches, but they're more in favor of it. The anti-thing you get from the papers. Being responsible about nuclear weapons and not having World War III is the greatest problem facing the world as a whole.

I think Reagan said some ridiculous, stupid, asinine things, like being on the radio and not knowing he was on. But I think if he had the chance, he would. He's not preparing for nothing. He's keeping up the budget for that purpose. We can already kill the world so many times.

Leah Marshall, 15
Student, Winchester High School
Winchester

Nuclear war, and the threat of nuclear war. I think Ronald Reagan should be kicked out of office. No, ... it seems he wants the excitement of a war, maybe in the Middle East. I think in the next 20 years there will be someone who thinks they are great because they have a lot of oil and everything and will try to take us over. I think that maybe we will team up with the Soviet Union. I don't know, China may be a problem too. I've never had a discussion about this before.

I think we should have a better arms talk. Now it's not working. They're playing the same old kiddy games you used to play when you were two years old. Like "I'm not going to put my weapon down until you put yours down."

I feel terrible because my little brother is 6 years old, and what does he have to look forward to: hair loss, radiation...I'm probably going to see the threat of nuclear war in my life.

Father Francis Kearney, 50
Priest, Immaculate Conception
(missionary in the Philippines)
Winchester

My biggest gripe with the U.S.A. is that they are treating the Third World badly. They're taking it for all it's worth. Nicaragua decides they're going to run the country the way they want to run it; then they're enemies, they're subversives, they're terrorists. And there is El Salvador and Guatemala and the Philippines where I've lived the last 15 years. As long as the government cow-tows to the U.S.A., especially the Republican presidents, they get what they want.

We need to make our policies more human in developing countries as it is here. Our government's policies shouldn't discriminate against another country because of its politics.

The big businesses here, the international companies, are causing most of the problems in the world.

This label "communism" has to be absolutely wiped out. Because that is the biggest red herring for the whole thing. To really cloud an issue, just say the guy is a communist.

Our Children Girls Versus Boys

By Willard Abraham
Ph.D.

Q. I have always heard that boys are more difficult to raise than girls, but it certainly isn't true in our family.

A. After three sons who never have presented any serious problems, along comes this little female who is stubborn and selfish, wants to be the center of attention, and will do practically anything to get her way.

I'll admit that she doesn't get into any real trouble, but after all, she's only 6. I'm fearful of what may lie ahead.

A. Ignoring your daughter's efforts to attract attention and giving rewards (through praise) when she does something at least bordering on the unselfish may be helpful.

Any generalization related to the difficulties involved in bringing up boys vs. girls is just that, a generalization that may not apply at all in one's own family. Individual needs, placement in the family, parental attitudes and personality characteristics are among the factors that might indicate whether a child will be a pleasure or a problem.

Most children are a little of both, and as time goes on parents seem to remember best the pleasurable experiences they've had with their children. Not always, of course, but we do tend to derive satisfaction from their acceptable behavior and achievements even more than from our own accomplishments.

It doesn't seem to matter whether they are boys or girls.

Q. Both my brother and sister brag so much about their children that I can't stand it anymore. The three of us always have had good relationships, but I'm afraid I'm on the verge of messing them up.

A. Their children have accomplished no more than mine. All of their children (and ours) are good students, help at home and have part-time after-school jobs, so why do they seem to have such a need to talk about their youngsters all the time? I certainly don't.

Suggestions, please?
A. Your family relationships don't appear to be fragile, so a request on your part that they tone down their bragging shouldn't jeopardize them.

You might preface your comments by saying something like this: "I love your children as much as you love ours, but let's talk more about other things." You might even suggest some topics of mutual interest, like movies, TV shows, books, recipes, world affairs or politics.

It really could be that they aren't at all aware that their excessive child-oriented comments bother you. So telling them might help clear the air.

You could threaten to use "equal time" to tell them about yours, but that might be a disaster. They may welcome your offer without cutting down remarks about their children.

Letters may be sent to Dr. Willard Abraham, Our Children, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

Are you the parent of a preschool child, 2 to 5 years old? Send a stamp, plus your request for information about a monthly service that may help you, to Dr. Abraham, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

Help Backpacker Off On Right Foot

Backpacking is increasing in popularity. It is a sport that places its devotees in touch with nature in some of the most beautiful wilderness country in the U.S. Backpackers can experience scenic trails, remote untouched woodlands and highlands with breathtaking vistas.

But backpacking is a sport that requires preparation. Start with physical preparation. Walking up hills with a pack on your back, even the lightweight variety, requires some muscle tone and overall fitness, much like cross country skiing.

To avoid leg and back cramps, a conditioning program of aerobic exercises prevents crippling aches and pains.

And spending time correctly packing your gear is another form of preparation that the sport requires. When a pack is too heavy or packed incorrectly, the joy of this activity quickly fades.

Weight is the thing. Start with the essentials—an extra wool shirt, sweater, nylon shell, map and compass, rain jacket, extra socks, underwear and insect repellent. To this add the tent, sleeping bag, food, water bottle, cup, stove and fuel. Next, try on a flashlight, camera and a few well selected toiletries.

And spend some time shopping for the most lightweight, versatile, miniature version of everything. Whether you're packing for the day, a weekend or weeks, the same basic rules apply.

And remember, quality of gear when backpacking is extremely important. You don't want something you depend on breaking down or falling apart when you are literally hundreds of miles from a hardware store.

Today, there is a much greater selection of packs and gear than ever before. Now you can choose internal or external frame packs; some models have detachable compartments, front or top load styles.

And this year, The Brinkmann Corporation has introduced a new soft thermos named Quencheroo that can strap onto your pack and dispense liquid anytime you choose.

When packing, it is important to maintain a center of gravity that permits ease of movement without strain.

Trade off balance and convenience.

The tent and food are heaviest, so they should be loaded near the top with clothing packed lower down. Your sleeping bag can be attached to the bottom frame.

As your confidence and stamina increase, you might aspire to some of the nation's most famous trails. In the East, none is more famous than the Appalachian Trail. It goes from Maine to Georgia, passing through 14 states, and has many sheltered campsites.

Take Work Out Of Outdoor Summer Cooking

Outdoor cooking this summer does not have to be limited to backyard barbecues. Saturday and Sunday afternoons can be spent outdoors enjoying the sun while a wonderful smoked meal is cooking literally by itself!

If you've never tasted smoked turkey, ham, veal or salmon, you're in for a taste treat. Smoked food prepared in your own smoker can have as much smoked flavor as you like. You control the amount of aromatic wood chunks that are added to the prepared charcoal... that imparts the unique smoked flavor.

And there are many flavors from which to choose. Mesquite wood has a very different flavor from hickory. Cherry or apple woods can make even an ordinary meal something special.

Smoked food is juicy. The self-basting process re-moisturizes the food while it's cooking. Unlike barbecuing, which requires the cook to stand over the fire to turn, baste and tend the meat during the entire cooking time, a Brinkmann smoker is much more automatic.

Once the charcoal fire is prepared and the hickory or mesquite wood added in the amount desired, simply fill the water pan with liquid (water, beer, wine, even fruit juice) before placing into position in smoker. Now the meat is ready to be placed on the grill(s) and the dome lid placed over the top.

A wide variety of food can be prepared in a smoker. Fish, brisket, ham, pork, duck, veal or venison can be placed on the grill while potatoes, corn on the cob, brussel sprouts, etc., can be cooking in the water pan.

But, if you'd rather barbecue, a Brinkmann Sportsman Smoker can also do that as well as roast or steam. All it requires is adjusting the water pan; no additional accessories are required. Barbecuing on a smoker is as easy as removing the water pan so nothing separates the grill from the charcoal.

SMOKED CHEESE

Use an 8-oz. package of cream cheese, or block of any other cheese such as Monterey Jack, Muenster or Cheddar. Cheese should be a fairly flat rectangle, shaped much like the cream cheese, and not more than about 1 inch thick.

Put one or several pieces of cheese on a piece of foil and put on cooking grill. Cover and smoke-flavor 1-2 hours. Take cheese out if it begins to Serve while warm to spread on crackers for appetizers or with fruit for dessert, or cook, then wrap well and chill until ready to serve.

1 small onion, chopped
¼ to ½ cup catsup
1 teaspoon prepared mustard

Freedom Of Travel Easier With Wheels

Holidays on wheels are becoming a favorite way to go for Americans on the go, and that means an increase in trailering.

Trailering popularity is on the rise because more and more people are discovering the convenience and economy of taking a fully-equipped camper or travel trailer to the growing number of U.S. campsites for a week-end or a long vacation.

"These homes on wheels increase the pleasure and convenience of recreation trips," said David W. Tarrant, Ford Division recreation vehicle sales manager.

"But, they also significantly increase the work of the vehicle that does the towing. So, there are a number of guidelines that should be strictly followed to ensure that the trip is a pleasant and safe one."

Major guidelines for recreation vehicle towing are:

- Choose a trailer within your vehicle's tow capacity. The tow vehicle's equipment and maximum load rating determine the size of the trailer to be towed and the combined tow vehicle and trailer load. Vehicle owner manuals list the load rating and trailer towing capacity.

The class or size of the trailer is the weight of the trailer plus trailer options and all cargo, including food, water, recreational gear, liquefied propane gas (LPG) and household or utility items.

Each class of trailer has a different tongue load, which is the weight the trailer tongue adds to the rear of the tow vehicle. And, the combination of tongue load and trailer weight determines what type of hitch should be used for a given towing job.

• Weight is the key to matching vehicle and trailer hitch. Take care that the trailer loaded to capacity does not exceed the capacity of the tow vehicle. And, distribute the load in your trailer so that the tongue weight is within the recommended range. Don't overload.

For the most accurate weight measurement for the trailer, tongue and tow vehicle, scales generally can be found at coal and oil companies, salvage companies and truck stops. A quick stop at the scales is a good start.

The trailer axle acts like a pivot point, so even weight distribution should be maintained fore and aft of this point. Also, balance the load between the trailer tires.

An unbalanced load will adversely affect vehicle handling and cause uneven wear of the trailer's suspension and tires. Use a spirit level while loading to assist in proper weight distribution.

Adjust the cargo in the trailer or in the rear of the tow vehicle to align the hitch.

Be sure all cargo, as well as cabinet doors and contents, are securely fastened to prevent load shift and possible damage.

Finally, the properly loaded trailer and tow vehicle on level ground should look like both are all ready to cruise a straight, true line along the highway.

Safer Pleasure Boating

Before taking the boat out on area waterways this summer, invest a few minutes in some basic safety planning. Sometimes the most simple things are overlooked.

A safety checklist provided by the local Coast Guard Auxiliary is an excellent guide. Start by checking the condition of the life vests (P.F.D.'s), and all on-board safety equipment... fire extinguisher, foghorn and flares (sound and visual distress signals). Don't forget a good working radio that can tune in a weather channel when needed.

A pre-launch routine safety check can become the responsibility of a trusted family member or fishing buddy. It doesn't matter who does it nearly as much as the thoroughness of the safety checklist itself.

For instance, don't forget to take along some extra gas. You may elect to stay out longer than planned and you don't want to have to depend on the current and a trusty oar to get back to shore.

A small tool kit could be invaluable and don't forget a powerful spotlight can help spot water hazards or locate markers after dark.

Treasure Hunting Rewarding

If you love history, particularly American history, and are willing to do some research while traveling, packing a reliable metal detector can be very rewarding, and takes up little room in the trunk or back seat.

Many historic relics have been discovered in fields and adjoining abandoned farmhouses. Some enthusiasts have also located caches of money and jewelry, since banks were not always as popular as they are today.

People used to hide valuables in their homes and many farm tools and guns are now antiques actively collected for decorating and investment/resale.

Treasure hunting takes time, but it can be very rewarding to uncover an object from another time. It can make the past come to life for children and adults alike.

But if research at the local Tax Assessor Collector's office sounds like more than you can handle, try a morning walk along a popular lake shore where swimmers spend time sunbathing... rings and watches get left behind and a waterproof metal detector can find jewelry loosened by a refreshing swim in cool water.

In fact, several Brinkmann Treasure Sensors can discriminate between "treasure" and "trash." Digging for bottle caps is only profitable if you collect them; otherwise, you won't want to waste your time.

Save your energy for unearthing gold jewelry; it is much more profitable and "intelligent." Treasure Sensors can be very economical with your time.

Discriminators really make the difference for most people who would become discouraged by digging without results. But there are times when enthusiasts turn off their discriminator in order to make sure they don't miss anything in a given area... searching a yard for a missing ring or other small object.

Take a metal detector out for a spin this summer. It can be a delightful excuse to get outdoors in the country or in area parks.

Tips Help Summer Driving And Trouble-Free Trips

Summer is here again, and it's time to set out on the annual family outing. The glories of the Great Outdoors beckon, and they're only a car ride of several hours, or perhaps a day or two, away.

Before you load your luggage into the trunk and pile maps and family into front and back seats, you would be well advised to check your car over, to make sure it's trouble-free. If it's due for a tune-up, this is the perfect time!

Check oil and water levels, and make sure you have a spare can of oil and plastic container of water in your trunk for emergencies.

Check tire pressure. (This is something you should do periodically during your road trip.)

Give your windshield the washing it deserves and needs; with so much additional stimuli (from an unfamiliar road, to children laughing and talking constantly, to all sorts of roadside sights), you don't need to cope with poor visibility as well.

Do make sure you have a tool chest with you to make emergency repairs, if necessary. The only thing worse than breaking down on a vacation, is breaking down far from the nearest gas station, and being stranded without the tools necessary to effect a repair.

Also make sure that you have a flashlight with you, and that both batteries and bulb are in working order.

Once you've set out on your travels, be a defensive driver. Keep alert to what the drivers around you are doing.

Know your exit ahead of time (read maps during rest stops or lunch, or before setting out in the morning, not while driving; or, alternately, appoint someone in your party as official navigator).

If, by some chance, you miss your exit off the highway, do not back up. Continue to the next exit and get off there. The few minutes time you lose are a small price to pay for your family's safety.

If you're feeling drowsy, do not continue driving. Either pull over and rest for a while, or allow another licensed driver to take the wheel for a spell.

You'll make better time, more safely, by not forcing yourself to continue driving under the stress of sleepiness.

Always observe the posted speed limit, whether it's 15 or 55. The authorities have good reason for setting the limits they do, and road safety is their prime concern, as it should be yours.

Vacations are a time of fun, freedom and happiness; careful, safety-conscious driving is a key element in their success.

WHICH TYPE OF LISTING?

If you plan to sell your home, you must decide on which type of listing to use. Here's a quick run-down:

OPEN LISTING: The seller agrees to pay a commission if the agent finds a buyer who will meet the terms. The seller can also sell his own house or can have more than one agent sell it. Since the agent can lose the listing at the whim of the seller, don't expect as much effort on the part of the agent with this form of listing.

EXCLUSIVE LISTING: This gives only one agent the opportunity to sell the property. This arrangement encourages the agent to work diligently because there is a full commission involved and a deadline to meet.

MULTIPLE LISTING: In this case, you contract with one agent who agrees to distribute the listing to other associates agents. Even though many agents may work to sell your house, you pay only one commission (the listing broker shares the commission if another sells the property). The advantage of the multiple listing is wider exposure and, perhaps a quicker selling time.

Blackpowder
Shooters

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with 58 California muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and an 1,800 lb. full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a 4x8 cardboard backer at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over - from Maine to Rhode Island to New York - but more are from eastern Massachusetts. Call Ron Borjeson at 1-835-3102 for further information. 11/3/TF

BONNELL FORD—A GREAT STORY

Sixty years ago, Ralph Bonnell Sr. opened the doors of his brand new Ford dealership, selling the impressive Model T automobiles. He worked diligently through the Depression to build a reputation for honest, courteous and dependable service.

Today, Bonnell still has faithful customers from those early years. In fact, Eleanor and Frank Sweeney of Malden recently purchased a 1985 Ford Crown Victoria some 60 years after their first purchase of a 1925 Model T at Bonnell Ford.

Today, Bonnell sells hundreds of cars a year, making it one of the largest dealerships in New England. The service department at Bonnell has 50 service bays, certified mechanics, computer engine analyzers and alignment and balance testing equipment. And Bonnell's daily rental fleet is second to none! To this day, Bonnell is still building on the reputation of honest, courteous and dependable service.

SEE THE LIMITED DIAMOND EDITION CROWN VICTORIA

Now that we have reached our 60th year, Bonnell Ford would like to thank you for helping us get here. Cleanup Of Industri-Plex Could Come By Early Fall

BY ERIC BLOM

As the Aberjona River travels south from Reading headwaters to its Mystic Lakes basin, the waterway is exposed to toxic wastes in Woburn's Industri-Plex site — where poisonous chemicals were produced for 130 years.

Benzene- and toluene-contaminated groundwater is traveling toward the Aberjona at the rate of one foot per day and could be swept into the river by a severe storm, according to Richard Leighton, Industri-Plex project manager for the Environmental Protection Agency.

The river's banks are arsenic, lead and chromium poisoned soil. However, tests show the river has not yet been contaminated, Leighton says.

Last week, the EPA held a public meeting in Woburn to discuss clean-up proposals suggested by Stauffer Chemical Company.

Stauffer — which is liable for some of the clean-up costs — used animal skins in glue production for many years, and the company's rotting hide piles are one of the main pollutants at the site.

From 1853 to 1931, several companies made chemicals for textile, leather and paper manufacturing industries on the Woburn property. The production left behind arsenic, acetic acid and sulfuric acid byproducts at the Industri-Plex site.

In the late 1960s, a developer bought most of the land and planned to build an industrial park on the Industri-Plex site, but hide piles and other dangerous wastes were unearthed during construction.

The development caused some liquid wastes to seep into nearby wetlands, and federal officials were able to get a court-order stopping further construction because of environmental laws to protect such areas.

The site has been a priority on the federal government's Superfund clean-up list since December 1982, and the EPA asked Stauffer, a former principal owner of the 120-acre site, to produce a report on how the clean-up should take place.

The chemical company suggested three actions at the July 17 public meeting: covering exposed hide piles with dirt, capturing and treating groundwater, and installing a gas ventilation system to divert odors.

Since groundwater is more likely to pollute the Aberjona than contaminated soil, its clean-up is more important to Arlington and Winchester residents than the hazardous soil deposits.

Stauffer's plan calls for five ground wells to capture the water as it leaves the site and pump it to a treatment tower.

Once there, the water will cascade from the top of the structure as high-powered fans blow air past the water, causing the toxic chemicals to evaporate.

The purified water — which Stauffer says will be 99.9 percent benzene free — would then be released into Hall's Brook on the site.

Stauffer has further suggested covering the hide piles as well as 40 acres of chemically contaminated soil with dirt.

The chemical company's proposals would cost $12,800,000 to implement, according to a report released by the EPA.

Monsanto Company, another former owner of the Industri-Plex property, generally supports Stauffer's suggestions but will have some ideas of its own, Monsanto officials said at the public meeting.

Another proposal involves consolidating contaminated soil, fencing this area from public access and diverting the Aberjona away from the hazardous region, according to the Stauffer report.

Changing the river's course would be particularly important while the soil is being moved, according to Leighton, because machine-thrown dirt could easily land in the river.

The rerouting would not have an effect on the course or flow of the river outside Woburn, he says.

The EPA is accepting comment on Stauffer's proposals until Aug. 1, and the federal agency will make its final decision on how the clean-up is to be accomplished by the early fall.

Fair Housing Committee Gears Up

By JILL M. HIGGINS

The Winchester Fair Housing Committee was expected to choose two representatives last night for the newly formed Citizens Advisory Committee on Housing.

Fair Housing Committee chairman Alice Warren confirmed on Tuesday that the board would vote two of its members to the advisory panel, an offshoot of a former ad hoc group.

She declined to predict which members would be appointed, however.

Last week, the Housing Authority, Winchester's official housing board, voted to include two fair housing members on the advisory panel. Three members from town neighborhood groups will also join the special panel.

The Fair Housing Committee has for several months complained that members were not being given enough involvement in the town's housing policies.

The group, which has no official decision making powers, was especially upset when it was not invited to join the new advisory group.

Members had actively complained during the town's February's negotiations with state housing officials on low-to-moderate income (Please see HOUSING, Page 14)

Police, Fire Station Delays Continue

By NANCY PICK

Despite contractor promises that the new police and fire building will be done Sept. 13, firefighters are worried about facing cold weather in their makeshift headquarters at a Parks Dept. garage.

And even if the new building is ready by mid-September, firefighters say, it will probably take a month to install communications and alarm equipment. That means firefighters may be unable to move until October.

The town must pay about $1,000 a month to lodge the firefighters in a fully equipped trailer, with fire trucks and phones kept in the Public Works garage.

Still, Fire Chief Robert W. McElhinney said it would make no sense for the department to move early and install temporary communications equipment.

"It would be kind of foolish, because if you put in temporary phones and temporary alarms, they would all have to be removed again," said the chief. "It wouldn't be feasible."

Police Chief John P. McHugh agreed. "I don't want to move half back. When it's ready, it's ready."

The new public safety building was originally scheduled to open in mid-July.

However, a number of setbacks have delayed the project. Superintendent Peter Carbone said cement trim work slowed the project down substantially.

"The masonry took a lot longer than anybody anticipated," agreed Project Manager Bill Reinhardt.

Brickwork foreman Marcello Bianco said the stonework company made each block by hand and could only supply three or four a day. The last blocks just arrived a week and a half ago, he said.

"If the stone had been here all at once, [the work] would have been done two months ago," said Bianco, who works for Stronghold Masonry in Wayland.

"We tried everywhere. We tried three or four companies. Nobody wanted to do it."

Bianco said he has been working on the building since last October. It was a tough job, he said. "The brick work is very fussy. It's all put together nice, it's a lot of work."

Still, he said the worst is over. "We're all done here. I got another week and I'm out of here. Finally."

On Tuesday afternoon, workers were installing insulation and painting basement walls. "Everything you see is 90 percent, 95 percent complete," said Carbone. He said only interior finishing work remains.

Still, a large meeting room still lacked a ceiling, and some plaster board walls have yet to go up. Also, lighting, maple trim and bathroom fixtures must be installed, along with the parking lot, curbing and landscaping.

Carbone said the original schedule was unrealistic for the scope of the building, which required both a new wing and renovation of the old stations.

"Now you can walk in it and see how complex it is, how many rooms there are," said Carbone. "Here you had to marry a new building to an old building and rehabilitate the old building."

"There's the spaghetti factor right here," he said, pointing to a complex web of wires and electrical cables converging in the ceiling. The wires carry the electrical system, the audio alarms, the speakers for the alarms, the telephones.

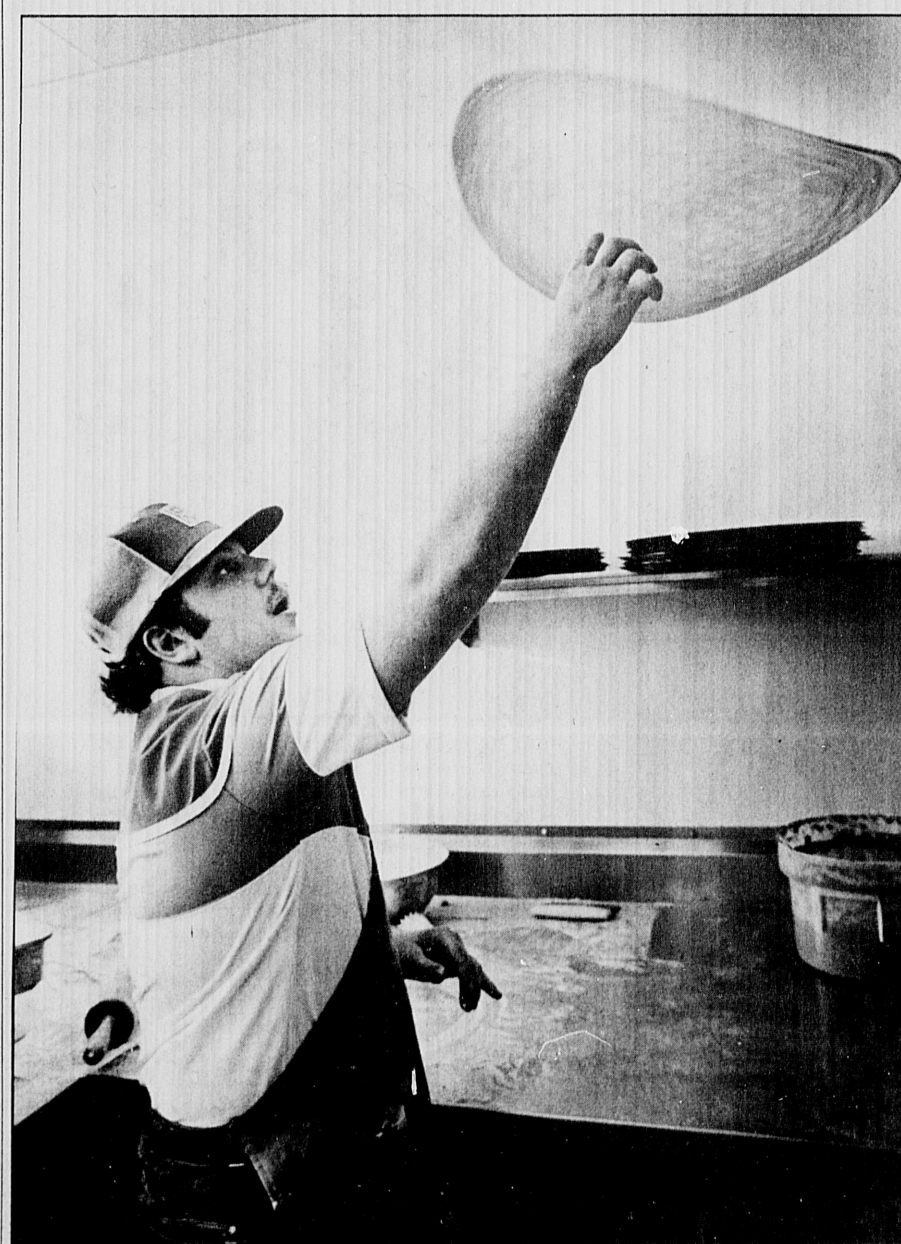

He said there have been many changes in the original plans, due primarily to the age of the old building, which was built in 1914. The whole structure had to be reinforced with steel beams, from the basement up.

Meanwhile, firefighters were sitting in their garage headquarters, crowded with mattresses, wooden bureaus and equipment removed from the station during construction.

They moved out in May when the old station became so cloudy with plaster dust that it became unlivable. Yet, when they moved into the Parks Dept. garage and adjacent trailer, conditions were less than ideal.

Since then, however, torn asbestos ceilings have been repaired and a second bathroom hooked up for the firefighters. When only the garage bathroom was available, said firefighter Ken Duffy, the department was in violation of state health codes.

"We're not in any desperate need [to move]," he said. But "if it gets into winter we may have more problems."

New Pizza Shop Aims To Top All

By NANCY PICK

Domino's Pizza, which just opened a Main st. franchise, takes a scientific approach to fast food.

The company believes all pizzas should be perfectly consistent, and management has the blueprints to prove it. New pizza-makers must weigh the cheese and pepperoni until they develop an eye for serving size.

Domino's oven has electronic temperature controls and timers. The franchise has even patented its pizza order forms, with tear-away address strips and three carbon copies.

The spotless carry-out shop flaunts its red, white and blue logo everywhere, from the caps worn by order-takers to murals on the walls. Owner Chris Rogers of Woburn wears a Domino's wristwatch.

An 11-year veteran of the company, he started as a delivery man in Ithaca, N.Y., and has managed pizza places as far away as Sacramento, Calif. He's proud to wear the badge of an "area franchisee."

Domino's has streamlined the business of making pizza, right down to sophisticated training videos.

Take, for example, the pizza-making film. It starts out like a rock video, with cheese and pepperoni flying through the air and onto the dough.

The voice promises that working for Domino's is "an opportunity to be the best."

One section of the video deals solely with removing soft dough rounds from a storage tray. The objective, says a didactic voice, is "to maintain roundness with no flaws to the sticky underside of the pattie."

The film shows how to flex a metal spatula at just the right angle, and then pick up the dough without deforming it. It shows the best way to separate two patties stuck together, and how to edge a wayward pattie from the side of a tray.

What about the case of the pointed pattie? The video shows the right technique for stroking the dough into smooth-edged form.

Domino's, says the Winchester store owner, has seminars in everything from dough management to store construction. When Rogers came to Winchester, he says, he was able to get local financing, thanks in part to a company bank loan seminar.

There's also a video to teach people how to deliver pizzas. Domino's will deduct $3 from the price of a pizza if it's delivered more than half an hour after the order is received.

That sets up a situation that could encourage speeding to get to a house on time. So the video gets a tough message across: delivery people should sprint to and from their cars to save seconds, but on the road, safety is the name of the game.

"Hot rodding is out," says the video. "In your vehicle, you drive carefully, alertly and safely."

"A Domino's Pizza driver never speeds. A Domino's Pizza driver never drives under the influence of alcohol or drugs. . . ." so go the commandments of the company drivers. No hitchhikers, either.

And, says the video voice reassuringly, drivers won't have to pay out of their own pockets if a pizza arrives late. "Most late pizzas are the fault of the inside crew," says the narrator.

Rogers admits he surreptitiously followed a first-day driver on his delivery route. The driver earned brownie points when he told the family to enjoy their pizza, and got a pat on the back from management.

The staff at Domino's, numbering about 35, is young. The entire pizza-making crew is under 18, Rogers says; those over 18 work on the delivery team.

Steve Moros, 19, of Grove st., is a driver for the pizza emporium. Although he says delivery experience is more helpful than training films, he learned to take driving seriously.

Working as a delivery man is a good summer job, he said. He makes a base salary of $3.50 an hour, plus 40 cents commission for each pizza. And tips.

Unfortunately, he says, Winchesterites aren't accustomed to pizza deliveries and sometimes neglect to tip. "I'm happy with a dollar," said Moros, jingling change in his pocket. And $1.50 is a good gratuity.

Moros says he drives carefully, but rarely wears a seatbelt, because it's annoying to have to keep putting taking it on and off again.

Tips For Treating Summer Injuries

Summertime means leisure and lots of outdoor activities.

It can also mean severe sunburn, food poisoning after a neighborhood barbecue, or an allergic reaction to a bee sting.

A little knowledge about summer hazards, how to prevent them and how to treat injuries helps keep summertime activities safe and fun.

A special "Summer Hazards" brochure is now available from Choate-Symmes Hospitals Inc. Prepared by Mary Ellen DeTeso, R.N., a nurse in the Emergency/Walk-In Care Center at Choate Hospital, the brochure includes information on summer hazards such as sunburn, cuts, fires and severe burns, drowning, insect bites, sprains and fractures.

A copy of the brochure is available free from the Choate-Symmes Community Relations Dept. at 646-1500, ext. 1441.

No Music At Pond

By JILL M. HIGGINS

There will be no music at the Duck Pond this summer.

The Winchester Recreation Department has canceled its summer community concert series because too few musicians have shown up.

This year marks the first year ever that the annual program has been dropped, according to Recreation Director Kenneth J. Cereghino.

"We only had about 16 musicians and Priscilla Miller, the band director, said we should have at least 25 people," said Cereghino.

The concerts were scheduled for July 24, Aug. 1 and Aug. 8.

He said the community concert series has had difficulty attracting enough musicians. The last three years had been the worst.

"Like the summer school program that was canceled this year, there just seems to be a lot of events competing for people's time. A lot of people are out of town; others have jobs or other commitments," he said.

Efforts to stir up more adult involvement have hardly been successful, added Cereghino.

He said cancelling the series will mean the department will save about $600 to $700, which will probably be used for other local arts events this fall or winter.

"We have no concrete plans, it's purely in the embryonic stages at this point. I've been meeting with some residents about some possible arts events. Hopefully by September I'll have a better idea," he said.

He said he is unsure whether the summer concert series will be revived next year.

However, he said, the department may consider hiring bands, perhaps from out of town, in order to revive the concerts.

"It spells the end of the concert series for this year. We'll reassess the situation for next year. I'm in favor of having something, but it may not be like it has been.

"Maybe it'll be something like hiring a band. In that case, we'd go for the local talent first, then maybe we'll look around Boston," said Cereghino.

Sam the gorilla peers through the glass of his Stone Zoo cage. Gorillas don't like to be stared at, says Vallee.

Stone Zoo volunteer Betty Vallee smiles outside the cage of a Sika deer. The deer shed their antlers every year, and they grow back with a downy covering.

Stone Zoo: Betty Vallee Looks Inside

Story By Nancy Pick

Everyone knows about giraffes. They're tall, they wear spots, they eat leaves, right?

But an insider's view of Stoneham's Stone Zoo yields far more interesting observations.

For instance, the average Masai giraffe has a tongue 17 inches long. Giraffes have stomachs with four chambers, and they chew cud, like cows.

As for their diet, in the wild they keep mostly to acacia leaves, and they have special hairs on the tips of their tongues to guard against thorns.

Betty Vallee of Taft Dr., a zoo volunteer, knows those kinds of facts. A former tour guide who now answers questions from the zoo-going public, she is an animal lover at heart.

Vallee is a great fan of deer. On a New Hampshire island she once managed to tame a doe and visited her for 10 years.

"She would come when I called, lick my arm, eat out of my basket," Vallee recalls.

But at the zoo, orangutans are Vallee's favorites.

She claims that Betty the orangutan (coincidentally, they share a first name) can recognize her and pick her out of a crowd. At her cage, Betty the primate sits in a plastic tub, hiding under a sheaf of white paper. (Orangutans like to make nests for sleeping.)

"I'm sure she recognizes me. She comes right down to the glass to see me," says Vallee.

Sure enough, as soon as Vallee approaches, the orangutan whips off the paper and starts running happily around the cage, towing her plastic tub with one leg.

Then she sets the tub near the glass in front of Vallee and peers out at her with — well, loving brown eyes. Gorillas do not like to be stared at, says Vallee. Orangutans, however, have more tolerance for eye contact.

Vallee shows her a photo from her notebook, which the orangutan seems to appreciate. Betty (the orangutan) taps gently on the glass, perhaps asking to see more.

Orangutans come from the jungles of Sumatra, an island in the Indian Ocean, and Borneo, near the Philippines. The word orangutan, by the way, was coined by Borneo natives and means "man of the forest."

Orangutans are an endangered species, because of increasing

Meanwhile, in the open zoo veldt sits Eve, a Paradise crane sitting on an egg. Her mate, Adam, does guard duty while she keeps the egg warm.

The cranes are tall, smooth, pearly gray, with long legs, the essence of grace. They come from Africa, and they have bred remarkably well in captivity at Stone Zoo.

On the other end of the esthetic spectrum are the pygmy hippos, Clarence and Camille, unattractive by anyone's standards.

Apparently, their temperments destruction of their natural habitat.

Their zoo diet consists of a tasty summer salad: apples, oranges, carrots, sweet potatoes, celery, bananas, grapes, lettuce, kale, chicory and monkey chow. In the wild, they also eat eggs and young birds.

The gestation period of orangutans is similar to that of humans, about nine months. Females give birth to only two or three young during their lifetimes.

According to Vallee, Betty the orangutan has had several babies and is a good mother. She also has some surprisingly human characteristics. Once, she took a piece of hair and used it to floss her teeth, Vallee recounts.

Over at the gorilla cage, Vallee beats her chest, a la Tarzan. "I like to try and imitate them," she says. Sam the gorilla is a "silverback," a mature male gorilla whose back fur turns gray with age.

are as ugly as their leathery brown skin, and the two are kept apart by a wall between their little ponds. Even in the wild, says Vallee, they are solitary animals.

Early in the zoo morning, the lions are sleeping, their legs sticking up comically in the air. Surprisingly, says Vallee, lions have been bred in zoos to the point of overpopulation and are now carefully controlled.

The zoo provides endless entertainment for those willing to watch patiently, from a polar bear doing the back stroke to slippery young sea lions walking on their flippers.

The Stone Zoo, located on the Middlesex Fellsway in Stoneham, is open from daily from 9 to 5 during the summer and from 9 to 4 during the winter. Donations are requested at the gate.

Stanley the orangutan hides under a sheaf of paper he uses as a makeshift nest. Orangutans are among Vallee's favorite creatures.

Miss K. Nolan Weds Mr. Allen

Katherine Juliet Nolan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Turley Nolan of New Canaan, Conn., was married Saturday, May 11, to Richard Jon Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Frederick Allen of Arlington.

The Rev. Charles Crawford Smith, assisted by the Rev. Robert Sullivan of St. John's Seminary, Brighton, officiated at the ceremony at the Congregational Church of New Canaan.

A reception followed at the Country Club of Darien.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white gown with fitted bodice of imported Guipure lace and skirt of silk organza which flowed into a chapel-length train. Her full-length veil with scattered appliques fell from a wreath of the matching lace.

She carried a garden cascade of white roses and pink roses and double freesia.

Mrs. Christopher Ambler of Scarsdale, N.Y., was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Jane F. Almon of Dallas, Tex.; Kimberly J. Atherton of New York, N.Y.; Jane I. Rose of Hackensack, N.J.; Vivian R. Sawyer of Louisville, Ky.; sister-in-law of the bride; and Lynn B. Williams of Boston.

They wore long mauve taffeta gowns with pale pink sashes and carried ried Victorian nosegays of lavender chintilly lace roses and pink dianthus.

Mark A. McCue of Boston served as best man. Ushers were Carl F. Allen Jr., of Arlington, Va., brother of the bridegroom; Thomas T. Cesarz of Swampscott; James F. Gammill of Boston; Thomas T. Nolan Jr., of Louisville, Ky., brother of the bride; and Douglas D. Olson of Darien, Conn.

The bride is a 1976 graduate of New Canaan High School and a 1980 graduate of Bucknell University in Lewisburg, Penn. During her junior year she studied at the City of London Polytechnic in England.

She is a personnel assistant with the law firm of Peabody and Brown in Boston.

The bridegroom is a graduate of the Mount Hermon School and Harvard College. After working with a commercial developer in Virginia he founded the residential brokerage firm, R. J. Ted Allen Real Estate in Winchester.

Since 1984, Mr. Allen has worked in real estate lending for Pioneer Financial Cooperative Bank, where he is the regional mortgage manager for the area north of Boston.

After wedding trips to Bermuda and Alaska, the couple lives in Winchester.

Reflecting On His Basketball Career

Bob Bigelow speaks out about his sports career.

Winchesterite Explains 'Mission Of Center'

MARY ANN MCCARTHY

What will I do when my days of glory on the playing field have passed?

Winchester's Bob Bigelow says athletes should ponder that question even as they chase their dream or play at top form.

The highest achievement for most would-be superstars is a brief celebrity in high school and college or a spot in the minor leagues, says the former Celtics player.

Only one in 12,000 high school athletes makes it to the pros, he says. And of that select group, only players with extraordinary talent — like Larry Bird and Jimmy Connors — can look forward to a long professional career.

Bigelow speaks from experience. An all-scholastic basketball player at Winchester High School, he continued his game at the University of Pennsylvania.

In 1975, right out of college, the 6'6" athlete was drafted in the first round by the Kansas City Kings.

Bigelow, now 31, played two years for Kansas City, spent some time in the minor leagues and then played briefly for the Boston Celtics and San Diego Clippers.

At age 25, unhappy with his "bench warmer" status, Bigelow quit pro basketball.

"I left when I still had my health and my knees," he says. "I was speculating more than I was participating."

A confident man with a booming voice, Bigelow speaks honestly about the regret and confusion which haunted him when he left basketball. He had forfeited a job which offered glamour, big money and summers off. Some days he wondered if he had acted wisely.

"One of the toughest things about leaving was the good pay, but you make some decisions that are not based on pay," he explains. "What it came down to was how miserable I was sitting."

Athletes in his position today earn about $75,000 annually, Bigelow says.

Because of his experiences in professional athletics, Bigelow offered his services to Northeastern University's Center for Study of Sport in Society, an organization which helps professional athletes return to college and encourages aspiring athletes to make education a priority.

Bigelow explains the "mission" of the center. "Professional athletes will return to college in the city where they play. In return, the athletes will go to the middle and high schools to talk to student athletes about balancing their expectations."

Since opening a year ago, the center has set up programs at colleges in about a dozen U.S. cities, including Boston, New York, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Denver.

Locally, the center has worked with the New England Patriots, the Boston Bruins and the Boston Red Sox, he says.

Some Patriots and Bruins players have been taking courses, he says, declining to name names.

"Mike Milbury, a former hockey star who went to Colgate and now is coaching, has been the center's agent to the Bruins. And Brian Holloway, a Stanford grad, has been an agent in the Patriots' locker room," he says.

"It helps to have people like that, someone to be a 'front man,' not an academic, to go to the teams," he explains.

Since joining the center in March, Bigelow says he has given a couple of lectures about the importance of education for athletes.

"It's a sidelight I enjoy because I think it's a good idea, but there are few hours to be given. I'm building a business," he says.

Bigelow believes in the center's cause. He tells of the exploitation of talented college athletes, referring to them as "revenue-generating assets" who are "hired by the college."

"They put in more than 40-hour weeks at their craft, and that doesn't leave a whole lot of time for economics 101," he explains.

"They have majors like recreational studies and leisure studies. And the professors keep them eligible."

Even with this push to relieve academic pressure, most professional athletes do not graduate from college. According to Bigelow, 33 percent of all National Football League players and 20 percent of National Basketball Association players have bachelor's degrees.

In baseball and hockey, sports that rely less on college as a training ground, the numbers are even lower. Only 16 percent of major league baseball players and 8 percent of National Hockey League players finish college, he says.

The "typical" professional basketball player, Bigelow says, "comes from a very poor background. He goes to school and considers himself worthy of the pros."

"He goes to the pros and at age 25 he's made some money, hopefully not squandered it all. Now, at 25, he has no skills and has to enter a world he hasn't cared about or even seen," Bigelow says his upbringing encouraged him to develop skills to fall back on when his athletic career ended.

"I had a balance of expectations because academics were always drummed into me by my parents. It was always the ballast, the rope pulling me back," he says.

"I covered myself by going to a good college, by getting the degree," he adds.

Since leaving basketball, Bigelow has coached at Tufts University (where he met his wife, Nancy, the women's swim team coach), earned an M.B.A. from Babson College and started a market research and consulting business, The MarComm Group, in Burlington.

Bigelow says convincing young athletes to shift some attention from sports to books is difficult.

"How do you deal with those who want to be professional athletes? How do you tell them that the chances for them are slim, that they should spend those years from 14 to 21 doing something else, preparing for life?" he asks.

Tragic Water Stories

Each summer there are far too many tragic stories of children drowning in lakes, ponds, and even backyard pools. Children are naturally curious and water attracts them like a magnet. They are not natural swimmers and must be taught.

For more than 80 years, the Y.M.C.A.s in this country and abroad have been in the forefront of swimming and aquatic safety. Learning to swim at the earliest possible age is still the best means of insuring that your children will be safe in and around water.

When to start swimming lessons is less definite. For certain, all children above the age of 6 should receive some formal instruction in swimming. In the past 10 years, however, more and more parents are starting their children in lessons by 3 years of age. Then there are the water baby programs which will enable children to attain a certain level of swimming competency by the age of 3 or even younger.

The North Suburban Y.M.C.A. not only has aquatic programs for all ages from 4 months to seniors, but also teaches personal safety and rescue skills for all its students.

On any given day at the "Y" pool there are groups of 3 and 4 year olds being instructed in the use of a life-jacket, how to wear it, jump in, roll and float and swim.

This is a sometimes frightening procedure made easier by an understanding teacher. It's a drill they may very well need to know in the event of a boating mishap.

Older children are taught the back float, treading water and survival floating. They achieve longer and longer periods of floating time from 10 seconds for beginners to 30 minutes for our top levels. This gives you and your children an added degree of confidence around water.

Although the preschoolers are cautioned never to enter the water to help someone, there are simple non-swimming rescues which are understood even at these early ages.

Reaching out with a stick or pole and the throwing of a buoyant support such as a kick board or life jacket are two rescue procedures a preschooler can understand. How to grab a buoyant support and swim with it if they are in trouble is a reciprocal skill learned at the same time.

By the time the child has finished the top level of swimming in the "Y" program he/she has learned many of the rescue skills which are taught in Junior Lifesaving, and is ready for Advanced Lifesaving programs. They will also be proficient in all the swimming strokes and will have achieved a level of skill in springboard diving.

The North Suburban Y.M.C.A. wants all the children in the community to learn to swim, but more than that, the "Y" wants them to be safe swimmers. The next set of lessons begins July 29 and the fall session starts September 9. Call the "Y" at 935-3270 for more information.

Running Is Serious Fun

By STEVE NORTON

I'm no public speaker.

It takes a hard actor to get up in front of a crowd and say what is on his or her mind, and I can't face a crowd larger than two without panicking.

But this is my problem: while I'm no good at speaking, I'm even worse at saying no. I receive letters or get calls from people asking, "Can you come and say a few words to our running group?"

It's an awful experience.

It takes me all month to screw up the nerve to stand up, and weeks to decide what to say.

Then I forget half of it when my mouth opens and my brain closes at the same time.

All the pretty turns of phrases, the funny little stories I've planned to use either come out garbled or don't come out at all.

My whole running philosophy can be summed up in three words: Running Is Fun. It's play and it should be.

"Fun" — a quiet kind of satisfaction more like the feeling a craftsman has than that of a good ol' boy whooping it up at the saloon.

It's serious fun, not the ha-ha type. "Play" — best defined by Mark Twain, who said it was "any activity which has meaning but no purpose."

We drain the play out of running when we give it too much purpose. No sport is subjected to more why-do-we-do-it questions or has more purposeful answers.

Why do we run? What are the reasons for it? To understand these questions, a history of running needs to be considered.

First, there was only serious competition. People ran only to get in shape for races, and when they couldn't race well any more they'd quit running.

The purpose was to beat other runners or the clock.

Then came "running for your life." We discovered that running was good for the body's plumbing, and the purpose became keeping ourselves aerobically fit.

Nothing is wrong with either reason, except that they are limited and limiting. Very few runners could ever become world class racers.

And almost anyone could gain adequate fitness with minimum effort. This left a great blank space between the two extremes.

That space was filled with fun — runners of the 1970s. A fun-runner doesn't need either racing success or the promise of perfect health to keep him or her going.

These sometimes come, but they are products instead of goals.

The fun-runner isn't goal-oriented. He or she runs for the sake of it and likes it well enough to keep doing it.

The beauty is that by continuing to put one foot in front of the other, one day after another, he or she gets what other types of runners struggle to achieve: building the fitness to live well and to race well while playing at it.

A fun-runner removes hurdles which keep it from being enjoyable. Don't make it hurt. Set no goals.

Make no sacrifices. Make running a part of your everyday life, not something apart from normal living.

The Runner's Eye

By

Short-term effects of running during pregnancy show positive results, if the mother exercised prior to pregnancy.

Long-term effects have not yet been determined.

Since 1981, researchers at the Melpomene Institute for Women's Health Research, in St. Paul, Minn., tracked 195 women, average age 29, average weekly mileage 24 to 28.

They found that 90 percent of the women delivered in the ninth month; all infants were born healthy; birth weights were similar; and fewer children of runners had low (less than six pounds nine ounces) birth weights.

Check with your doctor if you wish to continue to run while pregnant. Do not become overheated. Drink plenty of liquids.

For more information concerning running and pregnancy, see "The Melpomene Report," Vol. 3, No. 3, Running and Fit News, May, 1985.

Allard Writes New Records

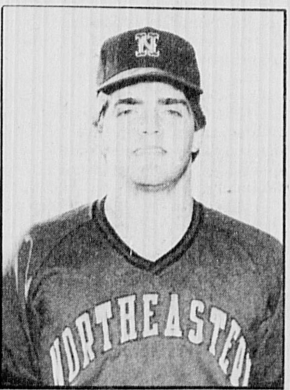

The record books were re-written during the Northeastern University baseball season last spring, and it was Winchester's Chuck Allard who did the re-writing.

Allard was recently awarded the Huskies' Rookie of the Year award for his performance, while picking up his first varsity letter for the 14-19 Huskies.

The Winchester resident had a league-leading .376 batting mark and compiled a .716 slugging percentage.

Along the way he broke the Husky single season mark for runs batted in with 39, and tied two more Husky marks with seven home runs and four triples.

His most impressive time of the season came during a five-game stretch against Fairfield, Brandeis, Boston College, Providence, and Tufts. During that span Allard went 13 for 21 for a .619 batting mark, including five doubles, two triples, and three home runs. He also knocked in 14 runs, including two game-winners. Another memorable streak was the eight-game hitting skinn he sported from April 26 through May 10. During those two weeks, the Winchester High School and Deerfield Prep School graduate hit .481, 13 for 27, while knocking in 11 runs and scoring five more.

Allard was only one of two freshmen to make the Greater Boston League All-Star team, the other being his Northeastern classmate Jim Mulry.

Allard also played a major role in the Huskies' three wins in the year-old ECAC North Conference. In wins over Siena College, University of New Hampshire, and University of Vermont, the engineering student went 4 for 11 with four RBIs.

Chuck is not the first Allard to make his presence felt on the college playing fields of Greater Boston. His father, Don Allard Sr., played quarterback for Boston College in the late 1950's and received two varsity letters. In his two years as starting quarterback, the Eagles went 14-5.

Don Jr., Chuck's older brother, was named Harvard University's Athlete of the Year in 1983, and twice landed a spot on the Greater Boston League All-Star team.

COMMENT

Winchester Kernels

The party was marvelous. That's what was said about Friday's retirement bash for former police prosecutor Andy Crawford and former inspector Bill Nash.

There were speeches by colleagues, friends and officials, as well as a few words spoken by the guest himself. That's right — guest.

Seems Nash never showed up for his own party! He had been out of town, but many suspect he was just too shy to be in the spotlight for the night.

Anyhow, the gang toasted Crawford, who looked a little overwhelmed by the whole thing.

Incidentally, he says he just might hang out at the courthouse "for a few days" — at least until he gets used to retirement.

Just when you thought the newspaper wars were over with the USA Today suit, seems there's a new quirk in the works. Has anybody seen the kids hawking papers around town?

A rather sleepy looking youngster has been at the lights at Washington and Mount Vernon sts. in the morning, greeting passersby with copies of a Boston newspaper.

Seems a little strange since only a short distance away the very same papers are sitting on the news stands.

Speaking of news, we've got a bit of our own, in fact. Assistant editor Nancy Pick is moving on to Concord, N.H., where she'll join the staff at The Concord Monitor. She'll be out there "in the boonies," as she calls it, covering the news in cow country.

Couldn't have picked (sorry) a better time — what with the nation's first teachernaut coming from Concord High School.

Best of luck, Nancy. We'll miss 'ya.

Latest on the school news grapevine is that the town's newest principals are getting ready to settle in here. Supt. Charles Mitsakos says they'll be in town for good as of August.

That's good news for the school folks.

When Kids Believe In Money Trees

My kids haven't the slightest idea how money works, and it's hard to explain it to them. I'm finding.

I knew even less than they do about the stuff when I was their age. My sister and I were raised in a cashless economy. We did no purchasing of our own.

Our simple needs were provided for by invisible adult hands. Shoelaces, notebooks, shampoo these fell from the sky as far as we were concerned; they grew on the apple tree outside our window.

We weren't allowed to chew gum or read comics in those days, and these two constituted the principle purchases made by other kids.

We never gave or received money as a gift — that wasn't considered at all nice by our mother.

We moved through the corridor-pineapple stage and on into school uniforms innocent of all contact with the taint of filthy lucre.

Oh, I bought a bus ticket twice a month, and I gave the fat lady with the harpnet my three pennies every day for milk in the lunchroom.

But for the most part money to me was something to play with. Pennies were fun for putting in your mouth, and nickels were great for stacking and building into little forts and kingdoms.

Even now, I enjoy a little coin-stacking on a rainy Saturday morning.

As a result of this unworldliness, I developed a notion over time that when I had kids myself, I'd raise them differently. Only it doesn't seem to be working out that way.

My kids are the dumbest ones on the block with respect to money. The little boy down the street offered our six-year-old first refusal on a piece of lumpy gum. She gave him ten dollars for it, which she fetched up without batting an eye from some stash of birthday money presented by grandmas grown less fastidious over the years about cash gifts.

I gave her older sister three dollars to spend for incidentals on an outing. She came back with a green complexion, jaws slack and exhausted from gum-chewing, and, cleverly hidden in the deepest recesses of her totebag, ten packages of Alexander-the-Grapes.

How to teach them more about the value of a dollar, then? Give them a weekly allowance the way the other parents in the neighborhood do? It seems like the right idea.

They could buy their own lemonade at the swimming pool, and pay their own fines for books overdue at the library. The rest would be theirs to spend as they liked.

On what, though, I find myself wondering? Cheap dolls whose heads lol horribly when you bathe them and pop off once and for all when you brush their hair? The same comic books that were bad for my little mind in 1967?

Smileys? Nerds? GUM-MYBEARS, for heaven's sake — all of whose tiny cardboard boxes hold more nutritional value than the candies inside them?

It's a problem, all right. I want to fit my children for life in the world, like any other parent. I want them to learn how to swim in the big waters.

I guess I'm just a little embarrassed at how polluted those waters have come to be — ashamed, maybe, to introduce them to our habit as a culture of spending so freely.

I guess our kids' problem will right itself before long, though. The oldest has begun asking some very pointed questions lately: what did our house cost? How much would one DAY of college be? What do we both make in a week?

We answer her evasively. Sex was a lot easier to explain about than money turns out to be. This same child described the mysteries of conception to the Electrolux man when she was no more than three.

She's always been a matter-of-fact sort, and sooner or later she'll puzzle out the money question in a way that will satisfy her.

Me, though, I'm not much more knowledgeable about the stuff than I was 30 years ago, even though I write 50 checks a month and pay all the family bills.

I know it performs a dandy lube-job on the gears of the social engine. I know it's supple and yeasty, growing in the hands of those knowledgeable about its treatment.

But just between us, I don't mind thinking of it mainly as a clinkety toy for Saturday mornings. I still like erecting tiny kingdoms with it.

I rule the money in those kingdoms, and maybe that's why. Don't care to see the day when the money rules me.

Press ConCom

On Its Duty

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

We are writing to express our sincere hope that at its upcoming meeting on July 30, and at subsequent meetings, the Winchester Conservation Commission will not forget its obligations to the citizens, future generations, and waterways of this town.

How the members choose to define and execute their responsibility will have a permanent effect on Winchester's environment, ecology, and "livability." Nothing short of an aggressive defense of the town's natural resources against the onslaught of developers is acceptable.

The committee's membership should be clear that their responsibility is to protect the environment of the residents of this town, not assist developers. If that responsibility is ignored, permanent damage will occur and then there will be no turning back.

ABC House Had A Gem In Mary Jo

I, too, regret that Mary Jo Nealon will not be in residence at the ABC House this coming year.

Everyone knows how well she has served as house mother in the last several years, but I shall miss her as a good neighbor, nobody ever had a better one!

When I came home from the hospital four years ago in May, Mary Jo was a daily visitor, with her little girls, bringing a tasty lunch most attractively arranged. This she did each day until my son's school closed and he was at home.

It was kindness that one never forgets. Always her natural charm and constant friendliness have been much appreciated and we shall miss her.

Sincerely,
Mrs. F. Milne Blanchard

Bricks, Fells Cause Ire

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Some three weeks ago more or less The Star displayed on its front page a group of smiling faces. I found the sight uplifting until I found out who the smiling men were and what made them happy. They were all politicians or bureaucrats, and they were overjoyed because they had got their hands on some more of the taxpayers' money to waste on "redbrick" Winchester Center.

If the idea were original with our town planners, there might be some faint reason to be impressed. But anyone who has visited a few other places in New England lately, will have discovered that "redbrick" is a disease or an epidemic. A reasonable conclusion would be that the city and town planners at their annual convention, having run out of sensible ideas, in desperation (tax money must be spent, spent, spent) reached far out and somehow came up with "redbrick" as a solution.

On another matter, the police and fire departments of Winchester are seemingly incapable of finding the real polluters of our drinking water in the reservoirs in the Fells. How else can one explain that they have arrested, handcuffed, and fined the one man who knows more about the water land and the park land in the Fells than anyone else in Winchester and has never in his life polluted even one single drop of our drinking water. It is obvious that the authorities involved need help, and the purpose of this letter is to render such help.

Here then is a brief list of the real culprits in this matter: 1. The drivers or owners of every car and truck (including those of the police and water departments) who drive on Alben st. toward Hillcrest pkwy. in close proximity to the North Reservoir. 2. The driver of every one of the hundreds of cars on South Border rd. that spew their pollution into the nearby South Reservoir. 3. MDC for selling polluted water to Winchester. The Spot Pond from which, I take it, water flows through a pipe into our Middle Reservoir, is a favorite spot for picnics and for swimming and for letting one's dog swim. In addition the MDC, I understand, allows motor boating and fishing in Quabbin Reservoir.

4. The state government for allowing this to go on. 5. The federal government for doing practically nothing about the acid rain descending on our drinking water from the Midwest. 6. And finally, if our zealous public servants still have some zeal left, they might consider hauling the Good Lord into court for allowing acid rain to be produced in the first place.

Beach Fans Say Thanks For Cleanup

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

It was four weeks ago that I (Jane C. Lang) went to the Board of Selectmen to express my thoughts and concerns of many of the beachgoers who regularly attend Leonard Beach. We would like to thank all those involved in the Leonard Beach Project. The Board of Selectmen, Mr. Chadwick Maurer our Town Manager, Mr. Kenneth Cereghino of the Recreation Department, and his water front staff and Mr. Dominic Serratore of the Public Works Department and his staff who work many long hours to bring Leonard Beach to its present state.

There were a great number of people who cared enough about their beach to come together at a meeting, held at the beach, with Mr. Cereghino and Mr. Serratore to discuss needed improvements at Leonard Beach. Almost immediately changes started to take place.

1. A new access gate was installed by the main entrance gate.
2. New beach sand was delivered and spread over the entire beach.
3. Measurements were taken for new picnic tables which were delivered a few days later.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

This week's report records votes from the week of July 15-19.

EDUCATION (H 6506) — House 94-49, Senate 24-0 accepted the conference committee version of a bill making major changes in the state's public education system. Key provisions include a state-funded local option $18,000 minimum teacher salary; statewide testing of students for basic skills; Equal Education Opportunity Grants for communities that spend below the state average for education; and the creation of individual school building based school improvement councils.

Supporters said the package would truly reform public education in the state. Opponents said the bill was flawed and would do very little for education.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

REPRESENTATIVE — Sherman Saltmarsh voted no. Senator Richard Kraus voted yes.

DEFICIENCY BUDGET (H 6500, S 2151) — Senate 22-0 approved a $229 million fiscal 1985 deficiency budget and the House, 141-3, approved a $211 million one.

Supporters said the package was responsible and necessary to fund programs and pay bills. Opponents said the package was loaded with waste and patronage. The bill was sent to a conference committee to draft a compromise.

A "Yea" vote is for the budget. A "Nay" vote is against it.

SALTSMARSH AND KRAUS VOTED YES.

SURTAX — Senate 21-16, refused to suspend rules to allow immediate consideration of resolutions that the Senate support repeal of the 7.5 percent surtax.

Supporters said it was time to repeal this tax and save taxpayers $225 million. Some opponents said the state cannot afford the repeal while others said rule suspension and resolutions are not the proper way to address the issue.

A "Yea" vote is for rule suspension. A "Nay" vote is against it.

KRAUS VOTED NO.

SEATBELTS (H 6128) — House 81-60 gave near-final approval and sent to the Senate a bill requiring the use of seatbelts by Massachusetts drivers and passengers beginning in January 1986. The measure allows police to impose a $15 fine only on violators only after a vehicle is stopped for another traffic violation. The measure, which mandates a public education campaign, also requires all motor vehicles, manufactured after September 1989, and sold or registered in Massachusetts, to be equipped with airbags.

Supporters said the law will save lives and prevent injuries. Opponents said the bill is government intrusion into people's lives and claimed seatbelts often cause injuries.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

SALTSMARSH VOTED NO.

PRIMARY ENFORCEMENT (H 6128) — House 129-15 rejected an amendment striking the section of the seat belt bill which allows police to enforce the law and issue fines only after a vehicle is stopped for another violation.

Amendment supporters said the secondary enforcement provision is weak and ineffective. Opponents said primary enforcement will result in harassment.

A "Yea" vote is for allowing primary enforcement. A "Nay" vote is against primary enforcement.

SALTSMARSH VOTED NO.

POLICE (H 6128) — House 104-37, defeated a seat belt amendment striking the section which exempts on-duty police officers from the bill's provisions.

Amendment supporters said officers often travel at high speeds in dangerous situations. Opponents said officers cannot be restrained because they often must get out of a cruiser at a moment's notice.

A "Yea" vote is against exempting police officers. A "Nay" vote is for exempting them.

SALTSMARSH VOTED NO.

MORE EXEMPTIONS (H 6128) — House 96-46 defeated an amendment striking a section of the seat belt bill which exempts any passenger in a motor vehicle used to transport passengers for hire.

Amendment supporters said taxi cabs and buses are constantly on the roads and should not be exempt. Opponents said seat belts are not standard equipment on these vehicles and claimed including them would cause problems.

A "Yea" vote is against exempting these vehicles. A "Nay" vote is for exempting them.

SALTSMARSH VOTED YES.

REFERENDUM (H 6128) — House 80-59 approved an amendment requiring a non-binding referendum on the 1986 ballot asking voters whether they approve of the mandatory seat belt law.

Supporters said the voters should have the opportunity to express their opinion. Opponents said a referendum sets a dangerous precedent and runs counter to representative democracy.

A "Yea" vote is for the referendum. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

DELAY PLAN (H 6128) — House 83-56 rejected an amendment delaying the effective date of the seat belt law provisions, except for the public education campaign and the referendum, from January 1986 to January 1987.

Amendment supporters said this will allow voters to express their opinion on the law before it takes effect. Opponents said the delay will result in deaths and injuries.

A "Yea" vote is for the delay. A "Nay" vote is against it.

SALTSMARSH VOTED YES.

AIR BAGS (H 6128) — House 112-22 rejected an amendment striking the section of the seat belt bill requiring airbags in any motor vehicle, manufactured after September 1989, which is sold or registered in Massachusetts.

Amendment supporters said the air bag requirement is another government intrusion in people's lives and claimed it will increase the price of cars. Opponents said air bags will save lives and prevent injuries.

A "Yea" vote is against the airbag requirement. A "Nay" vote is for it.

SALTSMARSH VOTED YES.

SURTAX (H 6128) — House 139-7 gave initial approval to a bill phasing out the 7.5 percent surtax over three years by reducing it to 5 percent in 1986, 2.5 percent in 1987, and eliminating it in 1988. The measure also raises the no-tax status from $5000 to $6000 for individuals and from $8300 to $10,300 for couples.

Supporters said the phase-in will save taxpayers $81 million in 1986, $174 million in 1987, and $290 million in 1988 and every subsequent year. Opponents said the state cannot afford the revenue loss and argued the money should be used to fund important projects and programs.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

SALTSMARSH VOTED YES.

ONE-YEAR REPEAL (H 6128) — House 111-37 rejected an amendment repealing the entire 7.5 percent surtax in 1986, instead of phasing it out over three years.

Amendment supporters said immediate repeal will help taxpayers more than a phaseout. Opponents said immediate repeal is too costly.

A "Yea" vote is for immediate repeal. A "Nay" vote is against it.

SALTSMARSH VOTED YES.

$100,000 (H 6128) — House 134-10 rejected an amendment providing that the phaseout of the surtax not apply to individuals earning more than $100,000 per year or couples earning more than $200,000.

Board OKs Curbing Waiver

Whitten Project Moves Forward

By NANCY PICK

The Planning Board last week granted a waiver for driveway openings to Winchester developer George Whitten.

Whitten failed to get Planning Board approval before building driveway openings at his Cross St. housing complex, according to board member Marion Crandall.

Normally, developers must lay in curbing along the full length of a road, and then remove sections of it once driveway sites have been finalized. Setting driveway openings ahead of time requires a waiver from the Planning Board, Crandall said.

"He just put the curbing in and laid out openings without getting permission," said Town Engineer John Ciarcia. "He shouldn't have just put his curbing in arbitrarily."

The Planning Board granted Whitten's curbing waiver on the condition that Ciarcia could inspect driveway entrances and make any necessary changes once house foundations are poured.

Whitten's development, called Winchester Gardens II, includes 25 two-family homes and one single-family home.

Also, the Planning Board decided to release all but two of Whitten's lots from its jurisdiction, allowing Whitten to get building permits.

The board will retain control over their compacted asphalt streets, said Crandall. She said the arrangement is standard Planning Board procedure.

Ciarcia said Whitten's development now complies with several other town regulations. He said roadbed and gravel has been poured according to specification and certified.

Also, a concrete binder has been properly installed, Ciarcia said. And Whitten has given the Planning Board an as-built plan of the development.

"He at this point has complied with my wishes," said the town engineer. "He can now proceed with getting building permits."

Water Conservation
Each American uses more than 60 gallons of water a day, and over 20,000 gallons a year, according to the Metropolitan District Commission.

Ostomy Patients Get Support

A support group for ostomy patients, who have had surgery to replace the bowel or bladder, has started at Choate-Symmes Hospitals.

Support begins prior to surgery, when ostomy specialist Joan Halpin, R.N., answers patients' questions at the hospital.

She selects the best location for the stoma — the surgical opening in the about care of the stoma, skin and appliances.

Also, someone who has already had ostomy surgery visits the patient in the hospital. He or she "is there to listen and to show the patient that you can look good and live fully," said Halpin.

Ostomy surgery is required when someone loses the function of bowel or bladder due to birth defect, disease or injury. There are about 1.5 million people in the U.S. and Canada with stomas, and that number is increasing at the rate of 100,000 every year.

"With support, adjustment for the ostomy patient is so much better," said Halpin. "There's no help, it's far more traumatic."

For more information, please call Choate-Symmes Hospitals at 933-6700.

Recreational Sites

A sure cure for beating the summertime doldrums is a visit to one of the many Metropolitan District Commission's recreational facilities in our region. Many are either free of charge or at a discount rate for seniors.

Fort Independence on Castle Island, South Boston, is easily reached and free tours are offered every Saturday and Sunday from noon to 3:30 p.m. Also conveniently accessible is the MDC Charles River docking site, where the 1930 sister tugboats, LUNA and VENUS may be visited free of charge every Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Bicycling enthusiasts have nearly 30 miles of MDC bike paths to enjoy. The closest is Mystic River Reservation Bike Path with its 3.5 miles starting on the Somerville side of the Wellington Bridge and continuing through the reservation to Everett.

A summertime favorite are the Hatch Memorial Shell Concerts at the Esplanade every Sunday from noon to 2 p.m., as well as on certain evenings.

To add sparkle to your midsummer days, seniors should phone the MDC office at 727-5215 for details on these and other activities available.

In the ancient Sanskrit language the word Yoga means union. The origins of this system reach back into antiquity, but the principles have been practiced in India for centuries and have encompassed the entire world.

There are several forms of Yoga, many of them mystical and spiritual, but the type popularly practiced in this country is centered on purifying and disciplining the body. This form is generally known as Hatha Yoga.

It is this facet of Yoga taught by Paulett Taggart at the Jenks Center. Fashioned by Ruth Becker, a world-renown Physical Education and Yoga instructor who demonstrated at the Jenks Center in March of 1983, the classes focus on Yoga's physical aspects but the spiritual mind are also nurtured.

Not only do the individual participants receive direct benefits under this program, but they pass their accomplishments by entering into nursing homes and schools.

Sharing their personal achievements, obtained by the not easy task of disciplining the body and mind, with others is but one instance of Jenks Senior Center reaching out to the community.

Yoga, Creativity Group

The broad spectrum of enhancement programs at the Jenks Senior Center is well demonstrated by the classes held by the Yoga and Creativity Group. Conducted by Paulett Taggart, the next class is on July 30 from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m. Call the Center for the August date and the fall schedule.

Although Yoga is commonly understood by many as simply a form of physical exercise, it is indeed a system whereby the body, mind, and spirit is united for the purpose of rais-

Sewage Plant Delays Will Likely Hike Cost

BY ANNE MARIE REIDY

The long-awaited decision on where to build a new regional sewage treatment plant for Winchester and 44 other communities was made early this month.

But legal and logistical problems may mean that plant may not be built before the 21st century.

And delays mean the costs that will be paid by local residents — and others who will use the system — could climb high above the $2.5 billion already estimated.

Deer Island was chosen as the site for the new primary and secondary regional wastewater treatment plant.

The Board of Directors for the Mass. Water Resources Authority (MWRA) recommended the Boston-owned area at the tip of Winthrop as the site for both new sewage treatment facilities.

"The construction of the 100-acre secondary treatment facility will cost between $1 billion and $1.2 billion in current dollars, and will take seven to 10 years to construct," said state Secretary of the Environment Jamie Hoyte. "And we fully expect construction probably won't begin until 1990 or so."

The board's votes on the Deer Island recommendations were nearly unanimous: only Winthrop representative Peggy Riley dissented.

Those recommendations mean work on final environmental impact studies for the state and federal governments will go forward, using Deer Island as the probable home of the new court-ordered plants.

The immediate effect on Winchester and 44 of the communities involved will be hardly noticeable. Little will change in the physical systems for sewage disposal until the new plants are built.

The most noticeable effect right now will be the increase in the amount the town will pay the MWRA for wholesale water and sewer costs. The cost hikes will begin in July, for the next fiscal year.

"The costs of operation and maintenance will go up about 15 percent a year," explained Charles Lyons, an Arlington Selectman and member of the MWRA Board of Directors.

"We have to spend $25 million on the East Boston pumping station and another $25 million on the existing Deer Island plant, right away, just to get them working properly," Lyons said.

In addition, the MWRA already needs at least $21 million in operation costs.

Beyond the 745 Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) employees it adopted, the MWRA is under court orders to increase its staff to make up for cuts made under Prop. 2½, at a cost of almost $5 million.

And the MWRA will no longer receive a $15.7 million state subsidy which the MDC received each year, Lyons said, so that amount will have to be made up in the wholesale water and sewer rates, too.

For homeowners, those wholesale increases will eventually be reflected in increases in the semi-annual water and sewer bills the town sends out.

But the biggest impact on homeowners' pocketbooks could be delays caused by legal challenges.

And Winthrop has already taken steps to take the matter to court, anticipating the MWRA board's decision.

"I got notice of a suit today from Winthrop," Lyons said just after the press conference.

Peggy Riley, the one member of the MWRA who voted against the recommendation, spoke for her fellow Winthrop residents.

She said their community is already overburdened with regional facilities: the current sewage treatment plant, the Deer Island House of Corrections, and nearby Logan Airport.

MWRA board members acknowledged the burdens Winthrop already has.

But, they said, the Deer Island site chosen over Long, Nut and Moon Island — is the most practical.

"Construction and operation costs for the plant would be lower at Deer Island," said MWRA board member John Carroll of Norwood.

He said the board also considered the ease of building the plant, and means of lessening its impact.

Lyons said later that cost and reliability were the factors he considered.

"There was about a 5 percent difference in construction costs between simply building a primary treatment plant on Deer Island, and building both the primary and secondary plants there," he said.

Board members promised to press for measures to lessen the impact on Winthrop residents.

They voted to barge construction materials to Deer Island instead of trucking them in over Winthrop's two access roads, and to give hiring preference to Winthrop residents in both the construction and plant operation jobs.

MWRA board members also voted to have staffers prepare plans for the new treatment plants on the assumption that the House of Corrections will not be there.

Board chairman James Hoyte said the MWRA has assurances from both Governor Michael Dukakis and Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn that they will cooperate in relocating the jail.

Peace Corps Volunteers Honored

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh joined with other state and federal officials in honoring many recent and future Peace Corps volunteers at a recent luncheon at the Massachusetts State House. A gubernatorial proclamation and a joint House-Senate resolution were unveiled declaring 1986, the 25th anniversary of the Peace Corps, as the Year of the Peace Corps.

"Massachusetts is one of the leading sources of Peace Corps volunteers in the nation," said Whip. "And considering that it was the Commonwealth's own John F. Kennedy who created the agency by executive decree, it is only fitting that Massachusetts be the first to recognize the Peace Corps' Silver Anniversary."

In its 25 year history, the Peace Corps has been a continuous beacon of self-help and hope to its host countries. Moreover, it has quietly provided a constructive outlet for many of America's idealists of all ages, and has represented this nation to millions around the world as a country of caring and compassionate people.

1986 will bring many more opportunities to recall the Peace Corps' successes and to renew its mission. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is proud to be among the first to call the nation's attention to this special anniversary, concluded Saltmarsh.

League Members Attend Harvard Conference

Members of the Winchester League of Women Voters, Carole Beals, Jeanette Baird, and Marie Yager, recently joined league representatives from all New England to train in techniques of nuclear negotiation and crisis control at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

The League of Women Voters of Massachusetts and the Nuclear Negotiation Project, Harvard Law School, presented a workshop in direct response to the newly raised question about the risk of nuclear war. "Regardless of the number of weapons in the arsenals, are we prepared to prevent an accidental nuclear war?"

"While arms control talks are stalled in Geneva, League members today can speak to support a system of worldwide military crisis control designed to prevent what everyone fears most — a crisis or low-level conflict that, through accident, misunderstanding, miscalculation, or misplaced pride and ambition, escalates to nuclear confrontation," stated LWV president Susan Shaer.

Dr. William L. Ury, director of the Nuclear Negotiating Project, was the keynote speaker at the seminar. Dr. Ury is the co-author of the best-selling book, Getting to Yes, and the author of newly released Beyond the Hotline.

"Negotiation and crisis control does not replace or supercede League traditional efforts such as fostering open trade, supporting the United Nations and limiting and reducing armaments to prevent conflict," explained Gail O'Reilly, president of the League of Women Voters of Winchester.

"These efforts are vital components of global security, but still cannot guarantee that crisis and low-level conflicts will not develop,"

Hospice Care Has New Director

Edward Dolan, former administrative director of Hospice Care Inc. and executive director of Hospice of Middlesex East, has been named executive director of Hospice Care Inc.

At the agency's annual meeting

O'Reilly said, "Plans for crisis control add another dimension to the League's historic positions."

League participants in the seminar are prepared to speak about these plans in their local communities to describe how crisis control centers could work and how they can prevent crisis from happening.

Swimming in a Hammock, Splashing in the Pool or Camping in the Woods

Swimming in a hammock, splashing in the pool or camping in the woods, summer fun often occurs in the neighborhood of pesky insects. Young children, the most likely victims of insect pests, can be spared irritation when their parents protect them adequately, administer first aid for minor bites and recognize symptoms that call for emergency care.

"While it's nearly impossible to go through a New England summer without getting an insect bite, there are several simple preventive measures that do make a difference," says Dr. Mariette Murphy, acting director of Emergency Services at The Children's Hospital in Boston.

Staying away from still water and wooded areas and remaining indoors during insects' prime feeding times — dawn and dusk — decrease the risk of bites.

Applying insect repellent on all exposed areas of skin also helps.

"Infants are especially irritated by insect bites and stings because their bodies have not yet developed a tolerance for certain common allergens," says Murphy.

To help protect them, parents should clothe infants fully when going outside and cover the crib or the stroller with fine netting.

When a child has been bitten or stung, it is important to recognize signs of a severe allergic reaction, most commonly caused by bees, wasps, or hornets.

Allergic reactions develop rapidly and can affect the entire body. They include severe swelling and itching, breathing difficulty, hives, dizziness, and shock.

If the child has a known allergy to stinging insects and has been given an emergency self-treatment kit by a physician, the antidote — epinephrine — should be administered immediately.

Insects need not ruin the summer fun. By knowing how to treat minor bites and stings and when to seek medical help, families can have one up on the battle against the bugs.

Toxic Shock Is Better Understood

Medical science has made progress identifying the cause of toxic shock syndrome, a rare disease that mostly afflicts menstruating women, according to a report from Boston University Medical Center.

An increase in the number of toxic shock cases was first recognized in 1977. By 1980, when the number of case peaked at almost 900, scientists linked the disease to the use of tampons by menstruating women.

Further research resulted in the withdrawal of Rely tampons from the market.

Researchers discovered that fibers in Rely tampons absorbed magnesium, a mineral that normally stops bacteria from producing the disease-linked toxin.

The syndrome is caused by a bacterium called Staphylococcus aureus, which produces a powerful toxin. Symptoms of the disease include fever, a skin rash on the palms and soles of the feet, and a sudden drop in blood pressure that can lead to shock.

Two fibers used in tampons, polyester foam and polyacrylate rayon, have been linked to toxin production.

Although about 75 percent of all menstruating women use tampons, few have been stricken by toxic shock syndrome. According to the report, researchers believe some women are genetically susceptible to the disease.

If diagnosed early and properly treated, the disease can be cured. Mild cases may even clear up on their own, but serious cases can develop rapidly, sometimes causing kidney failure, coma and death in a matter of hours.

Paul Hamel of Taft dr. and Rob Medwar of Ridge st., both 19, say they enjoy the job because they can get outdoors and listen to the radio. "It's nothing too strenuous," says Moros.

Owner Rogers obviously runs a tight ship. In the basement is a locker full of red, white and blue Domino's T-shirts next to a washer and dryer. The shop issues all its employees uniforms and keeps them clean.

The pizza supplies arrive fresh — from tomato sauce to soft pizza dough — from a Connecticut center. In New England, though, canned mushrooms are the rule.

Manager Pat Wunder says people complain if they see fresh mushrooms in cooked form. They just don't like the shriveled aspect they take on.

"I used fresh mushrooms in Louisiana because that's what (customers) wanted," he says. "But over here, canned mushrooms go over better."

Besides, fresh mushrooms require a lot of quality control, he explains. Because they're fragile and can easily turn brown, they have to be purchased every other day or so.

Domino's company president, Tom Monaghan, is a 45-year-old dynamo and all-American success story who recently bought the Detroit Tigers.

And the firm is growing like gangbusters, with 1,000 new franchises slated for opening during the next year. According to Rogers, projected sales may top $1.5 billion nationwide.

Competition and the American Way seem to inspire the company through and through. There's even a nationwide contest for the fastest pizza maker. To get a Domino gold medal, someone must be able to shape, slap, spin and sauce 20 pizza bases in five minutes.

"We can usually make a 12" pizza in about 20 seconds," says manager Wunder.

Rogers himself often puts in seven-day weeks. "It's pretty hard as an independent businessman to work any less than that," he says. "I'll be in here seven days a week, 12 hours a day for the first two weeks."

"Don't squish my green peppers," he calls to a deliveryman. All in a day's work.

Warren. She said MCAD spokesman Franklin Young told the committee that the state mandates fair housing committees have a say in various aspects of town housing issues.

"He said we should serve on other committees that deal with housing and that we must be part of any ad hoc committees or advisory committees," said Warren.

Warren said she had been notified by the Housing Authority that it had voted last week to include the fair housing needs.

Recently, several members met with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination. Warren described the meeting as "informative."

"I think that meeting served to clarify a number of things in view of the committee's role and in the representation of the town," said housing group on the advisory panel.

She added that fair housing members expected to draw up a six-month plan of action and would likely consider revising outdated statistical data on local housing. The committee also plans to work with local realtors to "improve public relations" by providing housing information brochures for new residents.

"The committee is interested in more than just statistics. We're looking to keep the community informed about housing and housing policies in Winchester."

The committee, she said, has also taken a giant step forward toward better relations with local boards.

"I think the last six months have been worthwhile. . . We've increased our understanding of ourselves and of other boards in town."

"What the CAC will do depends a good deal on what the Housing Authority will recommend we do. But I certainly think we can work hand-in-hand for the benefit of the town," she added.

While admitting that often an advisory group is little more than a figurehead, Warren was optimistic that this new group would assume an active role in local housing issues.

Man Killed In Accident

A 23-year-old former Winchester resident was killed July 22 when his motorcycle crashed into a car in Arlington.

Wayne F. Simpson, who lived on Parker rd. until last year, was thrown 33 feet onto a lawn when his motorcycle slammed into the side of an automobile on the hilly road.

Simpson's Honda Magna V65 impacted with the car's driver-side door. The driver, Dixie Watt of Park ave., had begun a left hand turn into a Park ave. driveway.

Watt, a nurse, left her car to attempt CPR, but Simpson could not be revived.

Watt suffered cuts, bruises and minor head injuries. She was taken to Lahey Clinic for treatment and was released.

Her two children, aged 6 months and 6 years, were shaken by the incident but did not suffer serious injuries. Both were in restraining seats. They were treated at Symmes Hospital and released.

What To Learn

Juggling Act:

Seminar Tells How Men And Women Can Deal With Family, Career, Relationships

Story And Photos By William B. Haynes

During the late '60s and continuing through the '70s, a combination of factors, among them The Civil Rights Movement, Women's Lib, and a rapidly escalating inflation rate combined to create a job market suddenly inundated with women.

As women juggled careers and family life for the first time on a large scale, fresh ideas were tried, and subsequently, new knowledge and experiences were gained by the positive results as well as the often painful negative byproducts.

The divorce rate soared, and many women found themselves the sole provider in a one-parent family.

There have been many studies in the past decade on the effect of a working mother on her husband, her children, and herself.

Balancing work and family life is often a difficult task, but it is not an impossible one.

Kay Apgar and Ann Marie Sigestad of Family Service of Greater Boston will share the most recent discoveries, answer questions, and give helpful advice to both men and working women on this issue.

The seminars are free, and are held at the Family Service of Greater Boston office, at 175 Bedford Street in Lexington. Two workshops are set.

The first is an evening workshop for both fathers and mothers that runs 7:30 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 7, and will be hosted by Kay Apgar.

The second is a lunch-time workshop for mothers, on Friday, Aug. 9, noon to 1:30 p.m. This second workshop is led by Ann Marie Sigestad.

"One thing we do is talk about who the working parent is," explains Kay Apgar. "And in that portion of the presentation, we talk about what the statistics are for women going back to work, and the percentage of women that are working, which is about 54 percent of mothers with children under age 18.

"And most of them are employed full time. It used to be an erroneous belief that most of them work part-time," she says.

"Some do, but increasingly, more work full-time, and two out of three work because they need to make money. A dual income family is very common now," says Apgar.

"I see that balancing is more or less complicated depending on how much satisfaction you get out of work, and how fulfilling it is," says Ann Marie Sigestad.

"If it is a job that you don't like going to, it can increase the amount of energy that you burn up. Under these circumstances, it's just the income that is significant.

"If you were not getting either rewards personally, or rewards back monetarily, then the balancing becomes even more difficult, especially if you are not happy with your family life." — Ann Marie Sigestad

"If you were not getting either rewards personally, or rewards back monetarily, then the balancing becomes even more difficult, especially if you are not happy with your family life," says Sigestad.

"Then you are trying to balance one or two things that you aren't getting any satisfaction out of."

"You were talking about satisfaction. Job satisfaction is certainly related to self-esteem," says Apgar.

"The degree to which a working mother feels she enjoys her job, that it is gratifying and fulfilling to her, to that degree she will raise her self-esteem. And the research is indicating that mothers who are employed outside the home have a higher level of self-esteem than mothers who are not, and an even higher level of longevity."

"There's a real concrete sense of progress that you get when you have a paid job," explains Apgar. "whereas a woman at home taking care of her house or her child has very little way to measure it. People often take it for granted. The attitude often is: 'This is your workplace; the home, this is what you are expected to do; take care of it.'"

The perspectives of mothers trying to both work at home and outside of the home has to change in focus from the minute detail to the grand scheme.

Sigestad says, "There has to be quite a transition from what was the measurement for women; how well your kids look, and how well your house looks, etc."

"This is one of the things that one needs to see differently if one is balancing work and family life."

"How clean your house is has to take a different and lesser priority generally if you are working and doing other things. You must be able to feel ok about letting some things go," Sigestad says.

"One of the techniques that I use," she says, "is the priority of neglect, as well as a priority of importance. This is a needed addition, because with the priority of importance you keep on going down and still feel that you haven't gotten to everything."

"With the priority of neglect, you do it by plan and it relieves your guilt. You plan to forget some things."

This policy of neglect has been having some success, says Apgar.

"According to the Wellesley College Center for Research on Women, they are finding that fathers are contributing only a tiny bit more to running the household," says Kay Apgar.

"Women are still carrying the lion's share. In families where the mother is working, fathers are spending roughly three hours more in child care a week."

"What Wellesley College also found was that there was a time in the sixties when women had a double load, and were still trying to keep up the perfectionist housekeeping standards," she says.

"Now, it is balancing out somewhat in the home, not because men are helping more, but because women are doing less."

"Apparently, they worked it out."

"But, I also read in a couple of studies that some of the men are really quite disappointed in how things are working out," she says. "It's often a source of conflict in a marriage."

Sigestad elaborates, "I think what happens is that couples will often talk about housework, dishes, laundry etc., and all of these are concrete things that need to be done, but sometimes their needs and the needs of each other are not discussed."

"One of the hopes is to be able to have people talk about priority setting. Not just who does what, but what the needs are."

"A woman may feel like she is not meeting the needs of her husband if she doesn't make him lunch every day, even though the husband may not think this is important. They must need to sit down and discuss things."

There is no time for wasting, the women say. There are so many jobs, feelings, and schedules to deal with, there is no time for useless activities.

Sigestad believes a key in the balancing act is to make the time, "quality time."

She explains, "If we are going to meet children's needs, and if women are working full time, then we need to do a lot about the time we do spend with them. Otherwise the children are really going to be shown deprivation."

"How you spend your time together, what you talk about, becomes a lot more crucial if you have less time. You have to make sure that you offer to your child time that you would have spent in front of the t.v., instead of time that you and your husband would have had together."

"When I run these workshops with young mothers," says Apgar, "they often say that the couple relationship is put last. It receives lowest priority, mainly because they are taking care of all the urgent, concrete kinds of tasks."

"Mothers of pre-school age children have to give an enormous amount of time taking care of those children, and that is considered the most stressful parenting period because of the full time care," Apgar says.

"It is important for these parents to talk to other parents to gain advice and help. Very often you can get support from other parents, both emotionally, and in a more concrete way by having them substitute for you in taking care of your kids."

"These days, being a superparent is not the answer, it is impossible, and just does not work. Teaching the kids how to help you, and teaching your husband how to assist you are important steps to a successful career and a successful mother."

"It is important not to try to do it all yourself. Share the load with others."

The workshops Aug. 7 and Aug. 9 at the Family Service of Greater Boston office could be a good opportunity to share experiences in balancing career and family, and to gain valuable tips and advice, say the women.

Although there is no fee, enrollment is limited. Anyone interested can register by Aug. 2, by calling 862-2128.

What's Free Getting Fit For Free

By Judith Harlan

Summer is here. Daylight savings time allows us long, barbecue-filled evenings, and some people I know are already working on this year's tan.

It's time to get active again, to squeeze into last summer's shorts and swear that you'll never again let winter's dumplings develop into summer's dimples. It's time to get healthy and fit, and here are some offers from Freebies Magazine to help you join in the summer activities.

Aspercreme Sample

Muscular aches, unfortunately, go with summer fun, with bike rides, hikes and volleyball. So does this freebie. It's a 0.5-ounce sample of Aspercreme, an analgesic cream rub designed for aches, arthritis and rheumatism.

The cream is odorless, so you can walk the streets without advertising your aches and pains. And it contains no aspirin. Its active ingredient is salicyl.

The manufacturers of Spercreme, Thompson Medical Co. Inc., assure you that it is a clinically proven rub, that it relieves pain and that it's fast-acting.

It comes in an aluminum packet. Your trial size would be a handy thing to carry in your purse or pocket for a little first aid on the road if you need it.

Directions: Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ask for: Aspercreme.

Mail to: Thompson Medical Co. Inc., 919 Third Ave., New York, NY 10022.

Vitamin Sample

Did you get your CH3(Ch2)26CH2OH today? Now's your chance.

If you're wondering what this long chemical formula means, then you haven't been reading your health and fitness publications lately. It's Octacosanol, still asking what that is? Then you really haven't been reading. Octacosanol is an amino acid that recently found a place in health trends as an energy booster.

With this offer you'll receive a sample packet of three tablets that contain 800 milligrams each of pure, natural Guarana and Octacosanol plus excipients (inert substances) and binders necessary to produce it in tablet form.

The Guarana in the tablets, which also is a new name to many of us, is Guaranine Catechannic Acid. It's touted as a mental energy boost.

Directions: Send 50 cents, postage and handling.

Ask for: BOOST.

Mail to: BOOST, 6856 Galley Road, Colorado Springs, CO 80915.

Don't Feel Good? 'Wholeness' Class May Help, Says Judith Recknagle

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

"Healing the whole person, not just the symptom," is the purpose of holistic medicine, says Dr. Judith Recknagle, a holistic physician.

Recknagle will address the topic, "Healing With Herbs" at a lecture on Monday, July 29, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the YWCA in Cambridge.

How do herbs heal?

Recknagle will discuss the benefits of herbs and give examples of herbs that are good for some illnesses.

"I don't recommend herbs for serious illnesses. The bottom line is herbs improve nutrition. They are a preventive medicine," explained Recknagle, just like quitting smoking before contracting cancer.

What are herbs?

"Herbs are really food, they are trees and plants," said Recknagle. The use of herbs to alleviate pain is not a scientific breakthrough. Herbs have been used for centuries to cure illnesses.

"In nature there are natural recurring plants (herbs) beneficial to the human body," said Recknagle, adding that "herbs are not miracles and should only be used temporarily."

Recknagle believes the body is naturally healthy and when a person gets sick it is something they have done. For example, a student might chronically panic about exams, becoming hyper and nervous before every exam. This emotional condition could trigger a physical illness such as severe stomach cramps. Where did the sickness originate? In his head, says Recknagle.

In this case, Recknagle would prescribe an herb called valerian root, a sedative that helps to relax the nervous system. The drug valium is derived from this root and is much more potent than the herb itself. Valerian root, however, is natural valium and not habit forming.

At the Health Sign Center in Roslindale where Recknagle conducts her private practice, classes are offered to the public in holistic medicine. She says four components are addressed; nutrition, lifestyle, family and emotional health.

Recknagle believes that a person's emotional state directly affects his physical health. And this is why it is important to treat the whole person, not just the body.

Learning how to reduce stress is another facet of the class. Stress reduction techniques are demonstrated to "bring about the release of tension," explains Recknagle.

She became interested in the growing field of holistic medicine after living for a year on an Indian reservation in Northern Nevada.

Working as a commissioned officer in this oppressed town, "I realized how important lifestyle was," said Recknagle. Diabetes and gallbladder diseases due to malnutrition were only some of the illnesses Recknagle encountered.

Depression and alcoholism among the Indians was rampant.

Recknagle realized the importance of proper nutrition and how this alone can affect a person's physical health.

Back home in Boston, Recknagle encounters patients with similar problems. But, she believes people are more concerned with nutrition than they were 10 years ago.

She says most of her patients seek her advice because "they don't feel good." The reasons vary. Boredom, depression and family problems are common. These symptoms directly affect a patient's physical health, said Recknagle.

Every facet of a person's life must be good in order to feel good, said Recknagle, adding that the purpose of holistic medicine is to deal with every aspect of the person. If a person is successful in business and has a tumultuous family life, problems undoubtedly arise.

By looking at the "whole" person, his work, family and friends, the root of the physical pain can be diagnosed and often alleviated through the use of herbs and stress reduction techniques.

"Many physicians have not studied it (holistic medicine) because it is new. The public is more interested than the doctors," said Recknagle.

For more information regarding classes in holistic medicine, call 323-0329. The Health Sign Center is located at 1408 Center Street in Roslindale.

What To Do

Walden Thoreau's Is Popular

BY ANNE MARIE REIDY

Kids cannonballing off the dock with great whoops and hollers splash the sunbathers stretched along the beach.

Silver flickers dance across the water, making the rowboats and the people trout fishing from them seem like mirages.

Visitors spot ferns and wild blueberry bushes, oak, hickory, and birch trees, chickadees and kingfishers.

Others amble toward a pile of stones marking the site where a one-room wooden cabin once stood.

The stones were left by pilgrims of sorts, for the cabin — no longer there — was for two years the home of the most famous wanderer through these woods, Henry David Thoreau.

Nearly every American schoolchild has read a bit of Thoreau's classic book, Walden.

It arose from two years Thoreau spent living deep in the woods surrounding Walden Pond — 1845-1847 — on land loaned to him by his friend, Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Still suffering from the death of his older brother three years earlier, Thoreau, then 28, began building his one-room cabin in March, and moved to the woods July 4.

Thoreau spent his time studying natural history, reading, writing, and gardening in his bean field.

He did the first complete depth-sounding of the kettle pond, disproving the old myth that the pond is bottomless. (It is more than 100 feet deep in some places.)

Thoreau liked the solitude Walden provided, but made frequent trips into town — his mother did his wash for him. And he often had visitors at his tiny cabin.

"I had three chairs in my house," Thoreau wrote. "One for solitude; two for friendship; three for society."

Thoreau finished his experiment and moved back into Concord in the fall of 1847.

In 1863, after years of writing, lecturing, and working for abolition of slavery and other causes, he died of tuberculosis at age 44.

The land around Walden Pond remained in private hands — the Emerson, Forbes and Heywood families — until 1922, when the families deeded it to the state. It

"I went to the woods because I wished to live deliberately, to front only the essential facts of life, and see if I could not learn what it had to teach, and not, when I came to die, discover that I had not lived."

Henry David Thoreau, Walden.

What To Do

In 1863, after years of writing, lecturing, and working for abolition of slavery and other causes, he died of tuberculosis at age 44.

Pond: Hideout Hangout

first became a public reservation, and in 1965, a National Historic Landmark.

The original foundation and hearth was uncovered in 1945 by a Lincoln man, and properly marked.

But, over the years, visitors have expressed disappointment that they couldn't see the cabin itself. Thoreau took it down when he moved back to town.

So, this year, the state Dept. of Environmental Management (DEM), which controls the Walden Pond reservation, decided to build a replica.

The $7,000 wooden cabin sits just beside the parking lot for the reservation. It was dedicated July 12, in a sunrise ceremony.

Visitors to the pond can see the replica, and take the trail to the original site of the cabin, halfway around the pond.

They can join hundreds of others in leaving a stone on the cairn in Thoreau's memory. But they'd better carry in a stone from elsewhere on the pond, as visitors long ago have found all the stones in the area where the cabin once stood.

There's much more to do at Walden's 411 reserve: swimming, fishing, and boating, along with guided walks regularly scheduled by DEM. (Call 727-3188 for information.)

All activities are free, but there is a $3 a day charge to park at DEM's parking lot. It is more than worthwhile; parking along the road is illegal, and both Concord and Lincoln, which border the reservation, ticket daily.

Walden is open from 8:30 until half an hour after sunset every day.

A lifeguarded beach and bathhouse are open 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. through Labor Day.

Visitors can bring their own canoes or rowboats, or fish from the shoreline anywhere except the designated beach areas.

Picnicking is encouraged; alcohol and barbecues or campfires are not allowed, and mounted officers regularly patrol the area.

In recent years, there has been a move by some to limit or ban swimming and other heavy use of the pond, which they fear is harming the environment.

But DEM staffers say Walden is still one of the purest lakes in New England, and that even in Thoreau's day, local folks made use of the pond for recreation.

So, for now at least, residents and tourists can continue to enjoy Walden, just as Thoreau did, for both solitude and society.

Skin Care Routine And Makeup Change in Fall

Fall is a fine time to reevaluate your makeup routines, according to renowned skin care expert, Lia Schorr.

- Your tan has faded. Choose a slightly pinker foundation to offset post-summer sallowness.

- Makeup artists are forever praising the creamy bisque complexion. Many actually believe in using a foundation to lighten the complexion as much as possible.

- It's a mistake to think that a blusher can give you the glow of a tan. Blushers should be used very sparingly — mostly to draw attention to the eyes, not to the cheeks.

- For a luminous, sun-drenched illusion, use a warm copper shadow on the outer half of your eyelids.

- After the summer, the skin under the eyes is at its driest. Tuck a tiny jar of rich eye cream in your pocketbook and pat on gently with your pinky at least three times a day.

- Now's the time to get into a leg-waxing routine. If you keep it up, with a waxing once every six weeks, you'll have noticeably less leg hair come next summer.

- Just because summer's over doesn't mean your lips no longer need the benefits of a Vitamin E stick or sunblock balm.

- Here's a year-round beauty note: Tissues should not be used on the face. Tissue is paper, and paper is composed of wood fibers, which, over time, can irritate the skin. Cotton is a better bet.

Fall Fashion Sketchbook '85

Beauty Of Pearls Is Timeless

For fall, 1985 fashion designers are in love with simplicity — a simplicity of line, drama achieved through understatement. This elegant, very sophisticated look relies strongly upon real jewelry to enhance without overshadowing, and embellish without fuss.

For this reason, many American designers have chosen to rely upon fine jewelry's radiant quality to make an important statement about the fineness of the clothing, its fabric and tailoring.

Of all fine jewelry, cultured pearls are particular favorites because they are both subtle in their appeal and sensuous. Their rich, lustrous beauty provides a perfect counterpoint for the muted tones (sometimes sparked by brights) and draped or spare shapes of fall daywear.

They are an eye-catching contrast to the iridescent velvets and sleek silks which characterize many designers' evening wear collections.

Cultured pearls' timeless beauty is a classic adjunct to a well-dressed woman's wardrobe, especially this year when nothing looks as right as a matinee or opera length strand of graduated or matched cultured pearls over a slim, calf-length sweater dress, or an elegantly draped silk blouse worn with a long lean skirt. Cultured pearl earrings, as always, add a perfect finishing touch.

Some of fall's oversized jackets, paired with slim, knee-skimming skirts, demand a dramatic pin, worn on the lapel. Among the jewelry designs for fall are spectacular pins combining sprays of gold with a multitude of cultured pearls or fresh water pearls, which are currently very much in vogue.

Slim pants are plentifully in evidence for fall '85. Their clean lines and well-bred good looks are enhanced by the strategic addition of cultured pearl jewelry — a choker at the open neck of a silk shirt; a classic matinee length strand of cultured pearls worn with that other thoroughbred classic, the cashmere sweater; or simply a pair of go-everywhere cultured pearl earrings.

For evening, the look is dressier, but drama still prevails. Red silk evening pajamas look striking worn with a four-strand matinee length necklace of cultured pearls.

Whether for dressing up or dressing down, cultured pearl jewelry adds an unmistakable touch of class to autumn's clothing — classics with a dramatic difference which demand only the best!

Suits Shift Over To Daytime Dresses

Skirted suits have long been the business uniform for women, but now a fresh alternative is being offered — dresses.

A dress has many advantages. In fact, it is the most versatile garment a woman can own. By simply adding the right accessories, a woman can go from a business meeting to a cocktail party in the same dress.

With its one-step ease, a dress allows the busy career woman to eliminate the time-consuming chore of mixing and matching. And it can be far less costly than a suit and blouse.

In fabrics, knits are the most practical. They provide warmth on those crisp autumn days and are ideal for the executive who travels since they're virtually wrinkle-free.

Lengths this fall are appropriate for office wear. According to ready-to-wear merchandise manager Sarah Olson of Susie's Casuals, a national chain for the contemporary woman, the season's lengths are noticeably longer.

She advises, "Dresses with full skirts should be worn about mid-calf and slim skirts should fall a little below the knee."

Although fall fashions have a definite menswear influence, dresses tend to be more body-conscious. "Silhouettes are narrow rather than boxy," notes Ms. Olson. Popular features include cinched waistlines and "fanny wraps" (sashes which hug the hips).

Traditional colors like gray, blue and wine work well for the office, but fashion-minded women might try adding a little interest to their wardrobes with bluish-green or cinnamon shades.

For women in the work force, appearance can be nearly as important as intelligence, drive and skill. A smartly designed dress, in lieu of a suit, adds a certain flair while still projecting a business image.

OUTSIDE WALLS

When buying a home, one of your future maintenance considerations must be the exterior walls. Brick and stone walls are the most durable and maintenance-free. They'll withstand the test of time. The historic castles of Europe are good examples of durability. They resist the effects of weather and are fire and termite proof. The primary disadvantage is the cost of construction. Cement block walls generally cost less to install; however, many people do not consider them esthetically appealing and they might need painting. Wood walls and siding, including lap siding, shingles and shakes, are less expensive to install. Although less durable than masonry, they are easy to work with and are an excellent insulation material. However, painting or restaining is required and wood is subject to termite and water damage.

Aluminum siding is impervious to insects and resist most weather damage. It also resists fire and rotting and is sometimes cheaper than wood siding. However, it can fade and dent and should be grounded in the event of electrical storms.

WantedBlackpowder Shooters

IF YOU put putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North-South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with 38 call rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and a 1,800 lb. full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a 4x8 cardboard backer at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over - from Maine to Rhode Island to New York - but more are from eastern Massachusetts.
